KING FLEES BULGAR REVOLT

DE VALERA AND COLLINS AGREE ON IRISH PEACE

Republicans Get 4 Cabinet Jobs.

DUBLIN, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—An agreement making possible the holding of Irish elections in June and the formation of a coalition cabinet was reached today by the leaders of the two political factions in southern Ireland and was unanimously approved by their respective followers in the Dail Eireann.

MICHAEL COLLINS.

Meanwhile the religious warring factions were carrying death and destruction into all sections of the six counties of Ulster. Battles in Belfast resulted in eight deaths during the day and five or six more persons were killed in the surrounding districts.

Collins and De Valera Sign.

Michael Collins, head of the Free State provisional government, and Eamon de Valera, the Republican leader, arrived at the agreement after all possibility of reaching any semblance of reconciliation had been virtually abandoned.

EAMON DE VALERA

The minor points of divergence concerning the proportion of representation in the ministry were waived by the agreement and the question as to the issues to be decided by the June elections was ignored. In the preelection campaign, those in favor of the Anglo-Irish treaty establishing the Free state will be free, under the terms of the agreement, to say that the election will be a ratification of the treaty and those opposed to the treaty may deny that proposition.

Will Offer Coalition Ticket.

The actual terms of the agreement correspond closely with those put forward by Harry C. Boland, for some time representative of De Valera in the United States, who represented the republican section of the peace committee appointed a few days ago by the Dail.

There will be a coalition panel presented to the electors. It will contain the names of candidates representing both sides at their present strength in the Dail and will be recommended to the electors as the ticket of the Sinn Fein organization.

Wherever there is no contest the present members will come back. Contests cannot wholly be avoided, however, because the labor party will nominate candidates and theoretically any other body can do the same. But it is generally believed there will be many uncontested constituencies and the election will almost reproduce the last one, it is thought, when unopposed returns were the rule.

Republicans in Cabinet.

After the election has been held there will be a coalition cabinet of eleven members, including the president and the minister of defense. The remainder will be composed of five pro-treaty members and four republicans, the president being empowered to decide the offices that each will hold. In the more distant future, it is provided by the agreement that if the coalition government should find it necessary to dissolve a general election will be held as soon as possible.

On the face of it, the republican conference obtained everything it had asked for, but yielded on two points, not insisting on formally barring the treaty as an issue and assenting to the election being for only the twenty-six counties of southern Ireland.

Both sides expressed satisfaction with the result but doubtless it will be a disappointment to the British cabinet, since it tends to unite all the Irish sections in all future negotiations on the treaty and on the constitution and conduct of the Irish government generally. It is generally believed here that unity in the Irish army likely will follow.

Many Slain in Ulster War.

BELFAST, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—Ulster's bitter religious warfare spread to all corners of the six northern counties of Ireland tonight. An armed gang seized the watchman

MR. LUGUBRIOUS BLUE AND MR. SMILEY GLADD DISCUSS THE SITUATION

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mr. Gladd—Why, what's the matter, Mr. Blue? You seem kind o' depressed.

Mr. Blue—Matter! Everything's the matter! I don't know what the country's coming to. Nothing but graft, dishonesty, lawlessness, scandal, and violence whichever way you look. Investigate anything and you find graft. Where is the old fashioned honesty? Is the national conscience still sleeping off its jag? I tell you, we're going straight to the dogs.

Mr. Gladd—Don't take such a gloomy view of things. Business is better than last year and still improving. And, remember, you read only about the lawless. The millions who are living straight don't do anything to get into the papers.

Mr. Blue—All right, jolly yourself into being optimistic if you like. But mark my words, conditions in this country are terrible. Read any paper and what do you see? Labor organizations ruled by gunmen and ex-convicts. Decent workingmen afraid to raise a finger for fear of the consequences. A reign of terrorism and intimidation, bombs, murders, and the torch! Murderers, bandits, vamps, and morons in the public eye. I tell you, everything is terrible!

Mr. Gladd—Well, Mr. Blue, if things are so bad you can't improve them by laying down on the job. Why don't you help do something to improve them?

Mr. Blue—I'm plumb discouraged. I might as well end it all. Everywhere I look it's indigo. Crooked war contractors who robbed the country when everybody else was suffering and sacrificing, propagandists throwing dust into our eyes, investigations that never get any place, coal strikes that nobody settles, profiteers, bootleggers, lawless respectables, congress floundering around, taxes high. It's too much for me.

Mr. Gladd—Nonsense! We're better off than any country in the world today. Our people are getting better wages and living better, times are improving, taxes are going down. There is little distress in the country and there's lots of room for optimism. Cheer up, Mr. Blue, let's go to the movies.

$20,000,000 U.S. HEIRESS ELOPES

Husband Thinks She Is Victim of "Con" Man.

BY V. DE SANTO.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, May 20.—The American colony was greatly stirred today, when it was learned that a self-styled Scotland Yard detective had inveigled an American bride—a $20,000,000 heiress—to run away with him while her husband was in America on a business trip. The principal characters in the story, which is far from being a romance, and seems to be a money getting scheme, ingeniously planned by the would be detective, are:

JULIA WOODS DAVIES, daughter of William Stone Woods, a wealthy banker of Kansas City, from whom she inherited her millions.

GEORGE W. DAVIES, her husband, a concert singer and music teacher of St. Louis.

CAPT. ZEITUN, who told all his acquaintances confidentially that he was a Scotland Yard detective. This fact is now denied in British embassy circles.

Honeymooning in Rome.

The Davies were married last August in Stamford, Conn. They came directly to Rome for their honeymoon. Mrs. Davies is about 50 years old and Mr. Davies is about 40. Among many friends they made in Rome was Capt. Zeitun. Americans who know him describe him as a Britisher, about 50, born in South Africa, of European parentage, very dark, short, and stocky, with small, dark, protruding eyes, the antithesis of an Adonis, but exceptionally shrewd.

Two months ago Mr. Davies was obliged to go to America to attend to business in connection with his wife's estate. He left his wife at the Hotel Excelsior.

Three weeks after his departure, his wife told her friends that she was going to America to join her husband, and was taking Capt. Zeitun along as secretary. Mr. Davies returned here today in search of his wife.

Wife Has $180,000 in Jewels.

According to information he gathered, it seems that Capt. Zeitun, taking advantage of the husband's absence and the weakness of the wife, who is said to be often under the influence of drugs, told the wife many unpleasant stories concerning her husband until she believed herself to have been betrayed by him and consented to run away with the captain.

For some time the couple have been hiding in London, but it is now believed that they have left England. Meanwhile the wife's trustees refuse to send her an allowance until her husband, who has full power of attorney, joins her. When her trustees last heard from her she was short of funds but she has with her $180,000 worth of jewels.

Captain Seeks Life Income.

Mrs. Davis, according to friends, was induced by Capt. Zeitun to sign a contract engaging him for three years as her secretary at a large salary and also endeavored, unsuccessfully, it is said, to get a large life allowance out of her income. Many other stories are related concerning Capt. Zeitun, such as getting 6,000 lire from a waiter to buy foreign exchange, which he never delivered; his attempt to negotiate unsafe notes for a 500,000 lire loan, and his rather heavy gambling after Mr. Davies' departure.

LETTERS SHOW DAUGHERTY AID "FREED MORSE"

$25,000 Paid; Senate Hears Charges.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—A flat charge that Attorney General Daugherty was employed in conjunction with Thomas B. Felder to get Charles W. Morse out of the Atlanta penitentiary in 1911, and that the "partnership" of the attorney and Felder still exists, to the detriment of the government, was made on the floor of the senate today by Senator Caraway [Ark.], Democrat.

T. H. CARAWAY. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

Senator Caraway produced photostatic copies of alleged documents signed by "H. M. Daugherty" and Felder to sustain his assertion that the attorney general had been retained as counsel along with Felder in the Morse case.

That Bosch Magneto Case.

The second part of the charge by Senator Caraway, that the attorney general was still coöperating with Felder in opposition to the interests of the government, had to do with an alleged attempt on the part of Felder to employ Capt. H. L. Scaife, formerly an army officer, and recently dismissed by Daugherty from the department of justice.

Scaife, in a letter to Congressman Woodruff [Mich.], asserted that Felder had asked him to become an associate counsel in a suit he was bringing to set aside the sale of the Bosch Magneto company's plant by the alien property custodian. Scaife charged that Felder said he was advised by Attorney General Daugherty to see Scaife.

Representative Woodruff said a "very substantial retainer" was offered Scaife.

Letter Signed "Daugherty."

Senator Caraway's demand that Mr. Daugherty resign from the cabinet followed his reading of the following documents, which substantiate, he declared, all charges made against the attorney general.

"Columbus, O., April 30, 1913.—Mr. C. W. Morse, New York City.

"My Dear Sir: I inclose you herewith copy of letter setting forth the contract you made on Aug. 4, 1911, with Mr. Felder, for his services and mine. You will observe that I was correct in the statement that there was a balance due of $25,000, when you were commuted.

"I also hand you a copy of a paper you handed me in the prison some time after that time, and I have today asked Mrs. Daugherty to send to you by express the papers which I got from Harry (Mr. Morris' son, it was explained) and others from time to time, which you spoke to me about.

"As I advised you, I have telegraphed Mr. Felder and written him to meet me there with you next Monday or Tuesday. I will advise you as soon as I have a confirmation from him of this engagement. Yours very truly, (Signed) H. M. DAUGHERTY."

"Contract" Signed by Morse.

The second letter, or contract, which Senator Caraway also had printed in the Congressional Record, says:

"Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 4, 1911.—Mr. C. W. Morse, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Sir: In further relation to the employment of the Hon. H. M. Daugherty and myself, permit me to say that he will undertake to represent you in your civil and criminal matters upon the following basis:

"1. You are to pay the Hon. H. M. Daugherty a retainer of $5,000 and the actual expenses incurred by him in looking after your matters; expenses not to exceed $1,000.

"2. I shall pay such expenses as I may incur in connection therewith.

"3. You are to direct counsel heretofore employed to withdraw your appeal in the habeas corpus proceedings heretofore instituted.

"4. We are to receive, in the event we secure an unconditional pardon or commutation for you, the sum of $25,000, which is to be in full compensation for services rendered in connection with your application for pardon.

Also to Get a Commission.

"5. We are to receive 25 per cent of whatever sums we may be able to recover by compromise or litigation in the matter of the Metropolitan S. S. company, said transaction being fully described in your letter addressed to

Reds Capture Sofia; Street Battles Rage

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, May 21 (Sunday).—A Communist revolution has broken out in Bulgaria, according to reports received in diplomatic circles here. King Boris and members of the government have fled to Varna, the Red flag is flying in Sofia, and street fighting is progressing, the reports say. No other details have been received.

200 KILLED IN RIOT.

Recent dispatches from Sofia and Constantinople indicate there has been a great deal of rioting by the Communists. About two weeks ago Reds threw bombs at the police and in a sharp battle many were killed. A Constantinople message, recently received, said more than 200 Reds were killed in this battle.

The Bulgarians have been dickering with the Turkish Nationalists, who have the support of the Russian soviets.

Last March a bomb was thrown into the courtyard of the American embassy at the Bulgarian capital and at the time the crime was attributed to Communist sympathizers.

The United States minister was again threatened a few days ago.

King Once Abdicated.

The present ruler, King Boris, is the son of former King Ferdinand, who was forced to abdicate after the allied victory in 1918. Boris took the reigns of the government, but also abdicated when a peasant government under the leadership of M. Stamboulisky was set up early in November, 1918. Later Boris was recalled.

Slays Man He Reformed and Gave His Wife

"Big Jack" Burgess, 6 feet tall and with a police record "a mile long," as the police term it, was shot and killed last night by Dan Losee, a saloonkeeper of 5420 Wentworth avenue.

"BIG JACK" BURGESS.

Losee is credited with having thrown out the lifeline to Burgess, taken him "off the street," tried to reform him. In return for this generosity Burgess is said to have cultivated Losee's wife. And when Losee found it out he gave the woman to Burgess, sold his saloon to the woman for $1,000, and cleared out.

Wife Is Returned.

Again, the police say, Burgess was ungrateful. He wrote a note to Losee which said: "Dan, you live with your wife or you are a dead man."

With this note in his pocket Losee buckled on his pistol and went gunning. He found Burgess in the saloon of Henry O'Brien at 3530 South Halsted street. To Burgess he said:

"I think I'll just kill you."

And he forthwith shot down "Big Jack," who loomed above him some foot or more.

Crowd Beats Him.

Following the shooting a dozen or fifteen men in the saloon set upon Losee and beat him severely. He was rescued from them by Policemen William Evans and Daniel Donahue, who took him to the Deering street station, where he told his story.

"I had known Burgess for a number of years," he said. "I knew him before he was sent to the penitentiary at Joliet in 1915, and I've known him since.

"Well, he's dead, and I'm a white man and I'm ready to take what's coming to me."

"I followed him in and pulled the revolver out," he added. "He was hiding behind a stove. I waved the gun and told the men in there to make way and they all fell back and made a lane right to him for me. He started for me when he saw I had him cornered and I fired. As he fell the others closed in on me. I wouldn't have hurt them if I could—I didn't want any one but Burgess."

POINCARE SNUB STIRS ANGER OF LLOYD GEORGE

British Chief Gets a Vast Welcome.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 20.—Premier Poincare snubbed Prime Minister Lloyd George this morning by not appearing at the Gare de Lyon or even sending a high foreign office official. The British ambassador, Lord Hardinge, met the prime minister. The British delegates did not conceal their amazement at M. Poincare's absence.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

"The French premier suggested meeting Mr. Lloyd George today and had an opportunity for an hour's talk, but he ignored it," they said.

Mr. Lloyd George remained in his compartment and did not alight from the train. He drew the curtains when French photographers tried to snap him through the window.

LLOYD GEORGE ANGRY

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, May 20.—Prime Minister Lloyd George has returned from Genoa furiously angry with France and French politics, it was learned tonight. He is of the opinion that under its present leadership France is heading straight for disaster, and if it insists on sending its soldiers further into Germany it will be completely isolated and in danger of bankruptcy.

RAYMOND POINCARE.

Mr. Lloyd George is expected to speak very plainly about the Anglo-French relations when he makes his statement to parliament. These relations are more strained today than they have been since King Edward initiated the entente.

Reaches Point of Insult.

The French hostility to Mr. Lloyd George has reached the point of insult, the British say. Premier Poincare not only failed to meet him on his passage through Paris today, but M. Barthou instead of calling on him to say goodby sent his secretary to do so.

I understand that within the next few weeks a strong effort will be made to induce America to join with England in a policy which will mean either joint action for the restoration of Europe or joint withdrawal from continental affairs.

Mr. Lloyd George arrived in London at a late hour tonight to meet one of the greatest receptions ever accorded a returning statesman or soldier. For nearly two hours before the train arrived the platform and streets outside of Victoria station were crowded with a solid mass of people and instead of drifting away when it was announced that there would be a delay in the prime minister's arrival the crowd only grew thicker.

On the platform were all the members of the cabinet, except Lord Curzon and Winston Churchill, who are ill, about 200 members of parliament and many women.

Mr. Lloyd George evidently was greatly impressed and cheered by the reception which was noisy and hearty. He descended from the train bowing and smiling.

Cheering Crowds Line Street.

The crowd surged forward to greet him and for a moment it looked as if the police cordon would be swept away, but the line held and the prime minister, his wife and daughter and members of the British mission pushed their way through to the automobiles.

Outside there was a roar of cheers from the immense crowd which packed the streets and mounted police had to clear the way for the motors. The mile from the station to Downing street was lined with cheering crowds. Downing street itself was closed by the police, but the waiting crowds extended all across wide Whitehall.

May Act Alone, Poincare Says.

PARIS, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—France, declared Premier

Poincare today, "will endeavor to come to an understanding with the allies regarding the action to be taken against Germany if she defaults in payments of her reparations, but if France is unable to secure an agreement she will insist on her right to act separately."

The premier said such action would be taken under those clauses of the treaty of Versailles, which give the allies, in case of default by Germany, the power to take measures such as economic and financial reprisals, "and in general such other measures as the respective governments may determine to be necessary in the circumstances."

M. Poincare made his statement in reply to an inquiry by M. Klotz, former minister of finance.

WOMEN CANNOT USE NAVY RADIO FOR ADDRESSES

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—Plans of the National Woman's party to broadcast speeches to be made tomorrow at the formal dedication of the party's national headquarters, the old capitol building on Capitol hill, were frustrated today by Theodore Roosevelt, acting secretary of the navy, in refusing permission for the use of the naval radio service because of a decision that naval radio should not be used for political purposes.

Members of the Woman's party said they received permission from Secretary Denby two weeks ago and could not understand the action of the acting secretary. Secretary Denby sailed today from Charleston, S. C., on the transport Henderson with members of the naval academy class of 1881, who are going to Japan to pay a visit of courtesy to Admiral Uriu of the Japanese navy, who was a member of that class.

BULLETS FAIL TO STOP TRUCK THAT HIT PEDESTRIAN

Revolver shots failed to stop the driver of an automobile truck that ran down and probably fatally injured William J. Burke, 2848 West Congress street, last night at Harrison street and California avenue. Witnesses said Burke was walking slowly across California avenue when the truck, going at a high rate of speed, struck him and hurled him several feet and against the curb.

Policeman Thomas Mackey of the Warren avenue station, who witnessed the accident, shouted to the driver to stop. Instead he put on extra speed. The policeman fired several shots at the truck as it disappeared.

'Be Prepared; May Have No Allies Next Time': Pershing

Charlotte, N. C., May 20.—Gen. Pershing, speaking at the celebration today of the 147th anniversary of the signing of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence, warned against allowing this country ever again to find itself in the condition of unpreparedness and consequent embarrassment in which he said it found itself in 1917. Fortunately on that occasion, he said, "we had the allies to hold the lines until we got ready, but the next time we might not have any allies."

"Glaring Headlights" No Crime; 4 Police Indicted

That "glaring headlights" do not constitute an offense for which highway policemen may fire upon motorists was established by the grand jury yesterday when it voted indictments for assault to commit murder against four of the policemen, Sergt. Theodore Kuhn and Officers Conr. Peter Wagner, and Lawrence Beck. They are charged with firing on the evening of April 12 on a car containing four Chicago newspaper men, seriously wounding one of them.

VALENTINO, FILM STAR, ARRESTED AS A BIGAMIST

Says He Didn't Know He Violated Law.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 20.—[Special.]—Rodolfo Valentino, hero of numerous cinema dramas, was accused of bigamy in a complaint issued today by Deputy District Attorney McClelland as the result of the actor's marriage on May 13 at Mexicali, Lower California, to Miss Winifred Hudnut.

As soon as the complaint was issued District Attorney Woolwine notified W. I. Gilbert, defense counsel, and Valentino, accompanied by the attorney, hurried to the district attorney's office and surrendered himself.

Liberated on Bonds.

Valentino was arraigned before Justice Bowser of Elmonte, sitting in Justice Follette's court. The defendant's attorney waived the formal reading of the complaint, which includes two counts, covering different angles of the same asserted offense. Mr. McClelland and Deputy District Attorneys Costello and McDaniel appeared for the prosecution. The court fixed bail at $10,000 in bonds or $5,000 in cash. Immediate arrangements were made for bail and the court waited until bondsmen could appear. Thomas Meighan, cinema actor, and Douglas Gerrard acted as bondsmen.

The case was set for hearing on June 1 before Justice Hanby.

What Complaint Charges.

Count one of the complaint charges that on May 13, last, bigamy, a felony, was committed by Rodolfo Valentino by wilfully and knowingly marrying Winifred Hudnut while still the lawful husband of Jean Acker Valentino.

Valentino was married to Jean Acker in 1919, the year he entered motion pictures, and was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce on Jan. 10 last. At that time he gave his name as Rodolfo Guglielmi.

The prosecution will be based more particularly on the second count of complaint. It asserts that the defendant, "outside the state of California, to wit, at Mexicali, in the territory of Lower California, in the Republic of Mexico, the defendant committed the crime of bigamy."

Statement by Rodolfo.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 19.—[By The Associated Press.]—Rodolfo Valentino today issued the following formal statement:

"I was informed by my friends that a marriage across the border under the Mexican laws would be valid. Upon my arrival at Mexicali, the question of the validity again arose and I was told by American officers at Mexicali that the marriage would be legal and was also so informed by Mexican officials.

"I have no intention and had no intention of violating the laws of California, nor had Mrs. Valentino. As soon as the year shall have expired, we will remarry and in the meantime we shall adhere strictly to the law."

MRS. VALENTINO A SPHINX.

A Sphinx, with gestures. That is Mrs. Rodolfo Valntine II., who passed an hour and a half in Chicago yesterday en route from Los Angeles, where her "sheik" husband is being held for bigamy, to New York, home of her stepfather, Richard Hudnut, the perfumer, where her plans are "unknown."

"If any one says I've said anything about my personal affairs, say I said to say it's a lie, with my compliments," she said. Thus the former Miss Winifred Hudnut, motion picture art director, known professionally as Natacha Rambova, began, continued and concluded her interviewless interview aboard the Pennsylvania Limited bound for New York last night.

How Bride Was Dressed.

Tall and slim, the girl accentuated the lines of her figure by an "individual" coiffure and frock. Her dark brown hair was parted with Indian severity in the middle and wound in large plaited knobs over the ears. Her Russian peasant dress of dark blue clinging silk was ornamented only with a vest of gray silk embroidered in burnt orange. The same color scheme was echoed in the gray sports hat with the upturned brim festooned with strands of gray and orange yarn. She wore no jewels but a small pin at her throat and two large diamond solitaires guarding a platinum wedding ring.

Sees Chicago from Taxicab.

The campaign for secrecy started Wednesday when Mrs. Rudolfo, or Miss Hudnut, suddenly boarded a train at Pomono, thirty miles from Los Angeles, and started for Chicago.

"Yesterday, after having traveled 3,000 miles without saying a word," said the conductor of the Continental Flyer which arrived at the Northwestern station at 3:55, "she suddenly implored us to give her and her dog a lift through the baggage car and let her off at Kedzie avenue."

Disembarking at Kedzie avenue, she saw Chicago for the next hour and a half through the windows of taxicabs. She boarded the Pennsylvania Limited at 5:30.

MAJESTIC HALTS TO SAVE SINKING MAN, BUT FAILS

New York, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—The cry of "man overboard" halted the Majestic, the world's biggest liner, shortly after it had passed through the Narrows today on its second voyage across the Atlantic and led to the report that it had grounded. A boat was lowered, but a twenty minute search with 1,600 passengers lining the rails, failed to effect a rescue, and the vessel continued.

The lifeboat, commanded by the first officer, cruised about, but no sign of the man was seen. Following the custom of the sea, lifebelts and buoys were tossed overboard before Capt. Sir Bertram Hayes of the liner gave the word to proceed.

Officials of the White Star line received a wireless message from Capt. Hayes detailing the mishap in the channel.

At 3:17 o'clock, the message said, one of the steamer's 800 third class passengers jumped from the stern of the ship. Lifebelts were thrown to him, but he made no effort to get them. The liner then was stopped and a boat lowered. It failed to find any trace of the missing man, and at 3:41 the Majestic resumed its course.

An incoming freighter, the Havre Maru, also dropped a lifeboat, but failed to find the man.

CIRCULATION WAR IN BERLIN LANDS GERMAN IN CELL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, May 20—The first arrest in the American newspaper circulation war in Berlin was made today when a police volunteer nabbed Harry Eckes, a German, for tearing down signs of the European edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in Unter den Linden.

Eckes, representing the New York Herald, had been instructed by his American boss to conduct the war in a sportsmanlike American manner, but Eckes could not curb himself. Gathering a group of Germans, he espied Robert Schwinbold of Duluth, THE TRIBUNE'S circulation manager here.

The Germans attacked Schwinbold, who gave three of them black eyes. Thereupon Eckes yelled, "Down with the Americans! Kill the foreigners." A crowd collected, which the police dispersed with difficulty. Today Eckes faces charges of "belaestigung, auflauf, und sachbeschaedigung," otherwise disorderly conduct, etc.

DIVORCE ERROR DISRUPTS HOME, HAVEN OF WAIF

Society Seizes Baby in Marital Tangle.

His adopted home wrecked by the marital difficulties encountered by his foster parents, Donald Edward Wiley, 2 years old, has become the center of a spirited battle for his custody between Mrs. Wanita Wallace Callahan, 1635 Fullerton avenue, and her estranged husband, Lyle F. Callahan, aided by the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society. County Judge Frank Righeimer, whose first official act after assuming the county judgeship was to award custody of Donald to the Callahans, will be asked May 26 to set aside the adoption decree.

Underlying the present action, and the cause for the entry of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society into the battle, are circumstances surrounding Mrs. Callahan's marriage to Callahan prior to the entry of a decree of divorce from her first husband, Franklyn M. Chappel.

According to Attorney Joseph D. Irose, counsel for Mrs. Callahan, she was married to Chappel in Winchester, Ind., on Feb. 8, 1912. On May 13, 1915, she filed suit for divorce from Chappel, and the case was heard before Judge George Kersten on June 20. Mrs. Callahan declares that some time later her attorney told her that a decree had been signed and that she was free to wed. Thereupon she was married to Callahan, a salesman, in Marion, Ia., on July 27, 1915.

Early in 1920 Mr. and Mrs. Callahan visited the offices of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society and adopted Donald on "probation." On Dec. 1, 1920, with approval of the society, Judge Righeimer allowed the Callahans to adopt the baby, then 11 months old.

Less than a year had elapsed when doubt as to the legality of the marriage was expressed by Callahan. Investigation disclosed that, through error of her attorney in the divorce proceedings, a decree never had been presented to Judge Kersten for his signature, and as a result the case was dismissed automatically.

Callahan filed suit for annulment of his marriage, which suit is now pending before Judge Charles A. McDonald. Simultaneously Mrs. Callahan filed a second suit for divorce against Chappel, which was granted recently.

Later Mrs. Callahan, contemplating a visit to Cleveland, asked the Children's Home and Aid society to care for Donald. When she returned the society refused to give up the child.

Through Mr. Irose, Mrs. Callahan has filed an answer to the society's petition and reiterating her good faith in contracting the second marriage and adopting the child.

WM. T. ABBOTT IS CRITICALLY ILL AFTER OPERATION

Appendicitis Brings a Sudden Collapse.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—William T. Abbott, vice president of the Central Trust company of Chicago, and until recently assistant director of the budget, is critically ill here at the Emergency hospital and his friends are alarmed.

WM. T. ABBOTT.

Mr. Abbott was stricken with acute appendicitis Thursday while in the treasury building, just after bidding farewell to his friend and business associate, Charles G. Dawes, intending to take an afternoon train for Chicago. Mr. Abbott became so ill that he was in a state of physical collapse and was carried to the treasury department rest room by department employés.

Director Dawes was one of the first to reach Mr. Abbott. He was hastened to the Emergency hospital and special physicians summoned as soon as possible. An immediate operation was necessary. Several consultations have been held since, eminent surgeons from Johns Hopkins and of the public health service being called in.

Mrs. Abbott was summoned from Chicago and arrived here yesterday. After today's consultation, Mr. Abbott's friends were informed that his recovery was doubtful.

Mr. Abbott recently relinquished his work here in the budget bureau and returned to Chicago. He came to Washington this week to address the chamber of commerce convention on Wednesday.

It was the occasion of the first annual banquet of the Widows and Widowers' Rose Garden Club of Chicago, and 500 of them assembled about the festive board. "We have accomplished something since our organization last July 4," said Winfield Scott Wilkinson, the president. "We've had twenty-seven marriages, and good ones. I'm to be married myself in June to Mrs. Martha E. Berry."

PRESIDENT ASKS RAIL EXECUTIVES TO REDUCE RATES

Dinner to Leaders Second of Industrial Talks.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—President Harding tonight was host at dinner to railroad executives of the country, discussing with them serious problems of the railroad situation as related to business depression, and in particular the necessity for rate reductions.

The reception to the railroad executives was the second in a series of dinner discussions with big business men of the country through which the President expects to establish cordial cooperation between business and the administration for voluntary working out of after the war problems, which are holding back a return to normalcy.

I. C. C. Silent on Reductions.

Prior to the dinner official Washington was on the alert for the long delayed freight rate decision from the interstate commerce commission, which had been expected for several weeks. The decision, known to have been in shape for publication, was not made public, however, and announcement was made at the interstate commerce commission late in the afternoon that nothing in relation to the rate case would be forthcoming at this time.

Holding up of the decision was regarded in official quarters as having a direct bearing on the discussion at the White House tonight and the opinion expressed by experts in railroad affairs was that the President has not been satisfied with the reductions that the commission was able to make under the provision of the transportation act that rates must be fixed at a level to produce a reasonable return to the carriers.

It may be, it was argued, that the decision will not be announced for some time and that the President, beginning with his discussion tonight, is endeavoring to bring about voluntary action on the part of the railroad executives whereby the commission will be enabled to promulgate still further reductions in rates on basic commodities.

Among Those Present.

Among the railroad executives who dined at the White House and participated in the important conference with the President were the following:

A. H. Smith, president, New York Central; Carl R. Gray, president, Union Pacific; W. H. Finley, president, Chicago and Northwestern; W. B. Storey, president, Santa Fé; Edward Chambers, vice president, Santa Fé; C. H. Markham, president, Illinois Central; Judge R. S. Lovett, chairman of board, Union Pacific; H. E. Byram, president, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul; Samuel Rea, president, Pennsylvania; Hale Holden, president, Burlington; Howard Elliott, chairman of board, Northern Pacific; Charles Donnelly, president, Northern Pacific; Ralph Budd, president, Great Northern; Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of board, Southern Pacific; F. D. Underwood, president, Erie; Adam Felton, president Chicago Great Western; Fairfax Harrison, president Southern railway lines; Edward E. Loomis, president Lehigh Valley, and Daniel Willard, president Baltimore and Ohio.

The President, in summoning the railroad heads to a conference, was aware of the fact that many of them have maintained that they could not submit to radical reductions in rates on basic commodities until wages come down, and it was this point, it is reported, that the President wished to discuss among other phases of the railroad situation.

Hoover Attends Conference.

The only member of the cabinet present at the dinner was Mr. Hoover, the secretary of commerce, who has been advising with the President on railroad problems and other national matters affecting business for many weeks.

Mr. Hoover is known to have some definite ideas regarding the railroad rate decision, as he has regarding the coal situation.

It was recalled tonight that he warned the coal operators that if they could not operate their business with due regard for the public interest, they might expect some stirring agitation in the near future for government regulation of the mines.

Warn of Popular Revolt.

It has been rumored about for some time that administration leaders were getting restive over complaints, particularly from the farmers, about the railroad rate situation, and some high in the councils of the Republican party have not been hesitant to suggest it might be well for the administration to remind the railroad executives that a continuance of oppressive rates might bring on a wave of agitation for government ownership of railroads that could not be stemmed and might be effectively reflected at the polls.

Whether the President or Mr. Hoover touched on this phase of the situation tonight had not been disclosed at a late hour.

Chicagoan Is Rate Expert.

In the absence of official statements, the presence at the dinner of Edward Chambers of Chicago, vice president of the Santa Fe, the only railroad vice president invited and recognized among railroad men as their expert on rates, was confirmation enough to the railroad experts about the capital that Mr. Harding had summoned the executive to talk about rates.

Activity of members of the interstate commerce commission throughout the day served further to confirm this. Commissioner McChord conferred with the President early in the day and late this afternoon the commission held a meeting, President Harding remaining in the executive office throughout the afternoon and being several times in communication with members of the commission. It was reported that the president had been given a complete synopsis of the commission's opinion as to rates following the long rate inquiry.

Some One Has to Start.

In some quarters tonight it was reported that the President sought to induce the railroad executives to agree upon rate reductions in advance of wage reductions to be brought about later.

Some one must start the reduction in transportation expense which is throttling business revival to a great extent, and labor, it was argued, would be more willing to accept wage reductions if the railroad executives would accept rate reductions to become effective upon general wage reductions to be adjusted by the railroad labor board.

How far the President got with this argument could not be ascertained.

Up to a late hour no official statement had come from the White House with respect to the conference, which was running far into the night.

Protopapadakis Forms New Cabinet in Greece

ATHENS, May 20.—M. Protopapadakis, who was minister of finance in the Gounaris cabinet, has formed a new cabinet. M. Gounaris has been appointed minister of justice, and Nicholas Stratos, minister of the interior, while the other important portfolios remain unchanged. A cabinet was formed by Nicholas Stratos on May 16 to succeed the ministry headed by Gounaris, but failed to receive a vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies, and resigned May 19.

"KIT" OF SLAIN BURGLAR

Burglar tools found in the clothing of Adam Prochowski, robber slain at the home of Henry A. Blair, 2735 Prairie avenue, Friday night, by Capt. C. J. Pfaus, who had been employed to guard the Blair home. Prochowski was shot after his attempts to enter the house had awakened Miss Anita Blair, who gave the alarm. Fine saws were strapped to Prochowski's legs, and in a holster under his arm he carried a revolver.

SALOONKEEPER NABBED IN WAR STAMP ROBBERY

Through capture of two men at Johnstown, Pa., and recovery last night of a large quantity of war savings stamps from a Chicago saloonkeeper, police hope to clear recent postoffice robberies in small towns in Illinois.

Edward Hoff, 6532 South Peoria street, whose saloon at 1601 South Halsted street has long been suspected of being a hangout for safeblowers and other criminals, was taken into custody by Lieut. William O'Connor and a squad from the detective bureau after a search of the saloon and of Hoff's home revealed the stamps.

The raid followed information from Johnstown police to the effect that a letter addressed to Hoff, telling of the forwarding of "stickers," had been found in the pockets of Edward Fidell and George Gertz when the two were picked up as suspects in the eastern city.

Miss Julia McCann is president, and Miss Mary Sullivan, a charter member, is still a resident.

POLICE TOO FEW, WEALTHY HOMES HIRE OWN GUARDS

Killing at Blair's Bares Step to Halt Robbers.

More than 200 homes of wealthy Chicagoans are guarded by special policemen armed with shotguns and heavy revolvers. This became known yesterday after the killing of Adam Prochowski, burglar extraordinary, who was shot down late Friday night by Capt. Charles J. Pfaus, a special officer assigned to guard the home of Henry A. Blair, president of the Chicago Surface Lines, at 2735 Prairie avenue.

Mr. Blair yesterday gave the reason for the armed guard in his home and in doing so expressed opinions of heads of the 200 households which are guarded by special officers.

"The police are working hard," said Mr. Blair. "But they cannot handle the situation. They are too few. That is why I had an armed officer stationed at my home. His need was demonstrated last night."

Prepared to Saw Way Out.

Prochowski, whose baffling operations gained him notoriety that was akin to fame, was prepared when killed to give Chicago an unusual thrill had he been captured. After taking an inventory of burglar's tools and weapons the master criminial had concealed about him the police said he could have cut his way through the bars of a police station cell and then fought his way to freedom.

Tied to his legs were two long steel saws. A heavy revolver was in a holster under his left arm. Various tools ranging from nippers to a heavy jimmy were concealed about his clothing. Currency amounting to $700 was tied around his left leg.

"Prochowski if captured would have walked quietly to a police station," said a veteran policeman who worked on the case. "He would have submitted to a casual search and gone to a cell without a word. Then he would have hacked his way out of the cell, and if necessary shot his way to freedom with the revolver."

Fate Predicted by Judge.

But Prochowski, a University of Warsaw graduate, did not live to make the attempt. Instead he died fleeing from a "job," his back filled with gunshot, much as Judge George Kersten said he would die when the jurist sent him to Joliet five years ago. He had pleaded guilty to the robbery of half a dozen exclusive homes. In sentencing him the judge said:

"You are an extraordinary fellow, Prochowski, and you could make your mark in some line of honest endeavor if you would only try. But if you don't your fate will be a sad one. I can foresee a black night, an alley, a man waiting with a gun, a shot in the dark—and the end of you."

So it came to pass, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury which sat at Orme's morgue yesterday. The shooting of Prochowski by Capt. Pfaus was the subject of the inquest.

Mr. Blair told of receiving threatening letters, of other attempts to rob his home, and of employing a special guard. Capt. Pfaus testified he killed Prochowski when the burglar's attempt to enter the house had aroused Miss Anita Blair, and she had given the alarm. The jury commended Capt. Pfaus for his work.

The police were unsuccessful yesterday in their efforts to locate Prochowski's living quarters or the caché they believe he had for storing his loot.

SERGT. YORK IS GIVEN $1,245 BY TRIBUNE FOLKS

Readers Aid Hero to Build Home.

He gets this anyhow!

One thousand, two hundred, and forty-five dollars and sixty cents. A check for that amount was sent yesterday from the treasurer of THE TRIBUNE to Sergt. Alvin C. York at his postoffice, Pall Mall, Tenn.

ALVIN C. YORK.

Just before Christmas last year THE TRIBUNE inaugurated a Happiest Christmas celebration. Among the suggestions sent in by the readers was one to do something toward brightening the Christmas of Sergt. Alvin C. York, the mountaineer redhead, who, according to Gen. Pershing, performed the greatest individual exploit of the great war.

York, then a corporal, took charge of a detail of Yanks scouting in No Man's Land after his sergeant was killed. He killed with his own hand twenty-five Boche machine gunners, put that number of machine gun nests out of commission, and marched 145 Germans, including a major, back to the American army.

"Gets This Anyhow."

Funds which were contemplated to pay off the mortgage on his farm in Tennessee were not subscribed to the amount expected, and the sergeant was reported without the money necessary to build a home for himself and the girl he married when he came back from over there.

Three checks for $250 each were sent to THE TRIBUNE for York, but were conditional on $25,000 being raised. Then some enthusiast started the "He gets this anyhow fund." The amount raised for this fund totaled exactly $1,245.60.

A letter received yesterday from the plucky mountain boy read as follows:

"Editor The Tribune: In reply to your letter of May 8, I will say in regard to the money THE TRIBUNE has for me, you may send me the check to Pall Mall, Tenn. I will use the money to build me a home on the farm. I sure do appreciate what THE TRIBUNE and its readers have done for me. The $1,245.60 that THE TRIBUNE and its readers raised for me, together with what I've got, will build me a nice home on the farm. Again I want to thank THE TRIBUNE and its readers for their great kindness to me.

"Yours very truly,
"ALVIN C. YORK."

He's Grateful.

Which is probably the longest letter that York ever wrote in his life and four times as much as he ever said all at once. The sergeant is grateful, and all those who contributed to the fund can feel sure that their kindness is appreciated.

BURCH JURY, OUT 24 HOURS, ASKS TO BE DISMISSED

Reported 8 to 4 to Acquit; Must Carry On.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 20.—[Special.]—At 6:30 o'clock tonight the jury trying Arthur C. Burch of Evanston, Ill., on a charge of murdering J. Belton Kennedy, was locked up for the night to resume its efforts to reach a verdict at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

At 5 o'clock the jury, which had then been out twenty-four hours and which was reported as standing 8 to 4 for acquittal, sent word to Judge Sidney N. Reeve that it was hopelessly deadlocked, and asked to be discharged.

The judge refused, ordering the twelve to continue deliberations until 6:30, when they were to be closeted for the night.

Asked for Data at Noon.

The jury came into court at noon and asked to hear some of the testimony read.

The foreman, Henry Walz, had a piece of cardboard in his hand. The twelve took their seats. Burch was sent for. He entered hurriedly. His face was set, his complexion pasty.

Walz asked to have read the testimony of Mrs. J. M. Warren of Santa Barbara, who came across country with Burch last July, and to whom Burch confided that he was going to the aid of a girl in trouble.

Walz checked an entry on the cardboard, and then asked for the date of Burch's visit to Los Angeles, previous to last July. The testimony of his father, the Rev. W. A. Burch of Evanston, was read to show Burch came here seven, eight, or nine years ago. Another check on the cardboard.

Check Off More Testimony.

Another requested Burch's statement to the district attorney on Aug. 8, then the testimony concerning Selma Collander, and the testimony of John Taliberto as to the time Belton Kennedy arrived at his home on Aug. 5—the day of the slaying—and the time he left. The last check was made against the request for the testimony of Mrs. R. B. Whitlow, colored soothsayer, whom Madelynn Obenchain visited with Belton, and for a full list of the witnesses.

It was noted that all the testimony asked for was that of the prosecution witnesses. There were no requests for any evidence touching on the alibi or the defense.

Elgin Man, 83, Lost in Chicago Since May 3

A call for aid from Chicago police came yesterday from Mrs. Alma Page, hotel proprietor of Elgin, Ill., to find James Normile, 83 years old, who left May 3 for Chicago and failed to return. The mother of Clarence L. Vershay, Rochester, N. Y., believing her son missing since 1915 to be in Chicago, also asked the police to help find him.

ACE OF CLUBS

Patrolman D. S. Madigan.

Quick action by Patrolman D. S. Madigan of the South Clark street station caused the death of a horse yesterday but saved several children from injury.

Madigan was riding on a 12th street car. When the car approached Des Plaines street he saw a horse belonging to Lawrence Seiger, 1304 Sawyer avenue, plunging down the street. He threw the front door of the car open, ran into the street, and struck the horse over the head with his club. The horse fell dead.

Several children were at play before the frantic horse. Madigan said he struck the horse because it had no bridle and there seemed no other way to stop it.

HUSBAND TURNS BERLIN COPS ON EX-MOVIE STAR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, May 20.—A few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Mick of Los Angeles arrived in Berlin on a tour round the world. He is 55 and wealthy and she is 24 and a former movie actress. Soon Mr. Mick was forced to visit a sanitarium, suffering from ptomaine poisoning. He gave his beautiful wife power of attorney.

Mr. Mick claims his wife cashed a $2,500 check and used it for a pleasure jaunt to Paris with a gay company, including Billy Fleishman, a New York Turkish bath owner, and Mr. Fleishman's niece.

Mr. Mick's lawyer with a bailiff visited Mrs. Mick at the Adlon hotel last night. They were armed with a formidable document which authorized the attachment of her effects. The bailiff ripped a fur coat of Mrs. Mick's back, but during the melée valuable rings which were upon her fingers when the bailiff entered disappeared. Mr. Mick is a millionaire owner of milk drying plants in Los Angeles.

BROKER KILLS SELF IN AUTO.

Wichita, Kas., May 20.—E. O. Pirtle, 32, an insurance and investment broker, committed suicide last night by shooting himself in the head while sitting in his roadster one and one-half miles west of Wichita. His body was discovered early today.

WASHINGTON AND POE REACH HALL OF FAME AT LAST

New York, May 20.—Unveiled by Field Marshal Earl French of Ypres, America's first great leader, George Washington, took his place in the Hall of Fame at New York university today.

Four other busts also were unveiled—one of Edgar Allan Poe, by Edwin Markham, poet; one of Maria Mitchell, astronomer, by Dr. Henry Noble McCracken, president of Vassar college; one of Dr. Mark Hopkins, philosopher, by Dr. Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams college, and of Gilbert Stuart, artist, by Miss Cecelia Beaux, portrait painter.

"Poe," said Mr. Markham, "is the saddest, the most misunderstood genius in America. His fame sends the longest shadow from our shores across the world."

"Forgive Serpent Tongue."

Mr. Markham read an original poem, "Israfel," of which the following are the closing verses:

O poet, life was bitter to your heart;
These stones have memories of the tears you shed.
Forgive the serpent tongue, the flying dart—
Forgive us from the dead.

You sang your song; we gave you scorn for pay;
For beauty's bread we gave a stone; and yet,
Because our eyes were holden on the way,
Remember to forget.

Sing Israfel; you have your star at last,
Your morning star; but we still must live,
So now that all is over, all is past,
Forget, forget—forgive!"

Great Teachers Rare.

"Matthew Vassar," said Dr. McCracken in unveiling the Maria Mitchell bust, "wished that the first faculty of a woman's college should contain representative women scholars, but was forced to content himself with the name of Maria Mitchell. Fifty years have passed, and great teachers of either sex seem as rare now as then."

Dr. Williams eulogized Dr. Hopkins as one who taught "not as one having authority, seeking to impose his will or his interpretation upon his students, but as a guide and friend."

SMITH DECLINES TO JOIN HEARST ON SAME TICKET

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—Under no circumstances will "Al" Smith be a candidate for United States senator on the Democratic ticket if William R. Hearst is the party nominee for governor. This was said today by friends of the former governor to be final.

There have been informal talks between Smith and some leaders, who have impressed him with the fact that he is about the only man in a position to save his party from Hearst by himself becoming a candidate for govenor.

The only formal invitation to enter politics again that has reached Mr. Smith so far has come from spokesmen for Mr. Hearst, who have told him that he would be welcome as a candidate for the United States senate on a ticket headed by Hearst.

WOOED BECAUSE OF RICH FATHER, WIFE CHARGES

Declaring she feared the abduction of her children by their father, from whom she is estranged and seeking separate maintenance, Mrs. Mary L. Easthope, 6427 Kimbark avenue, yesterday obtained an injunction from Judge Joseph David, restraining Harry J. Easthope from entering her home or molesting the children.

In her bill, filed by Attorney William Rothmann, Mrs. Easthope asserts that because of cruel treatment by Easthope she has concluded "he never loved me, but married me merely because I was the daughter of a rich man."

Easthope, the bill says, was content to allow his wife's father to furnish the couple a home, and contribute $300 monthly for the maintenance of the family. His own income of more than $5,000 annually, she charges, he spent on himself, taking periodical vacations in Florida and other southern resorts.

Lyon & Healy Urge Your Test of the Victrola

PROSPECTIVE buyers of the Victrola are urged to hear as many instruments as possible. We want them to test for themselves the differences in tone. We leave the judgment to them. They can distinguish the relative musical and reproducing qualities. After all, the true test of a talking machine is its tone but happily the genuine Victor Victrola has won a world wide reputation for beauty of design and tone, as well as lifelike fidelity of musical reproduction.

ALDERMEN BACK 1,000 NEW COPS; PAY FUND FOUND

Money, Last Obstacle, Is Discovered.

The drive for 1,000 new policemen will win this week, it was indicated yesterday.

Every alderman but two of those queried yesterday asserted he would vote for the measure when it appears before the city council.

At the same time a huge fund to pay the additional salaries for the rest of the fiscal year was discovered. It is far more than necessary.

Unless some powerful interference develops, the great phalanx of crime infantry sought by Chief of Police Fitzmorris, the Chicago crime commission, and other civic organizations, will join the present force of bluecoats immediately.

Apparently the only obstacle in the way of voting the thousand extra policemen was finances. And now the money has been discovered.

Records in the city controller's office yesterday showed that the city will have available $993,000 to pay the extra policemen by Aug. 1. Only $820,000 additional to the payroll is needed to care for the last six months of the year.

Where Money Is Found.

The money will come as follows: Total appropriations to date for 1922 are $41,582,437.14. This figure includes supplemental appropriations of $2,000,000 for bridges and street cleaning. The city's revenue for 1922 is estimated at $38,201,459. To this the aldermen, in making the budget, added $1,380,977.28 for salvage, the estimated amount unexpended at the end of this year.

A month ago $2,353,000 was added unexpectedly to the city's corporate fund when the accumulated payments from the telephone company and the "L" lines were received. These sums bring the total revenue up to $41,935,437.14, or $353,000 more than the appropriations to date. In addition, $575,000 is due from the telephone company on July 1 and $65,000 from the "L" lines Aug. 1, making the total available to pay police salaries $993,000.

Garner and Lyle Opposed.

Ald. John P. Garner, close friend of Mayor Thompson, and Ald. John H. Lyle were the only aldermen who appeared cold to the project yesterday.

Mayor Thompson will support the measure in council, friends asserted yesterday. Only thirty-six votes are necessary to appropriate and it looks now as though fifty aldermen would vote "yes."

Aldermen who favor the thousand extra policemen are Kenna, Coughlin, Jackson, L. B. Anderson, Guernsey, J. J. Touhy, Powers, Fick, Albert, Steffen, Wallace, Handerlein, Schlegel, S. M. Hogan, Clark, Moran, Devereaux, Wilson, Frankhauses, McNichols, Maypole, Bowler, Hedricks, Govier, Jensen, Toman, Horne, and Caspers.

Use Some for Speeders.

R. C. Cook, president of the Illinois Automobile club, was among many other business men who went on record as unequivocally approving the campaign for more police.

"The city council should authorize the increase at once," he said. "At least a hundred of them should be used to get the criminal motorists who defy traffic laws, leaving a trail of dead and injured in their wake. Chief Fitzmorris should also be given power to employ as many in addition as he needs."

NEW MURDER ARREST

One new arrest and further information that officials hope will lead to the early capture of two men still sought comprised progress yesterday in clearing murders of two policemen and bombings of several manufacturing plants by labor terrorists last week.

The man arrested was said to be an official of the electrical workers' union. His identity and significance in the investigation were not divulged. He was hurried to the Austin police station, where other suspects have been held incommunicado several days. Officials hoped to glean from him information aiding the search for Charles Daudzaukis and "Floater" Stanley, sought as the actual slayers of Lieut. Terrence Lyons and Policeman Thomas Clarke.

A conference of all officials investigating the murders and bombings will be held this afternoon in the office of State's Attorney Crowe.

GOVERNORS URGED BY PRESIDENT TO BOOST MEN'S TRAINING CAMPS

Washington, D. C., May 20.—Governors of the various states are urged by President Harding, in a telegram sent out from the White House today, to call attention to the opportunities presented for young men to obtain military training during the coming summer at the citizens' training camps.

The text of the President's telegram follows:

"Apparently all agree that every young man who is willing to prepare himself for the defense of his country should be given the opportunity. To this end I suggest that you bring to the attentions of the citizens of your state the opportunity now presented to them by the citizens' military training camps which will be conducted during the coming summer.

"Without any cost or military obligation to themselves, the young men accepted for these camps will be given training which will be of inestimable value through the physical and mental development received and which will unquestionably increase their value to the nation and to the communities in which they live."

Capt. Beuret Promoted by Harding; Now an Admiral

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—Capt. John D. Beuret was nominated today by President Harding to be chief naval constructor and chief of the bureau of construction and repair of the navy department with the rank of rear admiral.

INQUIRY CLOSED IN LAND DEALS OF SCHOOL BOARD

One phase of State's Attorney Crowe's investigation of the school scandal closed last night when it was announced that indictments naming William A. Bither, attorney for the board of education, and H. W. Kaup, involved with the attorney in school property transactions, were being drawn up and probably would be returned Tuesday.

Assistant State's Attorneys Ernest S. Hodges and Samuel M. Hamilton said the scope of the inquiry now will be broadened to include virtually all dealings of the board during the last three years.

"The indictments now being drawn," said Mr. Hamilton, "were voted on the strength of evidence as to the Wendell Phillips and Forrestville school properties. We are through with these, and now we are going into alleged extravagant expenditures by the board, padding of pay rolls, favoritism in awarding big contracts and the misuse of school building material."

A lively session of the board at its regular meeting next Wednesday is expected to develop if plans of insurgent trustees are carried out. Trustee Hart Hanson, leading rebel against the Davis-Severinghaus boss rule, will demand the resignation of Attorney Bither.

300,000 VOLT X-RAY MACHINE GIVES HOPE TO CANCER VICTIMS

St. Louis, Mo., May 20.—A notable progression toward the control of cancer has been the development within the last year of the X-ray to nearly triple the penetrating power of previous machines, Dr. Albert Soiland of Los Angeles, president of the Radiological Society of North America, stated at the society's mid-annual convention here today.

"The three best agents for the control of cancer," Dr. Soiland explained, "are radium, X-ray, and surgery, and any of the three may effect cures, though none is an absolute cure, due to the fact that cancers are not always confined to one spot. Often they are malignant in one spot, but may spread widely through the body tissue.

"The creation of an X-ray machine in the last year with 300,000 volts to replace previous machines of scarcely more than 100,000 volts will allow many cancers that hitherto could not be reached by the X-ray, to be treated with some expectation of effecting cures."

Slight Earthquakes Rock Central America States

"SLIDE, DAD, YOU SLOWPOKE! WHY DONTCHA SLIDE!"

And Dad Did to Help Out Boys' Week.

Chicago boys, who proved themselves Friday to be marchers in any kind of weather, took over athletic fields yesterday and showed what they could do on the cinder path and with the ball and bat.

Racing, baseball, and gymnastic contests were held in Lincoln and in the south and west parks. At the Central and other branches of the Y. M. C. A., the Union League, Hamilton, Chicago, and Illinois Athletic clubs, the lads held swimming and indoor baseball events.

Originated Boys' Week.

William Lewis Butcher, head of the Brace Memorial Newsboys' home in New York and originator of Boys' week, will speak at a meeting of the Sunday Evening club tonight. He will discuss the work of constructive agencies dealing with underprivileged boys in the great cities.

W. L. BUTCHER.

Other speakers will be the Rev. Josiah Sibley and Arthur E. Bestor, president of the American Chautauqua institution, who will tell of the boy problem in other lands.

Fathers Play Boys.

Boy members of the American Gymnastic union gave a turnverein exhibition at Grant park yesterday afternoon. On other fields, gray haired dads organized themselves into nines and gave battle to their youngsters. The day, as well as being boys' day in athletics, was boys' day with dad.

Today, in church and Sunday school, special services emphasizing the community responsibility for every boy will be held.

Four More Days.

The rest of the week's special days will be: Monday, Boys' day in school, when members of the Rotary club will make addresses; Tuesday, Boys' day for health and safety, in which Health Commissioner Bundesen and Chief of Police Fitzmorris are coöperating; Wednesday, Boys' day in industry and thrift, with stress laid on vocational training and guidance. The last day, Friday, will be given over to the boys to show how they can entertain.

CONAN DOYLE DUE TODAY; WILL GIVE SPIRITIST TALKS

During his visit here Sir Arthur will deliver two public lectures at Orchestra hall, Tuesday and Friday evenings. His announced subjects will be: "The Proofs of Immortality" and "Recent Psychic Evidence."

He became interested in spiritism by messages which he announced came from his son, who was slain in the world war.

BRAKEMAN KILLED ON ST. PAUL.

Janesville, Wis., May 20.—Benjamin Marsh, a brakeman on the St. Paul road, was killed at Eagle when the freight train on which he was riding went into the ditch. He is from Milwaukee. Fourteen cars were ditched and piled up, stopping passenger service for several hours.

AFFABLE CHICAGO GENT BLAMED IN $200,000 THEFT

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—Mme. Bronislawa Lamprecht von Petachenko, who arrived yesterday on the Peninsular, mourns the mysterious loss of $200,000 in jewels, taken from her trunk last Sunday in mid-Atlantic. The boat has been ransacked and all passengers were searched, but there is no trace of the missing gems.

Mme. Petachenko had the jewels locked in a steamer trunk. On deck she was joined by an affable gentleman from Chicago. The jingle of her bunch of keys annoyed her, so she gave them to the Chicago gentleman to carry. Presently he exhibited signs of fatigue and asked to be excused. Later he returned the keys.

When she went to her cabin the jewels were gone. The affable gentleman from Chicago was immediately searched. So were all other passengers, but to no avail.

U. S. COMPLETES LAST OF 2,312 TRADE VESSELS

1,000 Idle; Lasker Makes New Plea for Subsidy.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—Chairman Lasker of the United States shipping board today announced the completion of the greatest shipbuilding undertaking in history.

The last one of the ships America ordered built to bridge the Atlantic and help win the war has been completed by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., at the Sparrows Point, Md., yard, and turned over by the shipping board to the Munson line for operation in the South American service. The ship is the "535" passenger and cargo steamer Western World.

From May 24, 1917, when the wood cargo carrier North Bend, the first vessel to be built under wartime contracts, was turned over to the government by Kruse & Banks, North Bend, Ore., to May 9, 1922, the United States shipping board constructed 2,312 vessels of various types aggregating 13,636,711 dead weight tons.

More than 1,000 Ships Idle.

Today more than one thousand of these vessels are laid up, due to the depressing conditions of the world's markets, as well as to the inability of the American operator to compete with his foreign competitors from the standpoint of expenses.

"The salvation of the American merchant marine lies solely in government aid," commented Mr. Lasker. "The proposed ship subsidy bill which is now being discussed before a joint congressional committee consisting of members of the senate committee on commerce and the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries, provides adequate means, subject to such amendments as are advisable and practical for the restoration of American maritime prestige.

"Until the citizen who resides inland cooperates with his brothers on the various coasts of the country in realizing the benefits to be obtained from government aid, and truly feels that he will share directly or indirectly in the prosperity that is to follow the upbuilding of our export and import trade, all efforts to put our idle fleet in operation will be futile.

Whole Nation Must Help.

"This is a matter for the entire nation to support, not only from a spirit of patriotism and of pride but for the even greater purpose of economic and national preservation.

"America must build up its export trade; it must find markets for its surplus production. No nation has been successful in carrying out these policies unless it has had a strong merchant marine capable of transporting its own commodities to all ports of the world in its own bottoms, as well as maintaining efficient connections in these ports in order to obtain return cargoes. For us the only solution lies in federal assistance."

The vessels built during and after the war consisted of requisitioned and contract steel cargo carriers, tankers, refrigerator, transport, collier and combined passenger and cargo carriers; contract wood cargo carriers, barges, tankers, finished hulls, and sailing vessels; contract composite cargo carriers; contract concrete cargo carriers and tankers; steel and wood ocean tugs, and steel and wood harbor tugs.

Some Vessels Built in Orient.

The building of this gigantic fleet was not confined entirely to the United States, Japan constructing thirty steel cargo carriers of 243,290 dwt., and China four steel cargo carriers of 40,000 dwt.

Prior to the entrance of the United States into the war the maximum yearly output of ships in this country was in the year 1908, when 1,457 vessels of 921,324 dwt., including all vessels of five net tons and over, were built; of steamships alone the total was 722,436 dwt.

The original program called for 3,270 ships of 18,407,276 dwt. After the armistice all construction was cancelled, thus reducing the program by 958 ships of 4,770,565 dwt., which represented approximately 50 per cent of all vessels that had not reached a degree of completion of 85 or 90 per cent, and more than one-half of the vessels yet to be launched.

Fabricated Ships Prove O. K.

The wood ship program of the corporation had reached a total of 1,017 vessels of various types at the time construction was curtailed. Of this number 428 were subsequently cancelled, 474 were completed, and 115 partially completed.

If all the vessels on the program were placed in a straight line, stem to stern, they would extend for a distance of 158 miles, and if steaming a mile and a quarter apart would reach from New York to Southampton, England.

The total deadweight tonnage is equal to the carrying capacity of 388,363 freight cars loaded 35 tons per car. As there are approximately 2,800,000 freight cars in the United States, nearly one-seventh of them would be required to equal the carrying capacity of the vessels.

TRADE TABLEAUX

GRACE M'DONALD.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The progress of women in industry was shown last night in tableaux and a costumed trade parade which preceded a vaudeville program given at the Auditorium theater last night by the Women's Trade Union league. Old country women from the weaving room at Hull house appeared in the tableaux with the loom, spinning wheel and spindle, while 200 young women dressed in the garb peculiar to their trades represented modern industry. Miss Grace McDonald, shown in the picture, represented the federal employés.

"Chicago to England in 7 Days" Meat on Majestic

New York, May 20.—Two hours before the steamship Majestic sailed for England today it took aboard the last of the special shipment from Chicago which is being rushed across land and ocean to complete a seven day shipment from the middle west to London.

The freight was meat and meat products, taken aboard from a lighter tied alongside the Majestic at daybreak. The freight started from Chicago Thursday and was rushed by special train to Weehawken, N. J., where it was lightered across the river.

BE EFFICIENT AND ALERT—SIMS TO NAVY GRADUATES

REAR ADMIRAL WILLIAM S. SIMS.

Newport, R. I., May 20.—The duty of the navy to maintain its efficiency in the face of reductions in personnel and equipment was emphasized by Rear Admiral William S. Sims in his address, as president, to the graduating class of the naval war college today.

"We military men keenly realize," he said, "the depressing effect upon morale of such drastic reduction in our personnel and equipment as will preclude the carrying out of the training which our studies and experience have shown to be necessary to the maximum efficiency.

"We naturally deplore the apathy of the people and what appears to be the unwisdom of the congress in again exposing us and the country to the possible risk of sacrifices as inevitable and as grievous as those that unpreparedness brought in the great war.

"But once the final decision is made it is one of our most important duties to accept loyally and to make a careful estimate of the situation with a view to maintaining such units and personnel as are left us in as efficient a condition of instructions, training, and equipment as possible, and, more important than all else, to maintaining to the maximum degree the morale of the personnel."

HOLD INQUEST ON RIVER CORPSE.

An inquest was held yesterday at the Central Undertaking rooms yesterday on the body of an unidentified man taken from the river Friday at the foot of Congress street. It had been in the water for two months, police believe.

WOMEN BAPTISTS RAISE $3,488,000 TO AID MISSIONS

Jacksonville, Fla., May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Women's Missionary union contributed $3,488,000 to the general work of the southern Baptist convention in the last twelve months, as against $30,000 received in 1888, it was announced today.

Proposals that southern Baptists cooperate with the northern Baptists were voted down. It was declared that the two great Baptist organizations already work in harmony, and that there was no demand for any new statements of Baptist faith and policy.

BOASTS MAYOR HAS 26 VOTES TO DEFEAT SUBWAYS

Alderman Says It's Bill's Plan or Nothing.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

One of the mayor's ardent aldermanic supporters boasted yesterday that he has sufficient votes in the city council to stop any improvement in local transportation, except by way of the mayor's plan.

"And any plan except the mayor's will be stopped," he went on. "They can talk all they want to in the local transportation committee, but they haven't the nerve to try to get anywhere. They know the mayor has three more votes than he requires to block any scheme they present. They know that we have twenty-six votes which are more than sufficient to prevent the council overriding any veto. Put that in your pipe and smoke it."

Other aldermen were inclined to doubt the claim that the mayor has twenty-six votes in his vest pocket, and some predicted that before the summer vacation of the council the mayor will be given an opportunity to vote all of his aldermanic followers.

Horne Favors Quick Action.

"I'm in favor of action," said Ald. Horne. "The city urgently needs subways. Why not start? Without adequate transit the city cannot properly grow and prosper. Eventually the city must have and will have subways because I believe that within thirty years it will have 5,000,000 inhabitants. Will any one then contend that we must get along without sufficient rapid transit? But we have been talking about subways for twenty years and haven't started yet."

"My motto is, 'Let's go,'" said Ald. Wilson. "The longer we wait the more we will regret it, because the congestion will become worse as time goes on. What the people want is relief. The people I come in contact with are not so much interested in the fare as in the service. They complain bitterly of the fare because of the service, but many of them say they would be willing to pay that fare if they were getting high class rapid transit service."

Want Rapid Transit—Jensen.

"I know the people want rapid transit," commented Ald. Jensen. "I have seen them transfer from a local to an express on the elevated system when their gain in time would be only three or four minutes in getting to the central district.

"If we had necessary subway links and a proper development of the elevated roads I believe we could have a 5 cent fare, with a charge for a transfer," said Ald. Bowler.

"My uppermost thought on transportation is subways immediately," added Ald. Toman. "Those subways should be constructed where the congestion is greatest and they should be started and completed as soon as possible."

May Be Council Showdown.

At next Thursday's meeting of the local transportation committee some aldermen may insist that the council itself be given the opportunity to state its attitude on improvement in transportation.

"If it is true that the mayor has sufficient votes to block any plan we work out, let us find that out as soon as we can," said one committeeman yesterday. "I believe that the boast that the mayor has twenty-six votes is twaddle. That story is only circulated to persuade hesitating aldermen to get into the mayor's band wagon."

LAKE SHORE BANK MOVES INTO ITS NEW BUILDING

Flowers Greet Removal on North Michigan.

well wishers, and scores of visitors marked the removal of the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank yesterday into its recently completed new building at North Michigan avenue and East Ohio street from its pioneer quarters across the street.

The bank premises, decorated and planned by Weary & Alford, occupy the greater part of the ground floor of the four story building, which was designed by Marshall & Fox.

Reminiscences of Silas.

Silas P. Melander, 67 West Ohio street, who has lived in Chicago seventy-one years, is one of the bank's first and oldest depositors. He was an interested spectator at the christening of the new quarters.

"Sixty-five years ago, when I was a boy," he ruminated, "we used to go wading and swimming right where this building stands now. In those days the beach sand used to extend as far west as Cass street. I can remember, too, the wrecking of a sailing vessel years ago, whose buried hulk was found when workmen were excavating for a water main in Fairbanks court, two blocks east of Michigan avenue."

New Bank's Officers.

Officers of the bank are: F. H. Rawson, chairman board of directors; William S. Kline, president; T. Philip Swift, cashier; Frank K. Hays and A. M. Kelly, assistant cashiers. The directors are: Sheldon Clark, John B. Drake, C. B. Hazelwood, William V. Kelly, Mellen C. Martin, Col. Robert R. McCormick, Arthur Meeker, Frederick H. Rawson, Edward F. Swift, S. E. Thomason, Bertram M. Winston, William S. Kline.

A feature on which the bank has specialized is its women's department. Another unique idea is a clock bank, presented to depositors of $5 and over. In order to wind the clock at least a nickel must be deposited, a saving of time and money.

LIQUOR TASTERS ARE IN DEMAND AT QUEBEC, CAN.

New York, May 20.—Bringing word that "official tasters" are needed in Montreal by the Quebec liquor commission, G. A. Simard, president of the body, returned to New York today after buying "none but the best" French wines and hard liquor for the province. The wine will be as cheap as beer.

Mr. Simard said that at the port of entry, Montreal, the commission runs a control station where every bottle of wine is examined before it is accepted.

"And," he continued, "we find it difficult to keep men working there. Those who taste the wines soon get a hardened taste which makes them useless for the job. We have places open practically all the time for men in that station."

Mr. Simard said that Quebec now is the "last trench" in the fight against prohibition in North America, but that government control of the sale of liquors was proving a big success.

ITALY'S NEW ENVOY TO U. S. IN CITY TODAY

Senator Vittorio Rolandi Ricci, recently appointed Italian ambassador to the United States, will be welcomed today by hundreds of his enthusiastic countrymen when he arrives at 2 o'clock at the Dearborn street station, en route from San Francisco.

A series of luncheons and banquets, massmeetings, visits to Italian schools and hospitals, will feature his six day stay in the city. He will speak, shortly after his arrival, at the Ashland boulevard auditorium.

Nine Reefs Bearing Gold Found in New South Wales

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SYDNEY, May 20.—A promising gold find has been discovered at Muriel Tank, near Canbelego, New South Wales. Experienced prospectors claim there are nine separate reefs, each a mile long, containing ore yielding from thirty to forty ounces to a ton, and an average of twelve ounces to a ton.

SHE'S UP TO STAY.

In the Voice of the People, across the page in this issue, is printed a letter from Thomas E. Fry, written under the letterhead of the insurance firm of Marsh & McLennan, protesting against the continued use of the sentiment of Stephen Decatur at the head of the editorial department of THE TRIBUNE.

Mr. Fry's letter and others of similar protest received from time to time are sufficient reason and good reason for keeping the sentiment nailed to the flagstaff for the next hundred years. So far as the present management of THE TRIBUNE is concerned it's there to stay.

This nation has been described by contemptuous Europeans as a mongrel. It has been tested to the hilt by the admixtures which have come to find new fortunes here. If it were not substantially sound it could not have stood the test. It has.

Nationality is a precious thing. It is a powerful spirituality. It ennobles. It is also material. It represents a protective community of interests. Right and wrong are not black and white. An egotistic man can say, and does say, that he knows which is right and which is wrong. He is a cricket in a fence corner.

It is altogether possible that the foreign policy of an American government would distress the consciences of a great many citizens. Some think that Haiti is a reproach to us now. They think that brutal marines are imposing upon a cultured and defenseless land. THE TRIBUNE thinks that a land of savagery with a fringe of superficial literacy has been brought into a semi-ordered state and that it is the duty of the United States to make it at least semi-ordered.

New Englanders and others in the north thought the war with Mexico was bad. What is bad? Is it bad that Texas is not Chihuahua or Sonora? Vallandigham thought the war with the south was bad. Is it bad that human beings are not being sold down the river in the United States?

Debs thought the war with Germany was bad. Is it bad that the German fleet is not protecting the landing of German divisions in Central American and South American ports and driving the United States, lone and unprepared, to a war with the greatest military power of Europe? Who shall say policies are good or bad? The government through its ordered methods or the midge of a citizen who without responsibility comes to conclusions satisfactory to his egotism?

The structure of a nation does not permit these individual judgments in emergency, and particularly the structure of the United States does not. America has permitted the man from Cork, the man from Berlin, the man from Teheran, the man from Kief, the man from Naples, the man from Stockholm, the man from Glasgow, the man from Lisbon, from Tangiers, from the Congo, from Mesopotamia, from Armenia, and from Siberia, from Kent and from Saxony, from Tuscany and from Brittany, from Quebec and from Coahuila, from Araby and Abyssinia to come here without restriction until recent years and acquire citizenship easily.

Its danger is that in its dealings with other lands it will disintegrate. It was frankly said not long ago that the principal, the only, duty of the Italian ambassador in the United States was to direct the influence of Italians voting in the United States in the interests of Italy. Italians here are urged by their government to nationalize in the United States and help Italy by their votes as American citizens. This is true of other nationalities in spirit if not in form. These alien blocs in the United States tend to break down American purpose conceived purely for American well being.

The United States is regarded as the soft shell crab of nations. It is supposed to be easy to fry. We admit that government mistakes might try the conscience of a citizen, but where will he take his individual judgment when the organized policy of his nation has committed him in a dispute with another nation?

Will he admit that he may in clear conscience be with the other nation? Then how does he expect to keep America, with her diverging elements, an integrated nation? Or does he not care, being in some high altitude of egotism, whether he is a citizen of a nation or an individual in a riot? Possibly he would prefer to be a citizen if he considered nothing more spiritual than his investments and real estate holdings.

Our flag is up to stay. When the American nation makes its decisions in foreign relations we hope that the decisions are justifiable, but if another nation challenges them, and if force is to be the issue, then we are for the United States, right or wrong.

THE FLAPPER AND HER WAYS.

An insurance expert comes to the defense of the flapper. He is interested in health and he declares that some of the things practiced by the flapper deserve approval and not disapprobation. One of these is bobbed hair. Bobbed hair is sanitary. So are skirts that do not drag the ground or impede healthy activity.

We think he is right. Painted faces and giddy conduct have nothing to do with good sense in dress and good sense decrees that dress should be not only adornment but suited to healthy living.

There is more prurience in a good deal of the criticism of so-called exposure than in the styles which the young follow today. Exposure is a matter of custom and familiarity cures the evils it may bring at first. What we want is happy young people, a wholesome happiness, built upon good health, on sound bodies and keen joy in living.

Modesty and self-control are in the mind, not in the length of a skirt, much less in the length of the hair. Modesty comes from good homes and sensible parents.

The trouble with many of the watchdogs of other folk's conduct is that they are so often barking up the wrong tree.

WHAT ARMY REDUCTIONS MEAN.

The alleged economies involved in the army appropriation bill as passed by the house come to 66 cents per capita of the population.

For this pretended saving, as we are told by the men who have given the subject study, we shall have to suspend our plans for army and corps units in the guard—essential to the proper organization of a modern field force—and also withdraw recognition from units already organized. We shall have to suspend organization of coast artillery units, cavalry commands, heavy or motorized artillery, most of the air force, large and important engineer units, as well as other units essential to the proper organization of any arm or corps.

Gen. Harbord, deputy chief of staff, says: "Something must give way; either the training of the citizen soldier, which we regard as our principal business, or the coast defense and ordinary work of the regular army, its readiness for internal or other disturbances."

We are already below the pre-war level of our military strength, and the house proposes we go on down, demoralizing the plans for civilian soldiery which are the foundation of the national effort in war time. The very men who voted for these reductions will talk pompous generalities about the valor of the American citizen soldier and the might of the republic. But the reductions mean that through want of training the valor of the American soldier sends him to slaughter when war comes and the might of the republic, unready and ignorant of its weakness, is unavailable at the hour of need.

Mr. Wilson, in one of the earlier addresses of the war period in which it was revealed that not only congressmen but even the President, though commander in chief of the army and navy, may be ignorant of the essential facts of the national defense, said that the United States places its reliance upon "a citizenry trained and accustomed to arms." Mr. Wilson did not then know that we have placed our reliance on something we have never been willing to provide. We have the citizenry. We call on them to fight when war comes. But we do not see to it that they are ready to fight. We have been ground-springers and minute men and have wasted the lives of our defenders because we have taken our theory out in talk. We have got away with it thus far because we have never had to fight alone a nation prepared to fight.

The house reductions have no shadow of justification in our financial condition or our international situation. They mean that we shall have neither an adequate small regular force nor a citizen force "trained and accustomed to arms."

The senate we pray will stand fast upon the irreducible minimum agreed upon between the war department experts and the bureau of the budget. The President should exercise his influence to bring the false economists of the house to reason.

COOKING THE GOOSE.

George Seldes of THE TRIBUNE Foreign News Service, being in Oberammergau for the Passion Play, learns that American consuls in Bavaria are reporting to Washington the discriminations in prices ordered by the Bavarian government, particularly against Americans. Oberammergau itself has been considerate of its tourists, but in Munich the municipal government has decided that Americans have the money and shall part with it.

The American remedy is simple, as soon as the information has been broadcasted. Wet Americans may think that the Munich beer is worth the price of tarrying where it is brewed. If they don't, they can take their money elsewhere.

NO GOLDEN KEY TO SUCCESS.

James A. Patten marks his seventieth birthday anniversary with the customary advice of successful men to the rising generation—work hard and be frugal.

A middle aged laundress of our acquaintance, who did not have such advice in youth, but nevertheless practices the policy as a habit handed down from her Bavarian ancestors, develops a broader idea of the requisites to success. She speaks from the standpoint of a financial failure, though she has worked hard and been frugal all her life. She has found contentment and happiness in such practices as advocated by the "wheat king," but she has not found the success which he holds out as a reward. Therefore, we believe, she qualifies as a philosopher and expert.

"Work is goot," she says, and proves her belief by doing good work with a cheerfulness and vigor most amazing in these days. But the person who works only with his hands can't get ahead very fast. He's got to work with his head, too, she adds.

The laundress probably represents a class to which the "wheat king's" advice was designed to apply. Therefore her reaction to such advice should be instructive. She has a thought which Mr. Patten may have implied but which he did not make clear. It is the idea that hard work and frugality have their compensation but are not guaranteed to produce success. They mean success only for those who can develop them. They may give stability to others, may safeguard old age or a rainy day, but they do not often in themselves produce affluence. We believe if the advice of men who offer the platitudes of success would emphasize the necessity of combining brains, initiative, imagination, and energy with hard work, they would be less scorned and more generally accepted.

The young man who buys today's pleasure with his last dollar, regardless of the future, undoubtedly needs the advice of hard work and frugality. But the one who sacrifices an immediate pleasure to prepare for future opportunity needs the emphasis upon such advice as would equip him mentally as well as financially to profit by that opportunity when it comes.

In general there may be said to be two kinds of success. One is the financial success in which hard work and frugality prepare the initial means wherewith the worker may plant and tend the seeds of prosperity; the other, one in which the satisfaction of good work well done is the chief reward. Of course, the two may overlap. And also there may be said to be two kinds of failures. In one, lack of hard work and frugality give the worker no ground on which to grow prosperity; the other, one in which lack of initiative and mental power renders even the hard working and frugal man unable to develop his fortune beyond a modest competence.

Both kinds of failure and both kinds of success should be considered by those who would write rules for life. There is no single golden key to material success. Its lock is a combination of many numbers and checks. Hard work and frugality, to be sure, represent the first turn for the great majority, but many more turns and twists of the knob must follow before the door swings open.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

When the white oak leaves unfold corn is planted. Crabs are blossoming. Beans and peas have come out of the loam. The oak leaf is as a graceful, drooping hand, languid in a soft wind. Iris open by the peony, that Queen of Sheba, which has round buds swelling to the sun. Fir and spruce are feathered with new green, virginal in inexperience with north winds and snow, infant points of evergreen which will carry the white of December, but which find life a prospect of everlasting perfumes and of the south wind.

Life is that to youth and also that to experience. The tanager is in the drooping white oak leaves, opened but not outspread, but the cat is on the oak leaves of last summer and makes no sound. Life also is that to youth and that to experience. The commuter knows this, but is anxious to be deceived. The thrush which sings to him must not, in his protective scheme, have a hawk which wants it. The tanager which flashes over his blossoming crabs must not have an owl which thinks of tanagers as bacon.

Corn planting is a time of promise, so generous a grain, so colorful a season. Other lands have vineyards where ancient men wrote, fought, loved, and passed as the thrush will pass. This land has the corn and in its sprouting and ripening there is an objective for life which has everything in prospect and little in experience.

The commuter as he plants his corn knows that his days are good. They will go from him, he knows, as cats walk across the dead oak leaves, without sound and without imprint, but he comes to a season which he feels is ordered from cause to effect, which proceeds from the seed to the ripened grain, from the perfumed blossom to the fruit. He stands on the threshold of cause. He looks ahead through rich warm weeks to effect. There is the peaceful order which the hawk destroys.

PUSH THE SEAWAY.

Nearly four months have passed since the report of the international joint commission, unanimously in favor of the St. Lawrence seaway project, was submitted to the house of representatives and President Harding announced his hearty approval of its findings and decision. At the same time the President announced his intention to instruct the state department at once to negotiate a treaty with Canada under which the seaway could be constructed when properly authorized by congress.

Since that time virtually the only activity apparent in Washington concerning the matter has been on the part of New York interests who are vehemently opposed to the project. They have tried to cloud the issue and delay action in various ways. It begins to appear that they are succeeding, despite the expressed convictions of President Harding and of the representatives of eighteen middle western states and of leading New England interests.

In view of this situation we respectfully appeal to the President to hasten the work of the state department upon the necessary treaty negotiations. That vital phase of the project is in his hands. It should not be allowed to rest longer while opponents of the project continue their attacks. Incidentally, the President must realize that middle western support of his ship subsidy program will cool in direct proportion to the length of time required to authorize and start work upon the canal system which would bring our subsidized ships to the ports of the great lakes. Building of the seaway is essential to securing general support of the subsidy program in the interior of the country.

Editorial of the Day

THE PEOPLE MAKE THE ISSUES.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Patrick H. Kelley and his anti-Republican journalistic sponsor and mentor, the Detroit News, are assuming quite a good deal when they undertake to say what is to be the principal issue in Michigan's coming senatorial campaign. It is not the privilege of any candidate or of any newspaper to determine a matter of this sort. That is the prerogative of the voters. It is the right of the people to say what topics they wish discussed, and what questions they will have answered, and by what measure of judgment candidates are to stand and fall.

Nor can we believe that the citizens of Michigan are going to be deceived or lured into giving the center of the stage to something that is a fake. We are not able to think for an instant that people will permit Mr. Kelley and the News to put their tongues in their cheeks and foist or force on them the manufactured, false issue they call "Newberryism."

No false cry is going to delude or frighten the voters of Michigan into forgetting the long and honorable career of Charles E. Townsend in Washington or the efficient and increasingly able way in which he has represented them in the upper house of congress for almost twelve years. In spite of self-appointed issue makers, the people are going to remember how Mr. Townsend has served them and the whole middle west by fighting year in and year out for the St. Lawrence waterway project until success finally has crowned his efforts. And they are not going to lose sight of this merely because Mr. Kelley doesn't seem to think much of the matter. The voters are going to recollect, too, what Senator Townsend did for rural free delivery and the parcels post by his work in the committee on postoffices and post roads. They are going to recall his stalwart and sane Americanism throughout the war period and his manly and clearsighted course while the fight over the league of nations' covenant was on in the senate.

On the other hand, the voters will with perfect justice consider the record of Mr. Kelley as one of the house leaders in the recent effort to scuttle the navy by denuding it of its personnel to a ruinous degree.

HOLDING OUT.

"Why don't you get rid of that horse if he's so vicious?" asked one farmer of another.

"Well, you see, Jim," replied the other, "I hates to give in. If I was to sell that horse he'd regard it as a personal victory. He's been tryin' for the last six years to get rid of me."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

HORRID THING!

"Now, when a man is silent he usually is thinking, and when a woman is——"

"She usually is dead," snorted the brutal Mr. Grouch.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

YES! SLEEP BEAUTIFIES.

An old sleeping schedule, and one often quoted, is as follows:

Sleep required at different ages:

During the first half of the first year, 23 hours.

Six months to 18 months of age, 20 hours.

The transition from 23 hours to 20 hours is to be gradually effected.

The sleep schedule for the latter part of this year period is less than twenty hours and that for the first part is more.

Two years, 18 hours.
Three years, 16 hours.
Four years, 15 hours.

In lessening the hours of the sleep schedule it is well first to reduce the morning sleep period, then the afternoon sleep period, and, finally, the night period. However, it is well to retain a brief afternoon period, even though it necessitates some reduction in the twelve hour night sleeping period, which is so advantageous in childhood.

Five years, 14 hours.
Six years, 13 hours.
Seven years, 12½ hours.
Eight years, 12 hours.
Nine years, 11½ hours.
Ten years, 11 hours.
Thirteen years, 10½ hours.
Fifteen years, 10 hours.
Seventeen years, 9½ hours.
Nineteen years, 9 hours.
Over 19 years, 8 hours.

This is an old schedule, and as good as any, but it is not perfect, because, in short, it is too perfect. Notice how it drops an hour a year in some stretches.

All humans are not built exactly on one model or one set of specifications. At some points on the route from the cradle to the grave the machine speeds up.

Physical, mental, and social growth have been closely studied. These studies show great variance in speed of change at different life periods.

The next objection to the schedule is that it suggests that individuals of the same chronologic age are all the same in their sleep requirements.

The subject of sleep is a very important one. More important even than nutrition; and I wish there was some way by which it could be studied as closely as growth in stature and weight have been studied. The importance of it begins to be noticed in babyhood. Many babies get into trouble because they are poor sleepers, or maybe we should say that they are poor sleepers because they are in trouble.

I have in mind children given to night terrors; children who sleep poorly in the daytime; poor night sleepers. Some are in trouble because their mothers have trained them into bad sleeping habits, such as night feeding and floor walking, being rocked to sleep, put to sleep with stories—all the too much attention group of trouble makers.

Many older children get into sleep troubles because they play too violently after supper, stay on the streets, go to shows, or do something else which keeps up the brain activity just before the bedtime hours.

Parents might not be guilty of these sins if research on such had made more facts available.

When it comes to the sleep of adults, or, rather, the sleeplessness of adults, of all bad habits, the worst is fear that one cannot sleep and worry because one is not sleeping.

Recently several articles by scientific physicians of broad experience have appeared. When their directions are boiled down they come exactly to the position of a woman who wrote to this column many years ago of her method.

The plan is this: Go quietly to bed, prepared to accept what comes without worry, anxiety, or repining.

If sleep, all right.

If wakefulness, all right. At least physical rest would be achieved.

Every one who retires in this spirit of Christian resignation will sleep.

CUT DOWN FOOD, NOT WATER.

N. M. writes: "Nearly all of the 'How to Gat Thin' articles that I have read say not to drink water at meals. Some say drink little all the time. What about this? What in H2O could add to one's fatty tissue? Or does water with food make the food more easily absorbed? If so, should the thin drink water with meals to fatten?

"I am slightly overweight, so avoid fats and starches, but I do drink a lot of water, as I exercise a good deal."

REPLY.

A famous German cure for obesity limited the daily allowance of water and prohibited drinking of water with meals.

I presume the thought was that in this way there would result lessened absorption of food.

Hawk proved that drinking a moderate amount of water with meals and within two hours afterwards promoted digestion.

If you tend to become obese, limit your intake of food, but do not disturb your digestion by taking too little water.

LUNG AIR BUBBLES.

J. W. writes: "Will you kindly give me the definition of rale on the lung and why it more often appears in climate of lower altitude rather than high, and the best way to cure it?"

REPLY.

A rale is a sound made by air bubbling through fluid in a bronchial tube, generally in a small tube.

The presence of rales, therefore, means that some part of the lung contains mucus, pus, blood, water, or other fluid.

When rales are heard in the lungs consumption, pneumonia, bronchitis, asthma, or some other disease is the cause.

The cure depends on the disease which causes the symptom.

FOR "FLAPPER SLOUCH."

Miss G. S. writes: "1. Should a round shouldered person wear braces?

"2. Or should one exercise?"

REPLY.

1. No.
2. Yes.

Row, swim, climb a pole, rope, or ladder, do gymnasium work on the bars, ladders, and ropes.

NEWPORT AVENUE.

Chicago, May 13.—[Friend of the People.]—The street paving in front of our house has sunk, causing an awful jar when cars or trucks go by. We have tried repeatedly to have this fixed, but failed. Also will you please state when Newport avenue will be opened between Lavergne and Le Claire avenues? A. C.

The contractor has been notified to make repairs on Roscoe street, between Cicero and Long.

The entire assessment has not yet been collected for opening Newport avenue between Lavergne and Laramie avenues. As soon as the entire assessment has been collected and all the awards paid for property to be taken or damaged, we will get order of court, and the city will take possession of the street. EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary Board of Local Improvements.

GOODS MISREPRESENTED.

Crystal Lake, Ill., May 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Over a year ago I bought a machine on time as a new machine. It was three years old and no good, as pronounced by one of the salesmen. I refuse to pay more on it. I notified them to take it away. As the law allows me $400 worth of furniture, what can they do about it? J. H. S.

Without knowing whether the machine is an automobile or a sewing machine, we are not in a position to advise to advantage as to your rights, which depend largely upon the wording of the contract. In general, it is difficult for a creditor to collect if the debtor is head of the family and has less than $400 worth of property and less than $15 a week income.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DAMAGED PROPERTY.

Chicago, May 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A building is sold, but before changing hands a window pane is broken by one of the old tenants. The tenant has a lease saying the landlord is not responsible for any damages. Can the new landlord be required to furnish a new pane of glass? J. B.

Ordinarily the tenant is obliged to put up the premises at the end of his term in the same condition as when he took them. We see no ground for an exception on the bare facts stated.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

EMPLOY AN ATTORNEY.

Chicago, May 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man and wife own a house and two lots in joint tenancy. They sell the property on the contract and installment plan. The contract reads that the deed for one of the lots is to be delivered upon a certain cash payment. The wife becomes insane about six months later. Now, can the husband deliver a good deed to this lot if all conditions of the contract have been taken care of by the buyer? The contract was, of course, signed by both husband and wife when the down payment was made. F. C. M.

Legal proceedings will probably be necessary, for which an attorney should be employed.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WHO OWNS THE FURNITURE?

Chicago, May 13.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Does a man have any legal right to come back and claim furniture in his wife's home after he has been away for two years and has never supported her? The wife has been earning her own living keeping roomers. L. H. B.

Depends on the facts. If the wife has bought the furniture with money that she herself earned then the husband has no claim on it.

AGAINST DECATUR.

Marsh & McLennan, Insurance, Chicago, May 11.—Robert R. McCormick, Co-Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE: Some two years ago I sent a protest to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE against that sentiment of Stephen Decatur, which for years has stood at the head of THE TRIBUNE'S editorial column, but it did no good. I now appeal to you as its co-editor.

I said then, as I now repeat, that it is a piece of rank "chauvinism" which did its bit as a "war measure" while we were in the world war, but were better laid aside now. I am sure it is not the sentiment today of the intelligent better classes of the American people. It is this same unreasoning chauvinism that is threatening the peace of Europe. You, yourself, in effect, if not in so many words, emphasize it in your current admirable letters in THE TRIBUNE on European affairs. I might, as a side thought, question whether a man, however brave and patriotic, who held the mistaken ideas of his day regarding the vindication of personal "honor" and following their dictation, engaged in and lost his life in a duel, was fitted to become a permanent mentor to the American nation. Respectfully but earnestly submitted. THOMAS E. FRY.

A NEW EXPLANATION OF OPPOSITION TO THE BONUS.

Chicago, May 13.—The bonus question seems to be unduly agitating the minds of the politicians at the present time. What seems to bother some of them, especially in Washington, is the problem of dealing with the question so as to make a pretense of keeping faith with the ex-soldier and the American people while at the same time obeying the commands of big business communicated to Washington by way of Wall street.

I believe there are but few of those who represent the people at Washington who are opposed to the bonus of their own free will. However, pressure is brought to bear upon these representatives by agencies of greed and selfishness which disregard any right of humanity that may interfere with their selfish purpose of abasing the American people to enhance the plutocrats' bespotted fortunes.

Perhaps the capitalists are not opposed to the bonus in so far as its benefit to the ex-soldier individually is concerned, but I believe capital is opposed to the bonus because it will materially reduce competition in the field of labor.

The eyesore of our greedy industrial organizations of today is independence of labor. It is evident that adjusted compensation to three million or more men, most of whom are in the ranks of overstocked labor, will have a tendency to induce a feeling of independence among those affected. Many of these men will venture into other fields of endeavor in which they will receive the fruits of their own labor.

The withdrawal of these thousands of men from the overstocked labor supply will naturally induce some independence in the ranks of labor not affected by the payment of adjusted compensation. This, I believe, is what a few selfish industrial combinations and individual profiteers are afraid of, and is apparently the reason why they are fighting against the payment of adjusted compensation to ex-service men.

A. F. WALLINE.

INCLUDE THE BOOTLEG JOINT IN THE LIST OF UNDESIRABLES.

Burr Oak, Mich., May 13.—I want to congratulate you on your editorial in this morning's issue of the W. G. N. Your list of undesirables that have found a home in Chicago is almost complete, but like Harrison L. Hasher in The Line, there is something you "left out." How about the booze joints which furnish a hiding place for criminals and a sure open way for their escape? Dry up these wet spots. Close up these outlawed dens where criminals congregate and there will not be so many of them paying "their way from wherever they are to Chicago," for then this great city will not be the "haven of the criminal" it has been. And then perhaps our greatest newspaper can find something for headlines beside the itemized and pictured details of murders, divorce proceedings and regular devilties of all kinds. Clean up!

MRS. MARY A. HOOLE.

KEEP THE LAGOON IN THE SOUTH PARK PLAN.

Chicago, May 12.—In reference to your editorial of Wednesday, May 11, relative to the south shore lagoon, I will presume to express an opinion, admitting that I am not informed as to the presupposed future difficulties suggested by Mr. Paine.

It would be my opinion that the plan should be brought to completion at the earliest possible date as originally outlined, and that if the future proved the lagoon to be undesirable, the additional expense of filling it would not be much greater than the cost at present, were the land to be made out to what is now planned as the eastern line of the outer driveway.

Should that necessity arise, the principal loss to the community would be the cost of construction of bridges as shown on the existing plan, and even is the bridges there might be some saving.

It has been the unfortunate history of Chicago in all matters of civic improvement on a large scale, that too much discussion was permitted to interfere with and delay the completion of the several projects, after once the plans had been decided upon. In this, as in every improvement heretofore made, the deferred benefit from these improvements during the periods of argument and discussion, have undoubtedly been a greater loss to the community, to say nothing of the loss on money invested in incompleted projects, than if the original plans were completed and changes made at a later date should they be found necessary.

One disgraceful example now existing of the results of interruptions here referred to may be found in the horrible condition at present of Roosevelt road east of Canal street.

It would appear by all means the best policy to get the south shore improvement finished without further delay.

IRVING N. KLEIN.

FOR AUXILIARY POLICE TO CHECK CRIME.

Chicago, May 11.—"War on the Jungle!" is fine, just the right spirit, but to make war one must have troops. The police admit they are more or less impotent, too few in numbers to cover so large a territory and cope with so well organized force of crooks, gunmen and such—backed up by politicians and others who profit by their work. Therefore the only way to make war, real war, is to add numbers to the police. One way is an auxiliary citizen-special police, two or three thousand business men, club men, ex-service men (properly picked by the Chicago Association of Commerce and such bodies that will not select political henchmen and crooks' aids), armed and sent about their regular business but keeping their eyes open and ever ready to help the regular police, to pop off holdup men and others of that ilk. Such an armed citizen force would do wonders.

Letters in THE TRIBUNE issues of Feb. 17 and Jan. 27 last go into details anent the work. F. W. FITZPATRICK.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE GRASS.

By Emily Dickinson.

The grass so little has to do—
A sphere of simple green,
With only butterflies to brood
And bees to entertain,

And stir all day to pretty tunes
The breezes fetch along,
And hold the sunshine in its lap,
And bow to everything;

And thread the dews all night, like pearls,
And make itself so fine
A duchess were too common
For such a noticing.

And even, when it does, to pass
In odor so divine,
As lowly spices gone to sleep,
Or amulets of pine.

And then to dwell in sovereign barns,
And dream the days away—
The grass so little has to do,
I wish I were the hay!

GOVERNOR'S RACE IN OREGON HANGS ON VOTE OF KLAN

Reported Opposition Costly to Incumbent.

Portland, Ore., May 20.—Complete unofficial returns from eleven counties, including Multnomah, containing Portland, and incomplete figures from the other twenty-five in the state tonight cut the lead of Charles Hall, state senator, over Gov. Ben W. Olcott for the Republican nomination for governor to 739.

The totals were: Hall, 42,235; Olcott, 41,946.

The final hot week of the primary campaign reached a climax in Gov. Olcott's acrimonious attack on the Ku Klux Klan and a reported widespread movement on the part of Klan sympathizers in support of Hall.

Republican candidates on the state ticket who were given credit in general discussion with having the indorsement of the Federated Patriotic societies and Ku Klux Klan included Hall for governor and O. P. Hoff for treasurer.

Societies' Entries Leading.

Success of candidates reputed to bear the endorsement of the Federated Patriotic societies were more general on the Multnomah county local ticket than anywhere else. Here these candidates made practically a clean sweep of the nominations for which they contested.

For the Democratic nomination for governor, Walter M. Pierce had a substantial lead on available returns, his total being 5,224, and the next highest, Harvey G. Starkweather, having 3,408.

For congressmen, the incumbents in all three districts appear to have been nominated on the Republican ticket to succeed themselves.

Choice for Treasurer Ahead.

O. P. Huff, state treasurer, had 42,657 for renomination, against 37,094 for Thomas F. Ryan. There was no Democratic candidate for this office.

For the recall of Fred Williams of the state public service commission the vote was 43,225 yes and 23,721 no. On the vote to fill the place the tally was T. M. Kerrigan 29,603, Williams 19,036.

For the recall of Public Service Commissioner Fred G. Buchtel the vote was 39,508 yes and 21,556 no. To fill the position the vote was Buchtel 16,347, Newton McCoy 17,885, Edward W. Ostrander 9,902.

Pinchot's Lead Increases.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 20.—Gifford Pinchot has a lead of 13,992 over Attorney General George E. Alter for the Republican nomination for governor, with only 143 of the 7,934 districts in the state still unreported. Returns from 7,791 districts give Pinchot a total of 505,560 and Alter 491,568.

For the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor Robert E. Pattison Jr., son of the former governor, is leading Robert D. McAvoy by more than 5,000 in returns received from twenty-nine counties. The vote stands: Pattison, 27,388; McAvoy, 22,186.

BLOOD TEST FOR MEN WHO MARRY IN ARGENTINA

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, May 20.—Prospective bridegrooms in Argentina do not have troubles enough to fluster them to their full capacity of being flustered, so legislation is now being prepared to give them something to really worry about. So far their troubles have been confined to only two weddings required by law and custom, whereas one is usually sufficient to worry most men gray.

The law requires a ceremony before civil authorities, with at least four witnesses and a public recitation of pedigree. The church requires another, in the belief that the marriage will not "take" properly with only the civil ceremony.

A recently elected deputy has prepared a bill, which he will present to congress next week, requiring all men to submit themselves to a blood test fifteen days before their marriage. The test must be made by a public medical authority and not a private physician.

Wise Motorists
arrange their trips so they can dine at the North American before they start and after they return. Some also have us pack up a picnic lunch with fried chicken and other delectable items which are always ready here for this purpose.

A real country order of
here for only 65 cents

Eating fried chicken out in the country may be fun but it's mighty costly. And often a very uncomfortable meal. Why not stop here before your motor trip—or after your return. Here you will avoid all the heat, and the dust and dirt of the roads. The North American Restaurant is known as the best ventilated restaurant in Chicago. It is cool and comfortable always—no matter what the weather.

For 65 cents you may have a delicious breast of chicken—hot from the pan—with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce. Or, for 55 cents dark meat of chicken. And better fried chicken cannot be gotten anywhere—

A. A. A. DIVIDED; CHICAGO CLUB'S ACTIVITY CAUSE

Autoists of Country Split in Convention.

St. Louis, Mo., May 20.—Declaring the split in the ranks of the American Automobile association over alleged violation of the association's constitution to be permanent, the "insurgents" began tonight making arrangements for the formation of a new organization to be known as the National Automobile association. Extension of the activities of the Chicago Motor club, headed by Charles M. Hayes, into territory of other clubs, affiliated with the national organization precipitated the break after the seventy-two Chicago delegates had been seated by a close vote.

Twelve States in "Bolt."

Ninety delegates representing twelve states and a membership of 243,000 joined the "insurgents." Besides the Chicago delegates, forty-seven others voted to seat the Chicago representation.

Charges that the Chicago club had sold insurance and other service not provided by the constitution were made by those opposing the Chicago delegates. It was also alleged the Chicago club recently had left the Illinois State Auto association and thus forfeited its right of representation in the national body.

Leaders of Old Body.

Following the bolt, the American Automobile association concluded its session. The newly elected officers of the organization are:

George Diehl of Buffalo, president; Arthur Fifoot, Hartford, Conn., secretary, and H. A. Bonnell, New York, treasurer.

The committee of the bolting faction, charged with the organization of the new body, is composed of the following delegation:

Fred H. Caley, Cleveland, chairman; Charles G. Jones, Columbus, O.; N. E. Noblet, Indianapolis, Ind.; Richard R. Lee, and Henry Paulmon of Chicago; B. H. Hagerman, Kansas City, Mo.; Eugene Stewart, and H. R. Keltig, Louisville, Ky.; Edwin S. Mosely, Dallas, Tex.; G. E. Gillespie, Lincoln, Neb.; W. Q. Winship, St. Paul, Minn.; M. P. Lawler, St. Joseph, Mo.; A. G. Lupton, Hartford, Ind., and Walter G. Meals, Cleveland, O.

BIG CHIMES TO GREET VISITORS AT PIER PAGEANT

Arrangements were completed yesterday for installing the largest chimes in the world, which will greet visitors to the Pageant of Progress exposition from July 29 to Aug. 14 on the Municipal pier. President John Dill Robertson of the Pageant of Progress exposition made arrangements with James G. Geagan, special representative of the Deagan Interests, manufacturers of church chimes, for the installation. The chimes will be placed between the two towers at the west end of the pier—the entrance to the exposition.

"We are pleased with the opportunity of presenting to the visitors to the Pageant of Progress exposition the music from our tower chimes," declared Mr. Geagan. "When the weather is clear it will be possible for persons within a radius of a mile or two to hear the music played on the chimes, and it is hoped that we will be able to present many beautiful musical features during the exposition on the pier."

Pitiful Publicity

Vice President Calvin Coolidge stopped off in Chicago yesterday, on the way to the Presbyterian general assembly at Des Moines, Ia., and had a word to say about Chicago's crime war and her boys.

"The abuse of the habeas corpus writ by criminals and their attorneys is a menace to the city," he said. "Eastern newspapers are devoting columns of space to your crime wave.

"Boys' week is the most important seven days of the year. The spirit shown by your lads Friday, marching through the rain, was impressive."

of the Roesbank weaving factory on the Crumlin road, bound him, and set the building on fire. Sharp rioting followed, in which the military used machine guns, two persons being killed and many others wounded.

Two men, McMurtrie and McDermott, were shot dead tonight in Belfast harbor. These killings raised the number of deaths today to eight and the total for the last week to twenty-seven.

Three Protestants Die; Catholic Killed.

Three men who were shot upon, avowing themselves Protestants, died during the night. Two men today entered the sawmills in the York street area, inquired the religion of the various workers, and shot dead a Catholic, John Connolly, apparently in reprisal for a similar shooting in the case of a Protestant yesterday.

Shames castle, the county Antrim home of Lord O'Neill, whose son is speaker of the Ulster house of commons was burned today by forty men said to be from Tyrone. The caretaker was wounded while defending the castle.

The Ballynane station in County Antrim, near Portglenone was badly damaged by raiders. The Martinsdown station on the Cushendall line, and also the police barracks there, have been destroyed. A group of special constables on their way to relieve the contingent at the Martinstown barracks were ambushed. One constable was killed and another was wounded.

Burn Home of Craig's Friend.

The summer residence of Cushendun, county Antrim, belonging to Ronald O'Neill, a close friend of Premier Craig, was burned today. The town of Cushendall was held four hours by 150 raiders, who after burning the Northern bank attacked the police barracks but were beaten off.

The barracks at Ballycastle, near the scene of the sinking of the American troop ship Tuscania during the war, was attacked with bombs but the police finally repulsed the assailants.

Raids also occurred in County Down, where the Castlewellan barracks were attacked, the railroad depot at Laurencetown was burned.

Reports received here this afternoon said that three of the raiders in the attack on the Castlewellan barracks were killed and ten others captured.

In the same district, which is along the coast, the old court castle, the residence of Lord De Ros, holder of the oldest baronetcy in the British empire, was burned.

STATE PLANS TO "BRIDGE GAPS" IN SMALL EVIDENCE

Waukegan, Ill., May 20.—[Special.]—At a conference of attorneys for the state in the trial of Gov. Len Small today it was determined to begin at once the presentation of evidence to "bridge the gaps" in transactions with state funds which have been shown by testimony during the last week.

For that reason the first witnesses from Chicago banks through which state funds passed en route to investment in packers' notes will be called on Tuesday. Monday will be taken up with the testimony of witnesses from Swift & Co. and Morris & Co., but when this has been disposed of the evidence concerning investments in Wilson and Cudahy paper will be allowed to go over until later dates.

Under the plan now adopted the prosecution will call witnesses from the Fort Dearborn National bank and the Live Stock Exchange National bank.

The lawyers for the state say that if the introduction of this evidence proceeds as rapidly as it did last Thursday afternoon and Friday they may complete the presentation of their evidence in the next two weeks. The plans of the defense in reference to evidence have not been disclosed, but close observers of the proceedings believe there is some reason to think that the case may go to the jury by July 1.

Kewanee Boilers don't leak

Do you know why you have been forced to play Eskimo at odd times dur- the Winter? No, you don't! All you know is that the heat's not doing its share of the work, and that your yells to the janitor for "more heat" are about as effective as the horse which is "all action and no speed."

The chances are that you have been living over a boiler that is of the type that every now and then springs a leak in the joints, and everything has to shut down until the leak is plugged up. That's when you become the merry Eskimo or go to bed to keep warm.

Every apartment in this country houses people who like to enjoy life while they are living. If these apartments have Kewanee All-Steel Boilers in them, there can't be any leaky joints because Kewanees have no joints, And there are no "shut-downs" or cessations of heat.

Kewanee Boilers are made of steel boiler plate riveted together in one piece at the factory. They are not assembled, piece by piece, on the job. And every apartment that has them installed, is always worth more in heating, renting and selling power.

Look in the basement first.

The Old Man Behind the Boiler has been making Kewanees since Noah was a boy. Write him today and let him tell you how to heat the modern building.

MIDWEST KEEPS STEADY PACE IN TRADE REVIVAL

Farm and Building Work Provide Jobs for Idle.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A birdseye view of the middle west indicates that industry is reviving and unemployment is diminishing at a steady pace both in the smaller communities and the large manufacturing centers.

Apart from the idleness in the coal mines, the upper Mississippi valley is registering a general May improvement over April, as denoted in the industrial survey of the employment service of the United States department of labor.

Steel and iron have more than 6 per cent more men at work than in April, and vehicles for land transportation have increased their payrolls more than 10 per cent. In the Gary sector the steel mills are running 85 per cent of normal, and there is a shortage of common labor which employers ascribe to a chop in wages for unskilled hands to 30 and 25 cents an hour.

Auto Towns Busy Again.

In the automotive towns factories have picked up with rapidity. Cities in Michigan which suffered among the hardest from the slump are now taking on an air of prosperity—some plants report a shortage of skilled mechanics.

Building construction and the installation of public improvements are hitting a boom pace, while the agricultural regions are absorbing much farm labor, some sections reporting a shortage of experienced hands. In the building trades the demand for carpenters, plasterers, bricklayers, and other craftsmen in every city reporting is at least equal to the supply, and at some points it exceeds the supply.

"The optimistic attitude of the farmer is reflected in the unprecedented demand for high class farm help," says the department of labor.

Conditions in Illinois.

A detailed survey of the middle west just issued by the United States employment service shows the following conditions prevailing in the territory tributary to Chicago:

Illinois—Iron and steel industries made a gain of 5.4 per cent May 1 over April. Farm implement factories show a decided revival. Improvement is general in all lines of leather; manufactures of building materials employed many more people. Pianos, shoes, and wearing apparel entered upon a season of lighter operations. Paper and printing industries increased employes; cotton goods manufacturers greatly increased working forces; road work opened up.

Indians—A quickening of industrial operations in the steel industry has been an important factor in improved conditions. A revival of construction work has embraced activity in the lumber, cement, brick, building tile, plumbing materials, building hardware and glass industries.

Michigan—Preparation for opening of summer resorts is relieving the employment situation somewhat. Automotive industry is making decided gains. Much overtime for the first time in months. The continual improvement in the automobile business and general financial conditions has brought about a big demand and rush orders for wheels, increasing employment. There has been extensive road construction around the Green Bay region.

Wisconsin—Gradual increase in the number of factory employes and opening up of outdoor work will relieve the situation materially. The road program for work around Sheboygan has been extended, and $450,000 to $500,000 will be spent in this county. An active building program is being entered into in many places. Local industries in the smaller towns and cities are improving.

Minnesota—Employment in the building trades is on the increase. Offices are unable to supply the demand for farm labor. State and municipal road work is absorbing a large number of idle men. Railroad shops gradually increasing forces. Iron mining in the northeastern section, which was retarded by the unusually late opening of navigation, is slowly recovering.

Iowa — Employment is improving, the demand for farm labor being strong. In the larger cities building tradesmen are well employed, but this cannot be said of smaller towns. Employment in railway shops is increasing. Shoe industries report fair employment, as also do printing and publishing establishments, foundry and machine products, with future prospects in the latter industries reported better.

Missouri—Employment has materially increased, due to increased building operations and additional road and paving projects. Railroads are slowly adding to their forces. Extreme moisture holds back the usual spring demand for farm help. Domestic and office help is in much better demand.

Dakotas Need Farmers.

Dakotas — Although spring farm work is a little backward, there is a steady and increasing demand for experienced farm labor. The supply is rapidly absorbed. Decided shortage of female domestic help on farms. A particular demand for Scandinavian farm help exists.

Nebraska—Packing shows continued improvement and steadier employment is noted. An outstanding feature of present building operations is the large number of apartments and dwelling houses. Basic industries report increased employment.

Kansas—The call for farm labor is steady, but held back somewhat by unsettled weather. Better conditions are expected with a stimulating demand for experienced farm help. Skilled workers are fairly well employed. Packing houses operating nearly normal. Flour mills on part time, many workers having been laid off recently. Railroad shops gradually increasing forces.

Wife Says Her Husband Threatens by Headlines

Peter P. Gilday, 4349 West Madison street, was put under a $1,000 peace bond yesterday by Judge William L. Morgan of the Chicago avenue police court. Mrs. Grace Gilday, 3911 Rokeby street, exhibited to the judge two newspaper clippings. "Slays man who broke up home," one of them read. Mrs. Gilday contended that her husband had mailed the clippings to her as a threat. Mrs. Gilday recently got a divorce.

BEAUTIFUL WILLOW PARK

BEGIN small if you will—but put as much money as you can spare into Chicago Real Estate. To make big profits in City Real Estate you must step in ahead of assured improvements, such as are today surrounding WILLOW PARK, but not yet completed.

Nothing like WILLOW PARK has been offered to the people of Chicago since the war. The prices are way down now. Examine this beautiful property, check up on the $35,000,000 improvements in Boulevards and Bridges, then decide for yourself how fast values in WILLOW PARK will shoot upward.

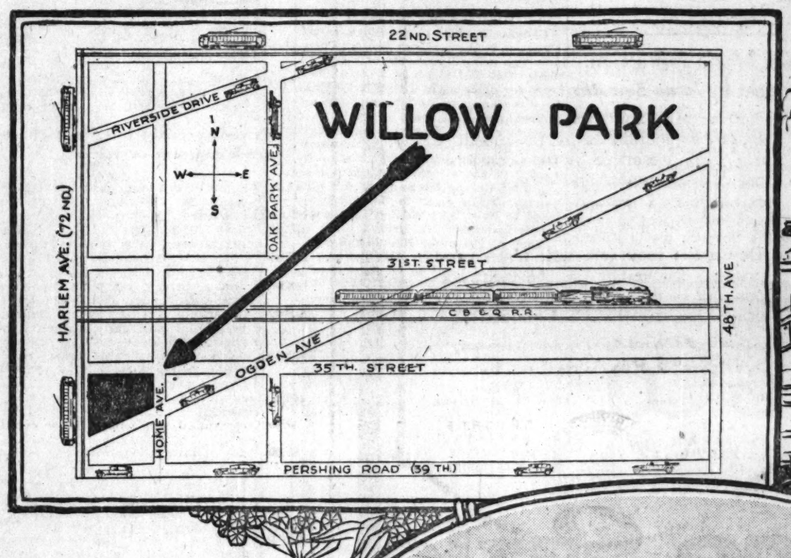
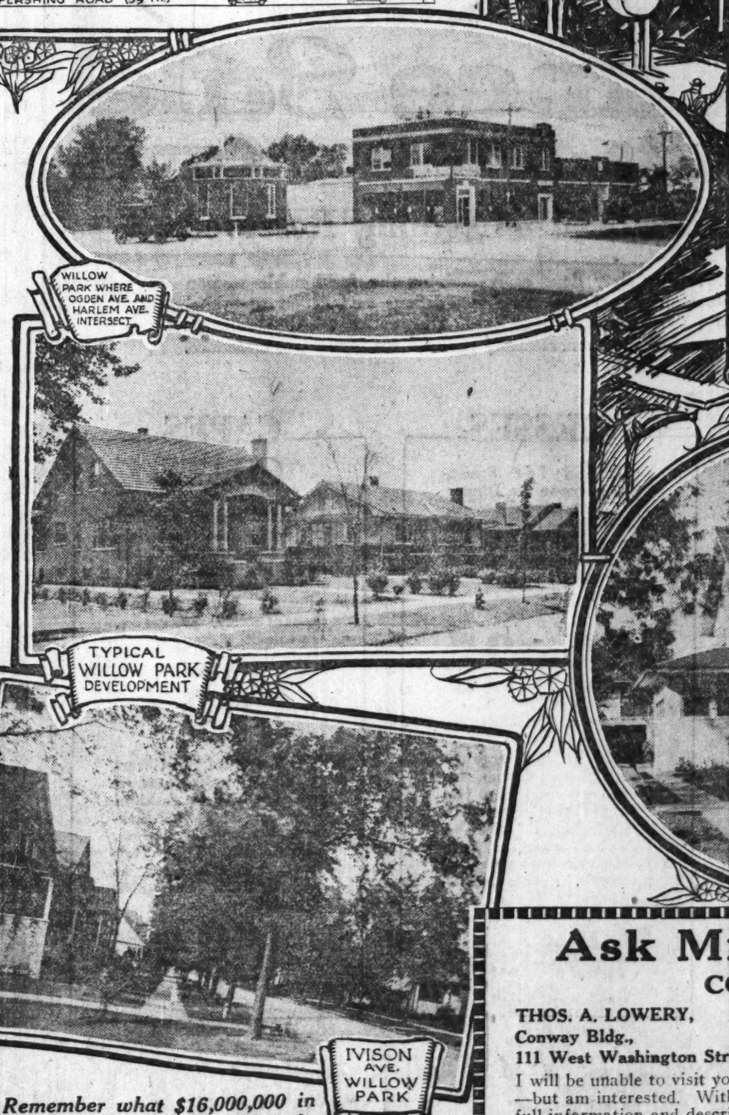
Just a limited number of Chicago men and women are going to wake up in time to take advantage of this low price, big value, sure profit opportunity. Everybody cannot be accommodated—there are less than 300 lots in WILLOW PARK remaining for sale—so the first ones to step in are going to reap WILLOW PARK'S Golden Real Estate Harvest. You can act now—or be too late.

A Ten-Dollar Bill Entitles you to a ten-day reservation





What You Want to Know About Willow Park

Sewer, water and sidewalks in and paid for, and paving and gas on Home Avenue and on 35th Street.

Ogden Avenue a concrete road leading to down town.

C. B. & Q., with 83 trains a day, 4 minutes from property—22 minutes from loop.

Surface transportation passes the property.

Grade school one block away. Churches on all sides.

Stores and shops in immediate neighborhood. A good local club three blocks away.

No factories to spoil character of town.

Restricted to high class residences and two-flats.

Beautiful property today and we have highly improved its development and preserved its beauty.

The entire district is to be zoned.

3,200 lots sold last year along Burlington line.

Harlem and Ogden Avenues—business streets.

Willow Park ready to set a new increase in Value Record

If you have kept posted on values, you know that over 10,000 fortunes have been made out of Chicago Real Estate in the last ten years. For big profits and a quick turnover, WILLOW PARK is the outstanding property today—and it is going to be taken up quickly.

Stop and think. On every side, turn which way you will, Chicago has been enriching its people by a marvelous and hitherto unprecedented growth. Consistently for the last ten years Chicago Real Estate values have been soaring upwards, actually producing quicker fortunes than were made in digging gold, drilling oil wells or developing this country's natural resources. Because the big opportunity is here—right under their noses—many do not realize this—and for this reason now is your chance to step in.

I am not making mere claims—here is the proof: Flashing billboards on Michigan Avenue announce that local improvements costing $16,000,000 created increased property values of $100,000,000. WILLOW PARK is the center of improvements amounting to $35,000,000.

Let's look around. The Lawrence Avenue improvement (not yet begun) advanced property values for four blocks to almost undreamed of heights—from $150 to $1,700 a front foot.

Out near Calvary Cemetery there is a tract, formerly known as "No Man's Land." For years it went begging—today it is being bought at prices ranging from $200 to $2,000 per front foot.

Values in Albany Park and Edgewater have increased 1,400% in ten years. What happened to values along Sheridan Road, in Rogers Park, along Devon Avenue and on all the main section line streets of Chicago? Values went up, and up, and up. When you get the real facts about Chicago Real Estate fortunes, then answer the question, "What does this mean to you?" What will it mean to you if you step in now and take advantage of WILLOW PARK prices as they are today, before the $35,000,000 improvements are completed?

WILLOW PARK—convenient to the Loop

Study the Location Diagram on this page. WILLOW PARK is as near to the Loop as Rogers Park. It has better transportation than the North Shore, with 83 trains a day and 22 minute service. A surface line runs along this property on Harlem Avenue. Rapid transit is just two blocks away. Its southern boundary is the important Ogden Avenue, today a paved highway, and to be converted into a 100-foot Boulevard along its entire length to Lincoln Park and the Lake. Daily over this boulevard will pass nearly as much traffic as over Sheridan Road. It is one of the finest motor routes in Cook County and is destined to be one of Chicago's finest boulevards.

One-half block away from WILLOW PARK is the great Pershing Road development, which also will be a 100-foot boulevard, with a street car line from Lake Michigan to the Des Plaines River, at which point will be located the largest Zoological Gardens in the world.

Harlem Avenue improvement also to enhance Willow Park values

The foregoing are only a part of the $35,000,000 improvements directly benefiting WILLOW PARK. On the west, WILLOW PARK is bounded by Harlem Avenue, a 100-foot street, which will connect Pershing Road and Ogden Avenue with the Higgins Road on the northwest side.

Just think what it will mean to you to have an ownership in WILLOW PARK! In a few years it will be accessible to every part of Chicago and Cook County by boulevard. Not one, or two, or three—but by four great arteries which will be main thoroughfares of traffic and commerce.

Read this carefully, too: Oak Park Avenue will connect WILLOW PARK with Oak Park and Austin. Pershing Road will open to WILLOW PARK, both by boulevard and street car, the entire South Side. Ogden Avenue will connect it directly with Lincoln Park, running diagonally across the entire West Side. Over Harlem Avenue you can reach the Northwest Side and entire Forest Preserve section of Cook County.

This is why I say that a property with as many assured advantages as WILLOW PARK has not been offered to the public since the war—and, if you know Chicago as I do, you will add that it will never be repeated during your lifetime. So I urge you to step in now!

WILLOW PARK—center of Home and Business Development

WILLOW PARK—the Beautiful—is in the heart of a tremendously active home and business development. On every side there are homes costing from $5,000 to $50,000, while stores, shops, schools and churches add to its value—a wonderful place in which to live and today's most attractive real estate investment.

By referring again to the Location Diagram on this page, you will note how Ogden Avenue and Pershing Road, in conjunction with Harlem Avenue, make this a valuable spot. It is not necessary that you be a Real Estate Expert to understand what this means. Note, too, that Home Avenue, another boulevard, is the eastern boundary of WILLOW PARK. Notice the car line on Harlem Avenue and the C., B. & Q. Ry. station only two blocks away.

History is repeating itself at WILLOW PARK. All property along transportation is now going up—and will continue to rise in value with each succeeding month.

WILLOW PARK is not only favored with adequate transportation, but is improved with sewer, water, gas and sidewalks—a well drained property, beautified with 40-year-old shade trees. There is only one WILLOW PARK—highly developed and its beauty preserved.

SUNDAY AUTOS, BUT NO MOVIES, SAY CHURCHMEN

Presbyterians to War on Sabbath Shows.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—[Special.]—Presbyterian automobilists can still get the fresh air on Sunday and keep the law of the church, according to a vote today at the Presbyterian general assembly.

The report of the committee of the Sabbath observance which condemned Sunday movies and unnecessary Sunday work of all kinds was adopted without dissent. Then the Rev. George A. Hill, Crawfordsville, Ind., introduced a supplementary resolution to "discourage the use of the automobile on the Sabbath except for attendance on Sabbath services and works of mercy."

Several "no's" at once came from commissioners. A motion which defeated the resolution by laying it on the table was carried by a rising vote of 314 to 233.

War on Sunday Movies.

The Rev. H. L. Bowlby, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, expressed faith in the good intentions of Will Hayes, movie authority and Presbyterian elder, to clean up the movies, but declared war on movies whether or not Hayes acted.

"While we have faith in Mr. Hayes as a Presbyterian elder," said the Rev. Mr. Bowlby, "we are waiting to see what he is able to put across. However, if the movies don't clean up for six days in the week and clear out on the seventh day, our sword is unsheathed and we will fight the commercialized movie trust to a finish.

"I had a very satisfactory interview with Mr. Hayes, and I am looking to him to lead us out of the domination of the unclean things.

Ah, Times Have Changed.

"Mr. Hayes told of asking some boys as to who were the greatest heroes today. They replied Bill Hart and Doug. 'When you and I were boys,' Mr. Hayes said, 'we would have replied, if we had been asked such a question, 'Washington and Lincoln.' The Rev. Mr. Bowlby classified the 'greedy movie picture trust,' the National Sporting club, and the fanatic Seventh Day Adventists as the enemies of the Christian Sabbath.

"We have defeated every effort made to break down Sunday laws in fourteen legislatures this last year," he said. "We expect to fight battles for Sunday legislation in forty-three states this next year. We are helping in the fight at Ames, Ia., where the town has voted out Sunday movies, and we will go anywhere our aid is asked.

The American Bible society reported that it had distributed 2,000,000 copies of the scriptures in China and the general assembly voted approval of its work.

The Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D. D., one of the secretaries of the board of foreign missions, in reporting for the Presbyterian commission in coöperation with the World Alliance for International Friendship through the churches said:

"We protest against the Hearst papers and the Sinn Fein in their campaign of vilification of our noble ally, Great Britain, and in stirring up hostility with Japan."

A COUPLE OF FOLLIES

Marion Brink, at left, and Virginia Venable are two of the many attractive young women who will take part in the Junior Follies of 1922, to be presented today at the Illinois theater by pupils of the Chicago School of Expression and Dramatic Art under the direction of Bozena Gueldner.

Sunday Movie Injunction Sought by Iowa Theater

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—Attorneys for the Ames moving picture house interests today applied to Chief Justice Stevens of the Iowa Supreme court for an injunction restraining the city of Ames from enforcing an ordinance barring Sunday movies, pending an appeal to the Supreme court. Justice Stevens took the case under advisement.

DOCUMENTS TELL HOW DAUGHERTY "HELPED MORSE"

Demands Daugherty Resign.

The climax of the discussion in the senate came when Senator Caraway called upon the attorney general to resign his office.

"I say there is but one decent thing for the attorney general to do," he said, "and that is to resign. He ought not to embarrass the administration by longer continuing in office, because he has not denied for a whole week this statement in the record that he induced Felder, his close associate and former colleague, in the procuring of the pardon or commutation of sentence for Morse, to hire the government's witnesses in this case (the Bosch Magneto case) which he, the attorney general, was under his oath of office compelled to prosecute."

Willis His Only Defender.

Senator Willis (O.) Republican, called attention to the fact that Senator Caraway was using statements of Felder to show that the attorney general was unfit for office while at the same time he was declaring that Felder was an entirely unreliable man.

Senator Willis, however, when questioned by Senator Caraway, admitted that he had no personal information in regard to the attorney general's connection with the Morse case. Nor did Senator Willis refer to the letter alleged to have been written by the attorney general to Mr. Morse.

None of the other Republican senators rose to defend Mr. Daugherty.

"I did not want to go further into these matters," Senator Caraway said, "but the senator from New York (Mr. Wadsworth), in his anxiety to put Mr. Felder right before the country, wanted to do it. [Senator Caraway had reference to a letter written by Mr. Felder in his own defense, which Mr. Wadsworth placed in the Congressional Record Friday.] I shall therefore meet the issue.

Threatens New Disclosures.

"And I want to say now, for fear I forget it, if the attorney general wants to make an explanation he may do so. If he does not, there are other things that are coming along right regularly now, signed documents which the attorney general and none of his apologists can repudiate."

Referring to the Scaife case, and the charge that Mr. Daugherty had suggested to Felder that he employ Scaife in the Bosch Magneto case, Senator Caraway said:

"In other words, at the request of the attorney general, Felder was undertaking to hire away from the government the witnesses on whom the government must rely if it recovers judgment against this company."

Referring to a letter that former President Taft wrote to Mr. Daugherty when the latter was running for senator in Ohio, in which Mr. Taft said Mr. Daugherty did not exert pressure on him in the Morse case, Senator Caraway quoted from an article by Chief Justice Taft in the Ladies' Home Journal, written in 1914. In this article Mr. Taft referred to the Morse case as one of the things that "shakes one's faith in expert examination."

"The former President," Senator Caraway said, "said they had put up a job on him, in the language of the street; at least, that is what he intended to say, as politely as he could."

Senator Caraway said that the chief justice had recently told him he did not want to be mixed up in the present controversy.

Asks Public to Wait.

Attorney General Daugherty was away from the city today, but a statement on his behalf was issued at the department of justice denying a published report that Mr. Daugherty would on Monday make public a list of influential persons in the Wilson administration who were personally interested in concealing the facts in connection with alleged war fraud cases.

Every effort, it was contended in the statement, was being made to inject politics into the situation by enemies of the attorney general and persons who would "protect or persecute or interfere," and Mr. Daugherty asked the public to "weigh carefully what is published in connection with these matters."

Morse Explains Release.

Bath, Me., May 20.—[United Press.]—Charles W. Morse, in an exclusive statement to the United Press tonight, said:

"My release from Atlanta prison was based entirely upon the recommendations of a board of expert physicians and nurses, as stated at the time by President Taft and Attorney General Wickersham."

Asked concerning Attorney General Daugherty's alleged connection with his release, Morse said:

"You may say that I refuse to affirm or deny whatever claim to connection in the case Daugherty may have made."

WINDOW CLEANER HURT IN FALL.

Nicholas Antronis, 4040 South Richmond street, cleaning second story windows at 11 North Ashland avenue, fell to the sidewalk. He was taken to the county hospital, where his condition was said to be serious.

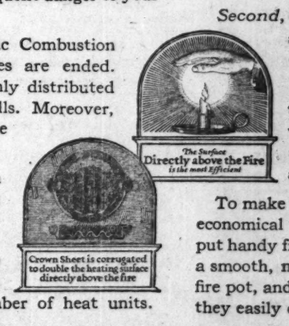
Examine the Boiler before you buy the house

Don't take chances with your health next winter

WHEN buying your new home, don't give all your attention to the upper floors. Look also in the basement. See what kind of a boiler is there.

If your home is equipped with a faulty boiler, you will pay for it dearly when winter winds blow. There will be work and worry over an unwilling fire. There will be a ceaseless waste of costly fuel. There will be cold, cheerless rooms, with consequent danger to your own and your children's health.

With a Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boiler, all your heating troubles are ended. These famous boilers insure evenly distributed heat, and a real saving in fuel bills. Moreover, should you desire to sell, your home will bring a higher price.



The two major functions of a perfect boiler are, first, complete burning of the fuel; second, utilization of all the heat units. In Weil-McLain Boilers, due to scientific combustion, each pound of fuel is made to yield a maximum number of heat units. Waste is largely ended.

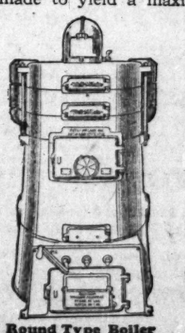
In these boilers remarkable utilization of heat has also been attained. This is accomplished:

First, by means of the corrugated, double-surface crown sheet, which gives double the heating surface directly above the fire. This is the heating surface which is most valuable in any boiler, as the candle-test illustration shows.

Second, by the fact that all other heating surfaces are corrugated, which further promotes economy of fuel and heating efficiency.

Third, by the long "back and forth" fire travel which holds the hot gases in contact with all the fuel-saving corrugated heating surfaces, thus acting as a final safeguard against waste of valuable heat units.

To make Weil-McLain Boilers unusually easy and economical to operate, we designed a large fire door; put handy front clean-out doors in every section; gave a smooth, nonclogging surface to lower one-third of fire pot, and made the grates triangular in shape so they easily cut and shake out all ordinary clinkers.



Round Type Boiler
With corrugated, "double-surface" crown sheet and all other heating surfaces corrugated; also long "back and forth" fire travel. Made for steam, vapor, vacuum and hot-water heating; suitable for bungalows, residences and 2-flat and 3-flat apartment buildings

We have recently prepared literature on Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers. Before buying or building a house be sure to get this literature and post yourself on home heating. Please make your request at once.

FIVE CHILDREN DIE BY AUTOS; BLAME PARENTS

Mothers Urged to Keep Children Off Street.

"A disgrace to the city."

That was what Coroner Peter M. Hoffman called Chicago's record for the last six days, in which fifteen persons met death through automobile accidents—one of the highest for a like period in the city's history.

Among the fifteen were six children, four of them under 5 years old. The coroner criticized parents who allow the children to play in the streets.

"It seems that the people of Chicago place almost no value upon human life through their carelessness," Mr. Hoffman declared.

Careless Mothers Censured.

"The drivers are usually blamed when children are killed. In more than half of the cases drivers are not responsible.

"Mothers make no attempt to keep their children from using the street as a playground. But when a child is killed, they come to us, frantically demanding the driver be sent to jail.

"When do we find that the driver is to blame, we hold him to the grand jury. But how often is one of them sentenced?"

Bad as conditions are now, the coroner said, as far as children's accidents are concerned, they will be worse in another month when school is over.

Two Hurt by Runaway Horse.

A runaway horse, hitched to a National Biscuit company delivery wagon, caused injury to two men and damage to a surface car yesterday in Harrison street, between Clark and La Salle streets.

Ben Keat, 3501 Diversey boulevard, attempting to stop the animal, was thrown against the curb, and was taken to St. Luke's hospital. Edward H. Brehmer, 900 Montenegro avenue, Forest Park, riding on the front platform, was bruised and cut with flying glass. Traffic Policeman Burke finally stopped the horse.

Mrs. Walter Pruett, 7318 Vincennes avenue, suffered internal injuries and possible skull fracture when she was struck by an automobile near her home yesterday. Michael Breen, 7548 Rhodes avenue, was held on charges of assault with an automobile.

DEATH HIS BRIDE

[Jasinski Photo.]

On the day of his wedding, John Cenek, 27 years old, 2416 South Hamlin avenue, a mechanic, was found dead in the kitchen of his rooming house yesterday. A gas jet, which he had lighted, had been extinguished. The room was filled with gas. Cenek was to have married Miss Lillian Sedlac, 23 years old, 2359 South Kedzie avenue, yesterday afternoon. Lawndale police said death was accidental.

ANOTHER GROWL OF N. Y. AGAINST BIG CANAL HEARD

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—The Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association today announced that a movement had been started in New York, fathered by the Central Steamship and Commerce company, to put a fleet of motor ships on the barge canal for coastwise and foreign service. It is proposed to build seventeen ships 257 feet long, 42 feet beam, and 18 feet in depth, at a cost of $5,000,000. These boats are to run on the barge canal and great lakes in summer and enter the coastwise and foreign service in winter.

"The promoters claim such boats can operate on half loads and still cut the railroad rate in two in the middle," the Tidewater association says.

"So it seems that a lake-ocean boat can be built to operate economically on twelve feet of water in the canal, notwithstanding that the same New York people have repeatedly told the world it could not be done on twenty-one feet of water in the harbors of the lakes.

"In other words, if the inland waters are shallow enough then a dual purpose boat can succeed in both fresh and salt water service.

"But a big boat on the lakes would be a hell-diver on the high seas. And all would be lost but honor."

CHICAGOANS BUY BARTLETT RANCH, WORLD'S FINEST

The Bartlett ranch, the largest and best equipped cattle ranch in the country, has been tentatively sold to a syndicate for $1,800,000, it was learned yesterday. The ranch is in northeastern New Mexico, in Colfax and Taos counties, located at Vermejo park. It contains 350,000 acres, or 547 square miles, and is forty miles long and fifteen miles wide.

The ranch is a sportsman's paradise and was established in 1901 by William H. Bartlett Sr. of Bartlett, Frazier & Co., Chicago Board of Trade men, and was acquired from the Elkins syndicate. Mr. Bartlett spent more than $1,000,000 in equipping the ranch with one of the finest Hereford herds, and there are now more than 10,000 head of cattle, valued at $350,000.

There is a model village in the rear of the three big ranch houses. The latter contain sixty-three rooms and thirteen baths.

Every Known Convenience.

There is an electric light and water plant, complete sewerage, and everything thoroughly up to date, in addition to numerous camps for officers and workers, garages, stables for horses and cows, machine and carpenter shops, all equipped with the latest tools and machinery; granaries with a capacity of 70,000 bushels, six or more hunting and fishing lodges well equipped, a sawmill, a coal mine within three miles of the ranch houses that furnishes sufficient fuel for all purposes, and experts estimate that there is coal land to more than pay for the entire cost of the ranch.

There is a big dairy with stable accommodations for eighty cows, a fish hatchery, a supply store, and postoffice at headquarters. The entire furnishings and equipment of the ranch are to be taken over.

Most Complete Ranch.

Mr. Bartlett was a thorough sportsman who loved to fish and hunt and did not consider the expense of establishing the most complete ranch in the world. He entertained his friends lavishly and built the half dozen camps located at distances of nine to twenty-five miles from the big ranch houses; constructed miles of roads for automobiles and wagons, and maintained a stable of seventy-five saddle horses for his use and that of his guests. His death in 1918, followed in a little more than a year by the deaths of his two sons, Norman W. Bartlett and William H. Bartlett Jr., has resulted in the estate being placed on the market.

It is being bought by wealthy business and sportsmen who propose to form the Vermejo Park club, composed of 200 members at $5,000 per membership. When completed the organizers, at the head of whom is Charles A. Sweet of the Chicago Athletic association, are to incorporate the Vermejo Park Land and Cattle company, which is to take title of the property. Each member is to receive fifty shares of stock at par value of $100, and the capital stock is to be $2,500,000. A net annual operating income of $177,000 is estimated from the cattle ranch.

Valued at $5,251,375.

There are 8,000 acres under cultivation. Timber lands are valued at $733,000 and the club buildings, finely furnished, and headquarters output estimated at $2,200,000. Value of the property is estimated at $5,251,375, exclusive of game preserve privileges.

It is estimated there are 5,000 deer and 400 elk in the game preserve, the largest private preserve in the country. The state of New Mexico has given special game privileges and established a warden. Wild turkey, duck and grouse hunting afford great sport in the fall and winter, while the half dozen lakes are stocked with trout, bass and pickerel.

The elevation ranges from 6,000 to 11,000 feet. There are mountains and valleys with two peaks, the Costilla with an elevation of more than 12,000 feet, and the Spanish peak, more than 14,000 feet, are only forty miles distant from the ranch house and can easily be seen on clear days.

RAILROAD SURGEONS CONFER.

M. P. Parrish, chief surgeon of the Wabash Railway company, presided yesterday at a meeting of fifty chief surgeons, representatives of the medical departments of main railroad lines, at the Hotel Sherman. Delegates were chosen to the convention of the American Railway association to be held soon.

HARDING QUASHES JOB TO HUSBAND OF MRS. UPTON

Washington, D. C., May 20.—President Harding today withdrew from the senate his nomination of John W. Upton of Ohio, to be federal trade commissioner. He is the husband of Harriet Taylor Upton, vice chairman of the Republican national committee and influential among the women. His nomination was strongly opposed by Senator Pomerene on the ground that Upton was inexperienced and that the appointment seemed to be merely the payment of a political debt to Mrs. Upton.

Cermak Will Fight New "Volstead" Court

Ald. Anton J. Cermak announced yesterday that he will take the floor at Wednesday's council meeting to protest the expenditure of city tax moneys to maintain a special court in the transportation building for the trial of liquor cases.

"Chicago has enough taxes to pay without paying for the trial of government cases," Ald. Cermak declared. "Prohibition is the result of federal enactment. Let the government pay for the prosecution of its cases."

OUTPUT OF SOFT COAL FOR WEEK LAGGING BEHIND

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—The report of the geological survey on coal production announced today says that production of soft coal, having risen close to the 4,500,000 ton mark, shows no further increase. From the returns so far received it is unlikely that the output of the present week will equal that of last week. Production of anthracite remains practically zero.

The revised figures for the sixth week of the strike (May 8-13) indicate 4,421,000 tons of bituminous coal and 7,000 tons of anthracite. Up to the close of the sixth week the total output since the strike began was 23,826,000 tons of bituminous coal and 39,000 tons of anthracite, a grand total of all coal of 23,865,000 tons.

"During the present week (May 15-20) the seventh week of the strike, production has so far not equaled that of the sixth week. A temporary decrease on Tuesday was followed by an increase on Wednesday, but on no day this week have loadings thus far equaled the high point of the week before. There is no marked change in the number of men on strike."

205 COURSES FOR SUMMER.

C. S. Marsh, director of the summer school of Northwestern university, announced yesterday that 205 courses will be given this year, taught by 132 instructors and professors of the university's faculty and by thirty-six from other colleges.

MIDWAY GRADS COME BACK FOR MEMORY FEST

Thousands of Alumni Here in June.

Thousands of alumni of the University of Chicago will gather for the annual homecoming celebration and thirty-first anniversary of the founding of the institution in the four days beginning June 7. The campus will be turned over to the old timers.

Preparations are under way to make the celebration the biggest ever. The program will include a series of fraternity reunions, a university song, the "C" dinner attended by former Maroon athletes who won their "C," and the alumnæ breakfast.

Big Parade Planned.

The final day will see the colorful parade by the classes since 1893. Each class will be costumed to depict phases in the university's history. Scores of brilliant floats will brighten the line of march. This will be followed by a ball game between Purdue and Chicago, the reunion dinner in Bartlett gymnasium, attended by all visiting alumni, and class stunts, for which preparation has been made months ahead. The celebration will close with an alumni carnival and a garden party and dance in Hutchinson court.

"Shanty exercises," in which old time students will participate, will be an outstanding feature. A replica of Ingham's shanty where students in the early days ate their meals is being built on Stagg field. "Billy" Ingham, who conducted the old eating house, will be on hand. The old timers will gather around the shanty and renew allegiance with proper ceremonies.

Sulcer Is Chairman.

Henry D. Sulcer, '05, president of Vanderhoof & Co., is general chairman of the alumni celebration, and Alice Greenacre, '08, is vice chairman. Others on the committee include: Ernest J. Stevens, '05, general manager of the Hotel La Salle; Donald Richberg, '01; Fanny Butcher, '10; Herbert Zimmerman, '01; S. Edwin Earle, '11; Dan Brown, '16; Elizabeth Bredin, '13; Helen Sunny McKibben, '08; Frederick Carr, '08; Milton Coulter, '19; Richard Atwater, '11; George Barclay, '19; William V. Morgenstern, '20; and Colville Jackson, '21.

LONG MISSING; BODY IN LAGOON.

NOW DORIS ASKS GOOD SLICE OF BROKER'S CASH

Kattenstroth Is Sued for $50,000.

Miss Doris Hutchinson, recently indicted on charges of extortion by threats on charges preferred by Frank H. Kattensroth, La Salle street broker, yesterday sued him for $50,000 damages.

DORIS HUTCHINSON [Walinger Photo.]

The suit, according to her attorney, Albert Sabath, is based on charges made by the broker, which were dismissed by Municipal Judge William L. Morgan, and which later caused her indictment.

Long Record of Trouble.

Yesterday's action by Miss Hutchinson, termed by Kattenstroth as his "nemesis," is the latest of a long record of legal proceedings instituted by the girl, who in 1919 sued the broker for $50,000 damages, asserting he had failed to keep promises of marriage.

This was followed by her sudden announcement in June, 1921, that she had married Kattenstroth and the filing of her suit for divorce. Admissions by Miss Hutchinson that the story of the marriage was false caused the dismissal of the divorce suit.

Charges She Threatened Him.

More recently, Kattenstroth, who lives at 665 Sheridan road, declared Miss Hutchinson had threatened him with exposure of his alleged illegal conduct under the Mann act, and had jumped on the running board of his car, threatening to kill him if money to pay her hotel bill were not forthcoming.

Her arrest and subsequent indictment followed.

HEADS RAILROAD SURGEONS.

Dr. S. C. Plummer of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad was elected president of the Association of Railroad Chief Surgeons at a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Hotel Sherman. Dr. Craig Barrow of Savannah, Ga., was elected vice president, and Dr. L. J. Mitchell, Chicago, secretary.

DELAY IN FILLING POST OF LANDIS NOW EXPECTED

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—Reports are current tonight that there may be still further delay in announcing the federal judicial nominations in Illinois to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Judge Landis and the post provided for in the new law creating additional federal judges.

It is reported that when the nominations are sent to the senate there will be a change from the original plan and that James H. Wilkerson of Chicago will be named to succeed Judge Landis and Judge Adam C. Cliffe of Sycamore will be appointed to the newly created post.

Because of Mr. Wilkerson's connection with the [illegible] Small as assistant to the attorney general, both nominations may be delayed, as the attorney general does not wish to have Mr. Wilkerson withdrawn from the trial at this time.

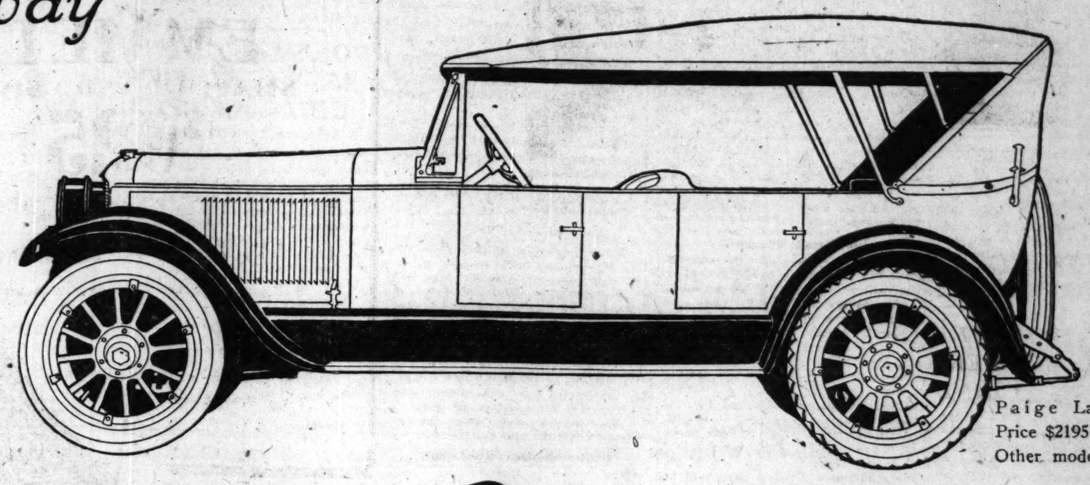
PAIGE

Master of the Highway

$2195



Paige Lakewood Six-66. Price $2195 f. o. b. factory. Other models listed below.

Paige Six-66. Amazingly easy to handle because so amply powered

Perhaps you think of a powerful car as difficult to handle. The reverse is true. A car is easiest to handle when it has ample power—smooth-flowing power as in the Paige Six-66.

Smooth-flowing, ample, six-cylinder power means freedom from gear shifting. With this champion Paige you merely steer and press the foot throttle. It creeps along at 2 miles an hour—or dashes ahead at 30, 40, 50, 60, even 70 miles an hour—all with foot throttle control.

In such a car ease has reached its ultimate; there is nothing left to ask for. You think of your gear lever only when starting. Even steep hills are high-gear play for the Paige. From a standing start at the bottom of Hubbard Hill in high gear, it will travel over the top at 35 miles an hour or better.

Are we claiming too much in our advertising? Please think so, and ask us to prove the claims we make. Come drive the Paige yourself. Test it in traffic, on hills, on a fast road. Know by experience what it is that makes the Paige owner so boastful.

And don't forget the Paige is a delightful rough road car. Its comfort is superb. Low hung—it eliminates the usual side sway. Long wheel-base — 131 inches — combined with exceptionally long springs, gives you cradle-like ease; you simply forget that roads have bumps.

Many have paid $3,000, $4,000, $5,000 for touring cars, thinking to get greater comfort, surer performance. But they do not pay such prices once they have experienced Paige comfort and performance. More dollars will not buy more of these than you get in the Paige. And the 7-passenger Paige illustrated above costs only $2,195.

Our Strength in Chicago Protects You

After-sale service has much to do with the enjoyment of your new car. Adjustments will be needed. An accident may make repairs necessary. Then why not investigate the facts before buying?

Consider for a minute what is behind the Paige and Jewett in Chicago. First—$1,500,000 invested in the buildings and equipment belonging to us and our nine associated dealers. Next—$150,000 worth of parts in stock in our ten Sales and Service Stations.

Think what this means to you! It means that wherever you live in Chicago, a Paige and Jewett Station is near you. It means that we have practically a complete stock of parts for every Paige car ever manufactured. Also for the Jewett. It means that if replacements are necessary there will be no delay in finding what you require. What a feeling of security these service provisions give to every Paige and Jewett owner in Chicago! But in spite of all this preparation for replacements, the average cost of parts served from our stock in 1921 was very low—only $25 per car. And this includes parts for cars up to ten years old, accident replacements and frozen radiators.

No wonder the 4,000 owners in Chicago have such confidence in the organization behind the Paige and Jewett.

MORON ROUNDUP URGED TO CHECK MURDERS HERE

A city-wide search that lasted for more than thirty hours failed to locate Thomas Mahaney, a half wit, who on Friday murdered Mrs. Elizabeth Williamson, his aunt, 7930 Maryland avenue, the woman who befrinded him since his release from the state insane asylum at Dunning ten months ago.

Following the finding of Mrs. Williamson's body immediate search of the city for all maniacs was asked by Dr. Daniel Coffee of the Chicago State asylum at Dunning. Dr. Coffee asked Chief of Police Fitzmorris to clean up the city of all subnormals, saying that they were, in large part, responsible for a great many of the murders.

A close guard was kept on the Williamson home, the police believing that the murderer might return. A watch was kept also on the home of Mrs. Austin Fennell, 441 North Harding avenue, a sister of the murderer.

Mahaney's mother, a widow who is partially blind and paralyzed, sat in an adjoining room Friday while the murder was committed. Yesterday she told the police that she had heard an argument between her sister and her son. She was unable to move from her chair, she said.

Police believe the woman was killed after a quarrel over money.

2,735 TENANTS REFUSING RENT HIKE NOT OUSTED

At a meeting of the Tenants' league of Chicago, 21 North La Salle street, Attorney Harold Sullivan announced there are 2,735 tenants who have refused to pay rent increases and stood pat, whose landlords had yet to make a move to oust them.

M. S. Walsh, league secretary, declared landlords are afraid to sue the tenants. He advised the standpatters to proffer two months' rent, at the old figure, on the first of June. Most landlords will take it, he believes.

The renting division of the Chicago Real Estate board yesterday reported that 1,055 steam heated flats in Chicago are vacant.

"ERNIE" YOUNG DOESN'T KNOW WHO WED HIM

Mrs. Pearl Mendel Young arrived in Chicago yesterday morning from New York at 10:45. At 11:10 she was still Mrs. Pearl Mendel Young, but with a difference—she had a husband again.

"Ernie" Is Excited.

"Ernie" Young, ticket broker and manager of the show at the Marigold Gardens, the other half of the remarriage act, declared that in his excitement he even forgot the name of the judge who performed the ceremony. The Youngs were reunited at the county building.

The Youngs were first wed Oct. 10, 1915, the bride being the daughter of I. Mendel of Memphis, Tenn. Ernie's pals just before the nuptials "threw a party," the invitations to which were black-bordered, symbolizing their grief.

Wins by a Nose.

Less than three years later, however, the Youngs raced to the Circuit court clerk's office to file divorce proceedings. Ernie won by four minutes. The charges made by each were many and diverse. Mrs. Young accused her husband of having accused her of misconduct in order to camouflage his own indiscretions with other ladies.

The remarriage comes on the heels of another Rialto romance, in which Miss Flo Jacobson, singer, was rewed to her employer, Frank Clark. She marries him now and then, said the bride, in describing her matrimonial activities.

DISAPPOINTMENT AWAITS FILIPINO FREEDOM MISSION

Islands Not Ready, Is View of Weeks.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—The Harding administration is absolutely opposed to giving immediate independence to the Philippines, and the Filipino independence mission, due to arrive here soon to plead its cause probably is doomed to failure. This is the view of Secretary of War John W. Weeks, as expressed here today in commenting upon the statement issued from the White House yesterday in which it was stated that the Filipino mission "would be sent home with something more definite than it had had for the last three or four years," if President Harding's wishes were realized.

"I am not in favor of granting immediate independence to the Philippines, and the President is not," said Secretary Weeks.

Wood-Forbes Report Favored.

The Wood-Forbes report, rendered after an exhaustive investigation of conditions in the islands, recommended against immediate independence, the secretary said. That report, as well as the administration of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood as governor, has the complete endorsement of the Harding administration, he said.

Asked if the Filipino mission would ask for complete autonomy, Secretary Weeks said he understood that was the object of the mission. It would be difficult to find a people who would not vote for independence if the opportunity were offered them, Secretary Weeks explained, and therefore it is extremely likely that if the question were submitted to a referendum the vote would be in favor of independence.

Letter of Instructions.

A letter of instructions issued by independence commission of the Philippines to the second Filipino mission says at the outset:

"Gentlemen — The mission shall bring before the President and congress of the United States this just demand of the Filipino people. The sacred promise made by the American people of granting us our independence as soon as stable government can be established in our country should be, without delay, complied with."

Secretary Weeks sent a cablegram today to Gen. Wood, urging him to remain governor-general of the Philippines until December, as "manifestly" a leave until that time would be granted by the University of Pennsylvania, which a year ago selected him as its provost.

BOLIVIA AGAIN ASKS SEAT WITH CHILE AND PERU

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—Another formal but unsuccessful request for a voice in the Chilean-Peruvian conference here was made today by the government of Bolivia, in a note declaring that any settlement of conference problems reached without Bolivian recognition would only be a source of continuing friction in South America. Both the Chilean and Peruvian delegations promptly indicated their opposition to the request.

The request, embraced in a long note setting ferth the Bolivian position, was filed with the Chilean and Peruvian delegations here by Adolfo Ballivian, the Bolivia minister, and Alberto Gutierrez, former Bolivian foreign minister, and an unofficial observer here for his government.

CHARGE GERMANS BREAK CONTRACT WITH AMERICANS

"Play Yank for Sucker," New Yorker Says.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, May 20.—In addition to the reports and complaints which the American diplomatic and consular offices have sent to Washington regarding the German and Bavarian governments, as well as private citizens who are accused of fleecing Americans, various reports have also been sent to trade representatives. These reports, THE TRIBUNE is informed, fall in two classes. First, the breaking of contracts for delivery of orders, and, second, price extortions. At the same time tourists have discovered a new system for double charging, despite the prices which are plainly marked.

"Any one is a sucker to try to do business in Germany nowadays," said Otto Hammacher, an importer from New York, who, with Alfred Strumer of the Manufacturers' Trust company of New York, visited THE TRIBUNE office here today.

Code Tricks Americans.

"The general plan of the German manufacturers is to accept all orders, regardless of whether deliveries are possible. After the merchandise is made up and the price stipulated, the buyer man who comes along offering a higher price gets the goods. Even when deposits were taken previously the manufacturers let the Americans go. Moreover, export licenses can be secured only at American valuation."

A retail shop trick to fleece American tourists consists of marking the price in marks, but adding code letters for a price to German buyers, which is usually half. The Germans have not realized that Americans dislike being double, but they do not protest when the price is plainly marked, no matter how much higher it is than in America.

Chicagoans Complain.

Inasmuch as shopkeepers must pay a business tax on every sale, the advisory general committee has announced a proposed law providing six months' imprisonment and 50,000 marks fine for profiteers and smugglers. However, the government officials admit that it is almost impossible to get a tax on the profits from the shopkeepers "overcharging," because throughout Germany generally, a double set of books is kept.

Among the Americans complaining of being fleeced by Bavarian hotels and theaters are Wilmot Harbach, Hyde Park boulevard, and L. M. Reubens, Standard Oil building, both of Chicago.

TRAINING AND PLAY AWAITS CHICAGOANS AT MILITARY CUSTER

GEN. MOSELY. [U. & U. Photo.]

A comprehensive military and recreational program awaits the Chicago youth who decides to spend the month from Aug. 2 to Sept. 2 at the Citizens' military training camp, Camp Custer, Michigan, Gen. George Van Horn Mosely, in command, announced yesterday.

Saturday afternoons, Sundays, and every day from retreat till dark, will be given over to ball games on camp diamonds. Soccer fields, tennis, handball, and volley ball courts are situated within 100 yards of the camp. Other diversions will be swimming in Eagle lake, boating, and fishing.

Weekly dances will be held at the Hostess house, where relatives and friends may be received. The house has a library of 5,000 volumes. At the Liberty theater, four movies a week, boxing contests, and home talent shows will be presented.

Street cars connect the camp with Battle Creek, seven miles distant.

Indications, Gen. Mosely said, are that applicants to attend the camp will be greater than funds on hand will allow. He urged candidates to send in their applications without delay.

Last of Women Pickets Is Freed by Her Judge

Anna Mazouch, 2215 West 18th street, last of the woman pickets in the county jail for contempt of court in connection with the American Cigar company case, was released yesterday on an order from Judge Denis E. Sullivan, before whom the case appeared three years ago. Seven other women, some with babies, were released after a few days' imprisonment, when they apologized to the court.

JAPAN RATIFIES TREATY TO TURN BACK SHANTUNG

TOKIO, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Shantung agreement negotiated with China at the Washington conference was ratified today by Japan.

Withdrawing Jap Soldiers.

PEKING, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—Japanese military control in Shantung already is being withdrawn in accordance with the agreement between China and Japan signed at Washington last February. Chinese guards have replaced about one-third of the Japanese troops on the railroad running 280 miles from Tsingtao, the seaport, to Tsinanfu, capital of Shantung province.

Thus history is reversing itself in Shantung. Twenty-four years ago Germany was in the process of taking the province from China. Today Japan is restoring it to its original owner.

Withdrawal of the Japanese troops was agreed upon independently of the Washington treaty. Commissioners of each country are ready to proceed to Shantung to negotiate for the transfer of public properties, indemnities for which yet remain to be fixed. It is believed that Japan will ask about $100,000,000 gold for its investments and improvements in Shantung.

Germany's seizure in 1898 of Tsingtao bay, a naval base, together with the surrounding district known as Kiaochow, formed part of European aggression in China in that year. At the opening of the world war Japan promptly took Kiaochow.

Chang's Retreat Continues.

TIENTSIN, May 20.—Railway officials reported tonight that Gen. Chang Tso Lin's retreat will be continued until he is outside of the great wall.

It is believed possible that he will attempt to establish independence of Manchuria in accordance with his recent manifesto.

After evacuating Lwanchow Gen. Chang damaged two bridges to prevent pursuit. No attempt was made to overtake him.

MESSAGE OF PIUS COMMENDS PLAN FOR FOUNDATION

A message from the late Pope Pius X., written just before his final illness, in which he commends the establishment of religious foundations in connection with state universities, was read by ex-Judge John P. McGoorty at a meeting of the Knights of Columbus preparing for the $1,000,000 drive for the Catholic Foundation at the University of Illinois, held at Hotel Sherman yesterday.

Messages commending the foundation were read from Archbishop Mundelein, Bishop P. J. Muldoon of Rockford, Bishop E. M. Dunne of Peoria, Bishop James Ryan of Alton, Bishop Henry Althoff, and President David Kinley of the university.

Forty-three team captains to carry on the campaign in Chicago volunteered their services. These, with team captains from the Catholic Order of Foresters, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the Catholic Knights of America, will form the Chicago organization for the drive.

5 STATES START MOTOR SOCIETY TO RIVAL A. A. A.

A permanent split in the ranks of the American Automobile association, oldest and best known of the national motor bodies, was established in St. Louis yesterday when chapters of the national organization from Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, Texas, and Indiana began the formation of a new association.

Delegates from the insurgent chapters stampeded from the St. Louis convention Friday when the Chicago Motor club and the Ohio club challenged the seating of each other's delegates. Rival clubs in the association also charged the Chicago Motor club has been invading other state's territories in soliciting membership for purposes declared to be commercial.

Charles M. Hayes of the Chicago Motor club said the old A. A. A. will continue to function. The Chicago, Missouri and other "standpatters" continued the national convention yesterday, while insurgents named Fred Caley of Cleveland as temporary chairman and appointed an organization committee for the rival association.

GROCERS WANT TO HELP LOWER FOOD COSTS

Not to Blame for H.C.L.

The idea that the rank and file of grocers throughout the country are boosting prices for the sake of realizing exorbitant profits is absolutely false.

Retail prices have gone up because the retailer has been compelled to put them up. The grocer has to pay more for his goods, more for rent, more for clerks' salaries; consequently, must charge more.

Shortage of raw materials, of productive labor and a demand that has far outstripped production are the direct causes of present-day prices. As a rule, the grocer is transacting business on the same percentage of profit as in the days of low selling prices.

Grocers depend upon you for a livelihood. They know just as you know that to cheat in any way, shape or form, would kill their trade outright. Common sense says that no intelligent grocer will attempt to "kite" prices beyond legitimate profits. He can't afford to.

BUSINESS NOT A BED OF ROSES

For Man Behind Counter

Because of a scant supply the grocer often has serious trouble in procuring merchandise. He has to stand the sharp cut of complaints from buyers because of high costs. He all too frequently is blamed, when absolutely blameless. And is not, on a whole, making a wider margin of net profit than he did when conditions were normal, trade better satisfied and business transactions decidedly more pleasant.

The grocer is your servant. He is in business to serve your requirements. He doesn't make you a slave to high costs. He is in exactly the same boat you are in. He sells goods you want and ask for. He must meet your demands or get out of business. He has no choice in the matter. He can't go contrary to your wishes.

The consumer can do more towards restoring prices to normal levels than the grocer can. This can be accomplished with positive certainty by buying only food products of sound value and proven economy. Careless buying and rank extravagance are unquestionably vital factors in maintenance of high costs.

When a consumer forces a grocer to sell a sixty-five-cent article where a thirty-five-cent article would answer the purpose equally well he is encouraging production of high priced goods of short value and hampering the manufacture of food products of sound value and fair prices. On the other hand, when the consumer insists on goods of inferior worth he is inviting inevitable waste that stands for loss rather than economy. In such occurrences the consumer, not the grocer, is at fault. For, remember, the grocer must give you what you want despite the fact that he would rather supply your requirements with goods of sterling value at a minimum cost.

FOOD PRODUCTS

Of Utmost Purity and Food Value

If you will but consult your grocer regarding the true values of different grades of goods, you most assuredly will increase the purchasing power of your dollars and strike straight at one of the main roots of high costs by weeding out extravagance.

What the buyer demands more than any other one thing determines the market price of commodities of all sorts. If you demand full-value foods, insist upon having them, you will get them and at legitimate prices. Persistent demand for top-price goods of questionable value will then be sharply curtailed and production stimulated in lines of maximum merit. And with this increased production will come lower costs, just as sure as day follows night.

The solution of the problem so far as the consumer is concerned is simply this: select only products of recognized value, sold at lowest prices permissible under present conditions—eliminate waste—don't encourage the production of price-heavy products—co-operate with your grocer—don't lose sight of the fact that he must cater to your wishes. Your demand for the right type of goods is the best means at your command to straighten out topsy-turvy conditions which are a burden to the conscientious manufacturer, the square-dealing grocer and the consumer who are putting forth every effort under the sun to reduce the high cost of production, high cost of merchandising and high cost of living.

Mr. John A. Ulman, President of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, an eminent authority on food values and intimately acquainted with manufacturing and marketing conditions, urges close co-operation between retailer and consumer and careful discrimination in the selection of merchandise—as a means of restoring prices to normal and promoting the distribution of the best grade of goods.

WORKERS HOOT LENIN; HE SEEKS PEASANTS' AID

Produce Tax Abandoned for Tax in Rubles.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, May 20.—The bolshevik produce tax, the tax in kind which succeeded the confiscation system just one year ago, is to be abolished. In its place Russian peasants will pay a tax in soviet rubles. Thus agrarian Russia returns to the czarist system of taxation. With this further retreat of the bolsheviks, other wide-reaching land reforms are in prospect.

This information came from a group of repatriated Lettish workers and farmers who have been held in Russia since the German advance of 1918 forced the old régime to reëvacuate the district which is now Latvia. Among these refugees was a Lithuanian-American, who returned to Russia last April to aid building up the "worker's republic." He is now en route to Lithuania seeking a job which will enable him to bring his family out of Russia. As they are being held as hostages, the usual soviet custom, he asks his name be withheld.

Think Soviet Weak.

The repatriated workers and farmers say that the soviet government is tottering. To prove this assertion they relate how Lenin has forced the all Russian central executive committee to make "a further retreat" from the rigid rules of communism and to appoint a nonpartisan commission of forty peasants, not one of whom is a communist, who are empowered to work out a complete land reform.

Up to the present time this commission has advocated the abolishment of the produce tax, the forming of nonpartisan courts to pass on the complaints of the peasants against the government, and a decree acknowledging the inviolability of the rights of a peasant to his land. The latest action of this body is to recommend in no uncertain language that the huge confiscated Russian estates, which up to the present time have been supplying the personal larders of certain commissars and district soviets with food, be immediately turned over to the peasants' cooperatives, who will use them exclusively for growing seed grain.

Seeks Peasants' Backing.

The refugees believe that all these recommendations will be enacted into decrees by Lenin, despite his assertions to the contrary. One good reason for these concessions is indicated by the report that the soviet government is quickly losing the support of the workers and that it is now trying to curry favor with the peasants in its last effort to continue to hold the dictatorship of Russia.

Confirming the reports of other refugees and repatriates who have recently arrived from Russia, this group states that salaries in government institutions are months in arrears; that the discontinuation of the rations, bread cards, and free soup kitchens have made it increasingly difficult for workers to obtain food. The extreme dissatisfaction caused by the unemployment situation and the cost of food in the cities has spread to the local workers' soviets, and they report that in several recent meetings when communist leaders tried to speak they were howled down. The workers, they say, now regard the communist government in the same light that radical unions in capitalistic countries regard their government—i. e., they believe that instead of the proletariat running the government that the government is running the proletariat.

Head of Havana Bank Held in $1,010,000 Bail

HAVANA, May 20.—Herman Upmann, whose bank recently failed, has been held in bail of $10,000 cash and $1,000,000 in well established securities to answer charges in connection with the failure. His brother, Albert, was absolved and released unconditionally.

At the preliminary hearing, Mr. Upmann denied the statement that he had spent more than $1,000,000 in Washington in connection with recovering seized property from the alien enemy property custodian. He said he spent $240,000 for lawyers' fees and other expenses.

A temporary liquidation board which has been named will require several weeks to audit the bank's books.

TEAMSTERS' UNION TO INSTALL $1,500 LIFE INSURANCE

MICHAEL J. GALVIN.

Insurance providing a $1,500 death benefit and $10 a week in case of illness is to be given the 3,500 members of the Chicago Teamsters' union, No. 705, without increase in the membership dues, it was announced yesterday. The announcement came from Michael J. Galvin, secretary and treasurer of the organization, who stated the insurance plan had been adopted following careful study of its merits and of the needs and conditions of the union membership.

Mr. Galvin stated also that the plan probably will be adopted almost immediately by a number of other unions. Details were worked out as a result of years of study by Galvin, in which he was aided by Thomas Conley, president of the union, and Jerry Leahy, one of the business agents.

According to Galvin, many of the men who engage daily in driving teams and motor trucks, hauling about the city's merchandise, are notably improvident.

"They are mostly a happy-go-lucky lot," he said. "Then, in many instances, their wages are not sufficient to more than barely provide for their families.

"In our organization we have some great enemies of race suicide—men of family, you understand.

"Jerry O'Brien is an example. He has been married for twenty years and has eleven children. True, a few of the children are old enough to provide a little income, but the burden of the main support of the family falls on Jerry."

Mary French Home to Observe Anniversary

Johnson of Springfield, Ill., and the Rev. Bishop A. A. Hankins. Mme. M. M. C. Millai, chorister of the Antioch Baptist church, will appear with her sextette of women singers.

CHAUFFEUR SAYS GIRL MET TAXI BILL WITH STAB

Miss Dorothy Larne, 22 years old, 1104 West Harrison street, stabbed Lewis Miller, a Yellow Cab company chauffeur, following an argument over a taxi bill. She was booked at Des Plaines street police station on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

According to Miller, Miss Larne refused to pay her bill. He drove her to the police station after she smashed a window of the cab and stabbed him with a piece of the glass, he said.

CANARIES MAKE DREARY POLICE STATION CHEERY

Old acquaintances who called upon Capt. William Russell at the Englewood police station yesterday commented on the cheerful atmosphere two singing canary birds gave his office. The captain opened the cage, and for the entertainment of his guests set one of the birds at liberty. It alighted on his finger at call and gave other evidence of training.

"The freedom of these birds," the captain commented, "must not be construed as symbolic of the conduct of this station."

HERE'S WHAT YOU NEED TO BECOME REAL "RADIOITE"

Expert Tells Equipment Fan Requires.

BY CHARLES SLOAN.

What do I need for a receiver that will take concerts from a distance of 500 miles? What will it cost? Will a crystal detector work that far? If not, what will? These are, perhaps, the most common of the questions which daily flood the radio editor's desk.

A. J. McGIVERN.

There have been detailed, technical explanations printed which have left the questioners more puzzled than they were originally. Then there have been the wild claims of certain manufacturers of almost impossible achievements.

A Real Explanation.

In next month's Hardware World Arthur J. McGivern, sales manager of the Manhattan Electrical Supply company of Chicago, in advising dealers what to buy for stocks of radio apparatus, has also written a lucid explanation of what the public may expect of radio apparatus.

"The simplest and most inexpensive outfit is the one with the crystal detector," he writes. "While it may receive code messages for forty or fifty miles, it is useless to expect satisfactory results in receiving radio telephone communications or musical programs for more than five or ten miles from a good broadcasting station. Its use is limited to a pair of telephone receivers only, and under the most favorable conditions messages will not be received as loud as from an ordinary telephone. These sets with all equipment sell for about $30.

A Better Type of Instrument.

"The next type of instrument to be considered is one with good tuning equipment, with an audion or lamp detector. These are much more efficient. Variometers are used for tuning, and what is known as the Armstrong regenerative circuit, which increases signal strength a hundred fold, is utilized, making it possible to hear good broadcasting stations located hundreds of miles away. Such an outfit retails at about $120 complete.

"This outfit can only be operated with a set of telephone receivers and its usefulness is limited by the number of persons who can listen in at one time. After the novelty wears away, listening to programs every evening in this manner will excite but little enthusiasm.

More than a Fad.

"The next step in equipments consists of a regenerative tuner and audion detector with two stages of amplification. Signal strength is thus increased so that a loud speaker may be used. With such an outfit speeches and musical programs are brought out loud and clear and may be enjoyed by every member of the family and their guests. Such a receiver sells complete for about $250.

"Radio is not a passing fad," he closes, "for it will continue to interest and serve our people, for who can say that the American public will lose interest in up-to-the-minute news of markets and current events, or who will tire of listening to a high class musical program rendered by living, breathing artists hundreds of miles away?"

THAT RACKET, RADIO FANS, IS NOT OPERY! IT'S SUMMER IMPS

Washington, D. C., May 20.—Wireless fans were warned tonight by the commerce department to beware of the activities of "the three summertime radio imps."

Summertime disturbances, the department said, called strays, static and atmospheric, are in evidence from about April 1 to Oct. 1, causing radio sets to give forth "a first class imitation of a boilershop in full operation instead of an anticipated lecture on the culture of silk worms."

It is reported that a move is under way backed by a large number of radiophone concert fans for the passage of a city ordinance prohibiting the operation of amateur spark transmitters in Chicago during the hours that musical entertainments are being broadcasted. The movement follows the failure of Chicago "amateurs" to observe the courtesy of a "silent hour" while the concerts are being sent out.

"A Gate for All" is the theme of the sermon to be delivered by the Rev. Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, 58 East Washington street, who will conduct station KYW's chapel services today. Dr. Thompson will talk of the necessity for a universal religion. The musical program during the services, which begin at 3:30 p. m., will be given by a quartet from the church under the direction of Prof. W. O. Smith.

Already 1,173 radio fans have sent in their names for "Who's Who in Radio." Crystal sets reported total 462, of whom the great majority are in Chicago. Vacuum tube sets, some with amplifiers and some without, total 711. Reports from the lattter have arrived from almost every state in the Union.

Some of them have been in the game for ten years or more—some of them are recent joiners. But from the tone of the letters all are enthusiastic radioites.

Why not send in your suggestions for the betterment of radio from every angle when you report the possession of a receiver? If your ideas are good they will reach the proper persons for attention. Address the Radio Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

UNREST IN INDIA DYING OUT, SAYS BRITISH CHIEF

Natives Seek Reforms in Legislatures.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, May 20.—India is more peaceful now and less revolutionary and more disposed to progress by constitutional means that it has been for some time, Earl Winterton, under secretary of state for India, said today. He is optimistic over the future of Great Britain's greatest dependency.

Earl Winterton said Gandhism is on the decline. Gandhi himself before his trial realized he had raised a force he could not control and his followers realized he had made promises he could not carry out. The Gandhi organization still exists, but it has less power and is losing ground. No new leaders have risen to take his place.

Earl Winterton declared the most encouraging sign is that a number of good men of various native races are coming forward in the various legislative bodies established under the reform scheme. These are not by any means all pro-British, and in many assemblies there are strong anti-British parties. This indicates, however, that the separatist Indians are willing to go forward constitutionally.

Blames World Unrest.

The debates in the assemblies have reached a high level and much attention is being given both by the assemblies and the Indian government to improving the condition of the people.

Lord Winterton is of the opinion that much of the revolutionary movement in India is only a part of the general world unrest and it is now dying down. Doubtless it was helped to some extent by foreign revolutionaries.

Starving Eye India.

Speaking regarding the military policy in India, Earl Winterton said: "The government has been criticized for the size of its military budget. We believe that we have cut it as far as consistent wtih safety. We have been told that the disappearance of the Russian menace rendered a large defense unnecessary, but the fact is the Russian menace is generally greater than for some years. The old Russian threat disappeared early in the century with the foundation of the triple entente.

"The threat to India from the outside now is due to the terrible condition in Central Asia. The people there need food and they look enviously toward the rich lands of India. Before the British came to India it was overrun periodically by tribes from the north and the reason she is not overrun now is that the potential invaders know they will not succeed."

BALKANS PLAN GREAT WATERWAY

BALKAN financiers propose to link eastern and western Europe by a continuous water route from the North sea to the Black sea. They would connect the Rhine and Danube by a canal through which vessels of 1,500 tons could operate.

This would give western Europe a ready access to the huge grain depots of Russia, Odessa's wheat fields and the agricultural products of Jugo-Slavia. In return the Balkans could get the finished products of western Europe at half the present cost of transportation.

An American firm is said to be bidding for the job, which would cost $50,000,000.

U. S. Nearly a Gynecocracy, Alice Robertson's Fear

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[United Press.]—Representative Alice Robertson [Okla.], who has been having a lively clash of views with the National League of Women Voters, today declared the league is putting the country into a gynecocracy.

"Gynecocracy," she said—"that's what we'd drift to if we followed the league."

Gynecocracy, so the dictionary says, means "Government by women, in a depreciative sense, petticoat rule."

Whipp will take charge Monday. There are seven farms at St. Charles.

11 FIRE CAPTAINS NAMED; SUIT MAY UNSEAT THEM

Eleven fire lieutenants were promoted to captaincies yesterday a few minutes after the city civil service commission had posted a new captains' eligible list containing 127 names.

The eleven captains promoted from the new list are: Daniel McGrath, Joseph J. Graham, Robert E. Bassett, Michael A. Cody, William J. MacKenzie, Leo Hector, Daniel P. Cullnan, Anthony J. Mullaney, Matthew Lynch, John L. Fenn and Frank P. Bermingham.

CLEAR AMBIGUITY IN ATWOOD WILL, IS PLEA TO JUDGE

FRED H. ATWOOD.

Alleged ambiguities existing in the will of Fred H. Atwood, attorney, who directed that his sons Ivan and Ephraim be disinherited should "they use beer, wine, or intoxicating liquors, or tobacco, cigars, or cigarets," caused the executors of the estate to file a petition in the Superior court asking the court's advice in construing the terms of the instrument.

The attorney, who left $400,000, created a trust fund and directed that the income therefrom should be paid to his widow, Mrs. Minnie P. Atwood, 503 Melrose street, during her lifetime or until her remarriage. At her death, the sons were to receive the income.

The petition is based on the bequest to Mrs. Atwood, to clear just what is meant by "income."

First Tank Corps post No. 245, American legion, will present, in the "Frolic," Richard Carle, of "Mollie Darling," and Frank Bacon, of "Lightnin'" among others. The veteran tank was donated to Harry L. McClellan, post commander, by Brig. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, and was sent from Camp Custer, Mich., especially for the "Frolic."

Whatever your line, better make your sideline sweet, recommends Walter C. Hughes, secretary of the National Confectioners' association, who arrived in Chicago yesterday to attend the candy conventions to be held at the Drake this week.

Sweeter Things in Death.

"Candy," says Hughes, "is retailed to more different kinds of business than any other commodity in the world. Even some undertakers carry a sideline of confectionery."

All branches of the candy industry for the first time will hold conventions under the same roof, and it is expected that many of the big problems of the industry will be settled by the 4,000 delegates who will attend.

The National Confectioners' association, representing 90 per cent of the candy tonnage of the country, will hold sessions in the grand ballroom of the Drake, May 24 to 26.

4,000 to Attend.

The National Jobbing Confectioners' association, representing 75 per cent of the wholesale distribution, will meet in the Grill room, May 23 to 26. The retailers will open their sessions tomorrow in the French room. The Western Confectionery Salesmen's association meets May 23 to 25. Four thousand will attend the various conventions.

At the candy exposition which opens tomorrow at the Coliseum, every phase of the industry will be represented. The visitor will see the candy making process from the cocoa bean, which will be shown in a real grove, to the product.

Prominent among the exhibitors will be several former brewers now engaged in making candy.

HOT WATER The cheapest and best of servants

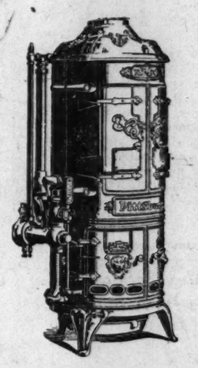
Opening any hot water faucet lights the heating flame. Closing the faucet extinguishes it. That's all you have to do.



FLOWING hot water, like good cooking, appeals strongly to men. It also hurries along housework and adds to everybody's comfort. And it costs little to have a Pittsburg and provide unlimited hot water for family and guests, at instant call day or night.

You don't even go near the Pittsburg to start it going. Opening any hot water faucet lights the heating flame. Hot water flows immediately. The Pittsburg heats just the amount you need—no waste.

With a Pittsburg you have a clean, intensely hot gas flame concentrated on sanitary copper coils through which the fresh water flows. Heating flame burns only while hot water is being drawn. Puts itself out when you close the faucet.

COP'S BULLET WOUNDS QUARRY IN LOOP CROWD

Throngs Scatter During Exciting Pursuit.

Hundreds of early afternoon shoppers looked on spellbound yesterday while a youth fled through thronged streets of the loop pursued by bullets from the revolver of a traffic policeman. As the youth darted in and out among traffic surging about Dearborn and Monroe streets, a bullet found its mark in his left shoulder and he fell headlong.

OFFICER J. A. BENDER.

Told of Effort to Sell Ring.

While at his station at Adams and Clark streets, Traffic Policeman Joseph A. Bender was approached by Abe Grauer, 16, 3162 Federal street; a senior at Englewood High school. "There's a fellow down the street who tried to sell me a diamond ring, telling me he stole it last night. I think he's a crook," Bender said Grauer told him. Policeman Bender and Grauer began threading their way through the traffic in an effort to find the would-be ring salesman. They finally spied him in conversation with another man.

LOUIS LEVINE.

When the youth sought caught sight of Grauer in company of the policeman he started to run north on Clark street. The policeman and Grauer pursued, Bender drawing his revolver and ordering the fugitive to halt. The young man only ran the faster. Bender fired several shots into the sidewalk.

Bullet Drops Fugitive.

Finally Bender, fearing the youth would escape, and taking careful aim so as not to hit an innocent pedestrian, fired point blank at the fugitive.

The bullet which struck Levine passed on through a window of the First Trust and Savings bank and whistled close to the ear of Herbert Hedin, a clerk. Levine was to be taken to the identification bureau to determine if he has a criminal record.

At the First precinct police station the prisoner said he was Louis Levine, 26, a resident of the Y. M. C. A. hotel, in South Wabash avenue. He said he recently came to Chicago from Detroit.

STINNES NAMES SHIP FOR LEADER OF GERMAN LABOR

WILHELMSHAVEN, Germany, May 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—Hugo Stinnes, the German industrial and shipping magnate, was host today at a remarkable "get together" luncheon here, which followed the launching of his new cargo steamer, the Carl Legien, in the presence of President Ebert, parliamentary officials, and industrial leaders from all parts of Germany.

Presiding at the luncheon table, around which shipyard workers and representatives of big business sat side by side, Herr Stinnes explained that he had christened his new vessel in honor of the late head of the German federation of trades unions because of his services in helping demobilize the ex-kaiser's army. He hoped the occasion would be received as an indication of his sincerity in endeavoring to achieve a closer working communion between employer and employé.

As an added concession to Herr Legien's memory and the simplicity of his life the fluid which flowed over the vessel's bow was the contents of a bottle of beer. Legien was a great believer in the food and political value of good malt brew as a pacifier of the working man.

McKinley School Society Calls Its Annual Meeting

MILLION NAMES SOUGHT HERE IN AMNESTY DRIVE

Petition Prays Release of War Prisoners.

At entrances to baseball parks, at transfer points on street car lines, at factory and theater exits, and on university campuses yesterday, volunteer workers, equipped with placards and petition blanks, strove to collect 1,000,000 signatures, which, presented to President Harding, they hope, will gain the release of 113 war prisoners still in federal penitentiaries.

The day was set aside by the general defense committee as Amnesty day, so that the petitions could reach the chief executive before he went on his summer vacation. Mayor Thompson granted the permit.

None in for Overt Act.

According to placards circulated, the 113 men still are serving sentences solely for alleged expressions of opinion and not for overt acts; all other nations have released their war opinion prisoners; all spies convicted here have been freed long since; the espionage act has been repealed; peace with our late enemies has been declared, and trade with them resumed.

According to Miss Rose Weiss, secretary of the Amnesty day committee, organizations coöperating for release of the prisoners are the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Farmer-Labor party, the World War veterans, and the Chicago Church federation.

Observance of the day was nation wide. Workers in 300 other American cities, with the same placards and petitions, spent the Saturday collecting signatures.

Halts Deportation of Four.

Otto Christenson, attorney for four alleged I. W. W. members released from Fort Leavenworth Monday, frustrated an attempt to deport them by boarding a train carrying them to New York and serving writs of habeas corpus on the agents who had them in custody.

Judge George T. Page continued the hearing until June 26 and held the four, John Avila, Portugese; Herbert Mahler, Canadian; Joseph Oates, Englishman, and Petro Negro, Italian, in bonds of $1,000. They were to have been sent back to their respective countries.

ROSE A. PESTA IS NEW PRESIDENT OF PRINCIPALS' CLUB

Miss Rose A. Pesta, principal of West Pullman school and formerly president of the Ella Flagg Young club, was elected president of the Chicago Principals' club at its annual meeting held yesterday in the Masonic Temple building.

ROSE A. PESTA.

The other officers elected are: Daniel J. Beeby, principal Oglesby school, first vice president; Avon S. Hall, principal Medill high, second vice president; Isabella Dolton, principal Farren school, third vice president; Walter J. Harrower, principal Harper school, treasurer; Robert G. Jeffrey, principal Sawyer Avenue school, secretary.

After a heated discussion an amendment to the by-laws was passed, raising the annual dues from $10 to $30. W. B. Owen, principal of the Normal school, led the forces for the amendment, while Frank Stahl, principal of Bowen high, led the opposition.

LIFE TERM FOR WOMAN SLAYER.

IOWA BOY RIGHT ON JOB WITH HIS VACATION ESSAY

Chester Stanford of Fairfield, Ia., reading in THE TRIBUNE of three weeks of sheer joy to be had at Camp Roosevelt for writing a winning essay on Theodore Roosevelt, took his pen in hand without delay and got busy. In his essay he told of the birth and boyhood of Mr. Roosevelt and of how the future president overcame the handicap of poor sight and bad health.

Tells of His Education.

"Mr. Roosevelt was educated in private schools and with tutors," Master Stanford wrote, "and after finishing his education in these schools he went to Harvard university, later graduating from this institution.

"He had a very adventurous spirit, and it was this spirit that led him to take up life in the west as a cowboy.

"In later years he came back to New York City and was nominated for the general assembly. From 1889 to 1895 he was a member of the United States civil service commission; from 1895 to 1897, president of the New York board of police commissioners, and in 1897 he was appointed assistant secretary of the navy.

"In the fall of 1898 Mr. Roosevelt was elected governor of New York. On March 4, 1901, Roosevelt was inaugurated vice president, and through the assassination of President McKinley became president on Sept. 14, 1901. In 1904 Mr. Roosevelt was elected president of the United States by a large majority."

May Get Three Weeks' Outing.

If Chester's essay is one of the fifteen best in the opinion of the judges, he will enjoy a three weeks' outing at Camp Roosevelt, with all expenses paid. Candidates for the holiday must be under the age of 12, and submit essays not over 300 words in length. Essays must be in the hands of the judges not later than June 15.

The alleged robbers returned the fire. Bragiel fell, a bullet through his left shoulder. John O'Malley and Martin Murphy, two other watchmen, joined in the battle. EVANSTON SWEEPS URBANA TRACK MEET

BRUINS, WITH BIG ALEX IN FORM, ROUT BRAVES, 5-3

SPORT OF KINGS REVIVAL GETS UNDER WAY HERE

Prominent Citizens Take Leases on Tracks.

Revival of thoroughbred racing in Illinois is practically assured if account is to be taken of the enthusiastic support the movement is receiving from industrial, social, and civic leaders of Chicago and the state, according to an official of the recently organized Illinois Jockey club.

W. O. DUNTLEY.

With the formation of the club and the closing of leases on Hawthorne and Libertyville race courses many of the best known men and women of the state have directly interested themselves in "the sport of kings," and lovers of fast horses confidently look forward to a day in the near future when Illinois will rival the great day in Kentucky when thousands visit Churchill Downs to see the great Derby.

W. O. Duntley, president of the Duntley Products company, is president of the club; August J. Fasking, retired capitalist and former wholesale dry goods merchant, is vice president, and Frank E. Davidson, president Illinois Architects' association, is treasurer.

Prominent Citizens Favor Move.

Hundreds of merchants, society leaders, city and state officials have been canvassed for opinions and support of the plans of the Jockey club, according to the secretary. All were of the belief the revival of clean racing in Illinois will be a progressive step in the history of the state and a timely antidote for the general depression of social and business conditions.

The character of the men elected to direct the operations of the new club assures the future patrons of racing in Illinois that the sport will be conducted on a plane to bear the scrutiny of its most critical opponents, the secretary says.

Notice has already been served on the alleged crooked bookmakers that they have been placed on the club's "blacklist" and on this blacklist they will remain, according to President Duntley. Racing Judge Joseph A. Murphy, sometimes referred to as "the Landis of racing," has accepted the general management of the plan.

Murphy Strong for Revival.

Mr. Murphy revived racing at New Orleans and Mobile. St. Louis is at the threshold of racing, due to his efforts, and he has been advising a group of California business men who plan to reopen Tanforan.

"I have made several trips to Chicago," Mr. Murphy says. "I have used my newspaper training to sound public sentiment. There is an insistent demand for racing. I have found, not only among those whom racing would benefit, but among many who know that every metropolis in the world, London, New York, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Melbourne, Toronto, Montreal, Mexico City, and others have their racing and that Chicago should keep pace with them.

"They do not want a steady grind of racing with six or seven races a day. What they want is a clean, high class limited season of racing with the Derby as the center setting, conducted by competent officials of unblemished reputation, as a sport of the people for the people with the betting as a mere incident to the racing itself.

"I have outlined a plan of action for the Illinois Jockey club. I have suggested a membership drive, increasing the membership to 3,000, inviting every class of decent citizen to join, putting the price within his reach.

Racing Privileges Legal.

"The law of 1887 is still on the statute books. It shows beyond peradventure that the legislature intended to give regularly organized race tracks certain privileges.

"We propose to submit a test case in the Lake county courts during a race meet planned for September. We have every assurance we will be successful."

The support of the society leaders, State street merchants and leading manufacturers of Chicago has assured success to the jockey club, the secretary says.

Among the State street merchants are John O'Connor, Walter Lytton, Marshall Field Jr., Otto and E. J. Lehmann, Robert Peacock, Townsend Netcher, and among the leaders of big industries are J. Ogden Armour, Cyrus McCormick Jr., Edward Morris, John Irwin, Francis S. Peabody, L. F. Swift Jr., Morris S. Rosenwald, C. A. Greiner, and others, according to the secretary.

Women Favor Move.

Prominent in the younger social set who have promised their support and lent their approval to the revival of thoroughbred racing in Illinois are Mrs. Helen Morton Swift, Mrs. Lenox Nicholson, Mrs. Marjory Carry Cudahy, Mrs. E. A. Cudahy Jr., Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, Mrs. Lolita Armour Mitchell, and Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor Jr., all ardent horsewomen.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

RACING LUCK.

BENJAMIN BLOCK, owner of the Kentucky Derby winner, Morvich, has been in the racing game less than a year. In that time Morvich and Mawrcoron, also a 3 year old, have gone to the post sixteen times and the Block colors, jade with orange blocks, have been in front at the wire just sixteen times. It is probably a turf record.

In his eleven victorious starts as a 2 year old and his Derby victory Morvich has earned $162,000. We have not the other youngster's figures, but his starts were in lesser races. As an example of what turfmen are beginning to call "Block luck," Mawrcoron started seventeen times as a 2 year old and won only four races, three of them after being acquired by the owner of Morvich.

That Morvich would have won the Kentucky Derby against any field is the opinion of those who saw the race, but certainly his task was lessened by the absence of Olympus and several other eastern colts which developed coughing fits, and by the mishap to Busy American in his preparation for the Kentucky classic.

When The Wake after the race expressed to Racing Agent Hart Dernham of the Block entourage the hope that the stable colors would be seen in the Derby of 1923, Dernham replied: "We can't tell. A person might buy 1,000 colts and not get another like this one."

Ditties of a Duffer.
A HOLE IN PAR.

Just yesterday I felt the world
Had used me shamefully;
It seemed her sharpest darts were hurled
At my anatomy.
The sky o'ercast by day with clouds,
At night, no guiding star;
Ignored, unnoticed in the crowds,
I had not holed in par.

Today the air is filled with song,
the way that seemed so dark
Is shining now. I waltz along
As carefree as a lark.
With deference, commuters bow
Adown the smoking car,
As modestly I tell them how
I made a hole in par.

No doubt this paean sounds absurd,
But pity cannot mar
The ecstacy that fills a bird,
When first he holes in par.

Old Second Church.

Dear Wake: A few days ago your column carried a question regarding the Illinois Central station at 16th street. I have an old newspaper clipping reading:

"The building now used as the Illinois Central station at 16th street was originally put up to be the Second Presbyterian church. Work was begun on it July 9 and the edifice was dedicated to the worship of God Sept. 1, 1843. The location of the church was on the south side of Randolph street, eighty feet east of Clark street.

"[Signed.] Edward L. Bradley."
[With the Second Presbyterian church for more than forty-six years.]

The above clipping was saved because relatives of mine lived in the flat above the station for thirty-one years. My aunt was station agent from 1885 until 1913. I. C. M.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Grover Alexander was in form yesterday and the result was a 5 to 3 victory for the Cubs over the trailing Boston Braves. After getting off to a bad start, when the Braves mixed three hits with two walks and an error by Johnny Kelleher for their three runs in the first inning, Alex pulled up and gave a great exhibition of his might.

JOHNNY KELLEHER

The big Bruin hurler was accorded some fine support by his mates, who clouted Dana Fillingim for ten safeties and came through with sparkling work in fielding. The Cubs wasted but one hit.

Terry Sparkles in Field.

Zeb Terry was the leading performer afield for the locals, grabbing a pop fly from Boeckel's bat in the fifth inning after a diving catch and whipping the ball to Grimes for a double play.

Right off the bat, the Braves started out like champions. In the first inning Powell, first up, smashed a hot one to Kelleher, who lost the ball around his feet. When he did grab it he threw badly to Grimes and Powell was safe. Kopf laid down a sacrifice and Southworth popped up to Kelleher. Then Alex got cold or something or other, for he passed Cruise and Boeckel, filling the sacks. Holke picked out the third ball offered him nad soaked it for a double down the first base line, Powell, Cruise, and Boeckel scoring.

Return Fire in First.

Ford singled to left and Boeckel was caught at the plate on a perfect throw by Barber. That ended the visitors' scoring.

The Bruins came back with two runs in their half of the first. Statz walked to open and Hollocher pulled a single to center, sending Statz to third. Kelleher singled to the same place and Arnold trotted home. Hollocher tallied on Grimes' infield out, but Friberg and Barber couldn't produce.

The Cubs evened the count in the fifth. Alexander singled, Hollocher sacrificed, and Kelleher singled, sending Alex home. In the seventh the Cubs took the lead with one more run produced on three straight singles by Statz, Hollocher, and Kelleher, Statz scoring.

In the eighth, Friberg's single, Barber's sacrifice, and O'Farrell's single scored Friberg.

The Braves didn't have a look in after the first inning, for Alex saw to it that the Braves didn't get a man past second, to the gratification of 9,000 fans.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—The esteemed Walter Johnson with many seasons of service behind him, still has his reputation. That was about all he needed today for fate dealt kindly with him and he hurled the Senators to victory in the first of the series with Gleason's downtrodden White Sox. The count was 4 and 3.

Schupp Yields Seven Hits.

Schupp out-pitched Johnson by a big margin. The slim southpaw who won a name for himself by his work with the Giants several years ago, was nicked for seven hits and issued only two walks. His trouble was that he didn't enjoy immunity in the pinches, the Senators bunching two wallops in three separate innings for all of their runs. They even coined one of their two passes into a tally.

That luck had much to do with the outcome was forcibly shown in the ninth. The Sox opened their last stand trailing by two runs. After one was disposed of, Mostil batted for McClellan and singled. Collins tripled to right and Mostil scored. Then came Hooper with a sizzling swipe over first base, but Judge leaped into space and speared the pill with one hand. A moment later Strunk flied out and everybody went home.

Score Tied in Fifth.

The Senators made their most violent assault on Schupp in the second, when two scored. Goebel opened with a single and went around on a three bagger by Shanks. The latter tallied on Picinich's long fly. The Sox got back one of these in the third on a pass to McClellan and hits by Collins and Hooper. In the fifth they tied it when, with the bases filled and none dead, Ernie Johnson sent a fly to center, permitting Sheely to score.

Milan's men went ahead in the fifth, when Picinich walked and made the circuit on hits by Peckinpaugh and Smith. Their other tally went across in the seventh when Peck and W. Johnson singled and E. Johnson fumbled Smith's grounder. The Sox ninth was the only stirring incident after this.

RIVAL CAPTAINS TAB 44 1-2 OF 127 POINTS IN MIZZO-KAW MEET

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 20.—Kansas, with Capt. Everett Bradley starring with twenty-nine points, defeated the Missouri U track team today, 65½ to 51½. Bradley was in great form, winning the 100 yard dash, high hurdles, shot put, broad jump, and javelin throw, and tieing Waddell for first in the high jump. Capt. Brutus Hamilton of Missouri, slowed down by an injury to his right thigh, sustained in the Drake relays, counted 15½ points. He was first in the discus, second in the broad jump and javelin, and tied with Dillenbeck of Kansas for second in the pole vault. His loss to Bradley in the javelin event was the real surprise of the meet.

White Sox Drown Diamond Woe in Society Punch Bowl

Washington, D. C., May 20.—[Special.]—Senator McKinley of Illinois was host tonight at his home in Seventeenth street to members of the Chicago White Sox baseball team and the Illinois delegation in congress. The Chicago players mingled with the legislators around the fruit punch bowls like veterans of many a Washington winter social season.

38,000 GREET HITLESS BABE'S LOSING RETURN

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—With the biggest crowd of the year, fully 38,000, and hand, cheering and waiting with expectancy for the long delayed thrills, Babe Ruth came back to the Polo grounds today and never once hit a ball past the infield. Thrills were all turned into groans of despair when the St. Louis Browns stampeded in the ninth inning and won the opening game of the series, 8 to 2.

The presence of Ruth and Meusel did no good whatever, unless from a box office standpoint. The whole Yankee team got only three safe blows.

Eleventh Hour Barrage.

As it was the New Yorkers almost won, for Sam Jones staved off the sturdy Browns until he had two men out in the ninth inning, and folks began to pour toward exits. The count then stood 2 to 1 in favor of the Yankees. But then along came Chick Shorten, a lowly substitute, as pinch hitter, and with two strikes he scraped a single past Ward. Next, Collins, substitute catcher, slammed a hot one to Scott, who deflected it to center field for a single. Shorten had gone to third, and Tobin, a dangerous hitter, bounced a nasty one down toward first base. Shorten skilled home with the tieing run.

Jacobson Gets Homer.

Then everything went to smash. Gerber poled a vicious single to right and Collins raced home from second, putting the Browns ahead.

Then Ken Williams walked, forcing Tobin home. With the bases loaded, Baby Doll Jacobson up and smashed a homer.

Ruth was first up in the last of the ninth. His best was a feeble roller to Sisler. Score:

OFFERS $60,000 FOR SNOB II., MORVICH RIVAL

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—Trainer Holly Hughes of the John Sanford string of thoroughbreds today was unable to give any encouragement to J. S. Cosden, Baltimore turfman, who made an offer of $60,000 for the French bred colt, Snob II., which made an impressive showing in winning the Stuyvesant handicap of one mile at Jamaica this week.

Hughes communicated with the Sanford home at Amsterdam, N. Y., but Sanford is touring in southern France.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned.

The Question.

Whom do you consider the greatest all around player (the one most valuable to his team) in the American league?

Where Asked.

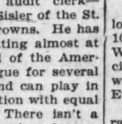
In the Vim store, 34 South Clark street.

The Answers.

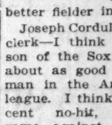
Gardner Baker, 34 South Clark street, salesman—Ray Schalk. He is one of the experienced men in the American league. He always has been a serious student of baseball, and he knows every point of the game. He is a very fine all around player and an expert, if that word can be applied to baseball players.

William Van Iderstine, 1844 Cuyler avenue, equipment man—I imagine you would get only one answer to that question, and that would be Babe Ruth. He is the home run king. He is equally at home in any position they wish to place him. Home runs are the most valuable things in the game.

Arthur Glesener, 3444 North Irving avenue, audit clerk—George Sisler of the St. Louis Browns. He has been batting almost at the head of the American league for several years, and can play in any position with equal ability. There isn't a better fielder in the American league.



Joseph Cordulack, Arlington Heights, clerk—I think Robertson of the Sox is just about as good as any man in the American league. I think the recent no-hit, no-run game against Detroit shows where he stands when you are speaking of the most valuable man in the league. The Sox are lucky to have him on their list.



Fred Recktenwald, 2112 North Maplewood avenue, clerk—Ray Schalk. He is good at the bat, in the field, and on the bases. He uses his head in emergencies, and knows how to crawl out of tight places. That furnishes thrills for the spectators and helps the gate receipts.

Leconey negotiated the century in :09 7-10, one-tenth of a second better than the former record of :09 4-5.

Urbana, Ill., May 20.—[Special.]—Headed by fleet footed Johnny Cameron, Evanston High school for the first time in the twenty-eight years of the history of the state interscholastic meet, triumphed today, decisively winning the championship of the class A division. The north shore lads earned thirty-five points, while their nearest rival in the big school class was Deerfield-Shields, tagging well behind with seventeen points.

'JOHNNY CAMERON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Sharing honors equally with Coach A. P. Bradley's Evanstonians, Forrest high school wrested victory in the huge class B field. It was a victory doubly sweet for the boys from Livingston county, for they retained the championship won in 1921.

Mile Record Broken.

Two new records were established in the big prep meet. Wortman of Shelbyville, running in the class B mile, where he encountered twenty-nine rivals, came from behind and won in 4:37. The former record was 4:37 1-5, made by Noonan of Decatur in 1920.

Simon of Canton hurled the javelin 171 feet, four inches better than the former record made by Goode of Whitehall last year. While no other new marks were established the times and distances in general were excellent, maintaining the high standard of the Illini classic.

Johnny Cameron, whose brilliant sprinting was a big factor in landing the North Shore squad in front, was awarded the Ma-Wanda trophy for the best individual performance. The award was made by Maj. J. L. Griffith, referee; James D. Lightbody, starter, and Harry Gill, Illinois' track coach, at the request of the senior society.

Cameron Is Brilliant Star.

Cameron won the century and furlong dashes in his division. In the 100 yard event Cameron won from Washington of Englewood after an exciting finish. In the furlong Goodwillie of University high forced the Evanston star to his utmost.

In addition to these feats, Cameron ran the final lap for the Evanston relay team and took away the lead from Deerfield-Shields, finishing in brilliant style, a victor.

Stewart, colored Deerfield hurdler, took both his races over the barriers, and was another outstanding performer. Joe Dicenso, young Italian from the little town of Toluca, lived up to expectations by walking off with both dashes in the class B. Heralded as a sprinter who had cut a second off ten seconds, the sturdy, finely proportioned young athlete was not required to extend himself as his times were only fair.

Bradley's Coaching Noticeable.

Evanston's victory was the result of notable work by Coach Bradley's athletes.

The team's record:

Cameron, first in 100 and 220 yard dashes.
Bill Reeves, first in half mile.
Joe Swan, first in quarter mile.
Oliver Barker, first in pole vault.
Horace Secrist, second in broad jump and fourth in 50 yard dash.
Francis Merrill, fourth in high hurdles.

Cameron, swan and Secrist also participated in the relay victory, Hart being the fourth runner.

Forrest, coached by C. C. Merrill, won mainly through the prowess of Marion Leonard and Bert Dancey. Leonard won the high hurdles, placed in the high jump and ran in the relay in which his squad was a victor. Dancey won the low hurdles, placed third in the 50 yard dash and took part in the relay. H. Rugg and Keeley were other relay racers whose work helped to again bring honors to Forrest.

No interscholastic meet was ever run off so expeditiously as today's, the arrangements reflecting credit upon C.

JACK, OFF TO SEE THE FOLKS, GRINS OVER LOVE HOAX

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of The Tribune boxing representatives are:
At New York—Jack Sharkey and "Pepper" Martin fought a draw [12]; Joe Mandell beat Frankie Callahan [10].

New York, May 20.—Chock full of temperament since his European tour, Boxing Champion Champion Jack Dempsey late today caught a train for Los Angeles, upsetting plans of Tex Rickard for a series of conferences at which he hoped to close with the champion for a match this fall with Harry Wills or some other aspirant.

Dempsey decided suddenly that he wanted to see "the folks," so he packed a few of his English cut clothes and his jaunty check cap to Grand Central station, where a big impromptu crowd cheered him.

He still wore the monocle he brought back from England as a "joke on Jack Kearns," and was chuckling over the great marriage hoax he had perpetrated on the big town newspapermen. Kearns stayed here to negotiate with Rickard for a match.

His Secretary's Idea.

Dismissing the announcement made last night on his return from England that he was engaged to a "Miss Edith Rockwell of Boulder, Colo.," Jack Dempsey today asserted that it was simply a joke on the reporters, who always were forecasting his marriage. He said the announcement was the idea of his secretary, Teddy Hayes.

"I see by the papers that Rockwell went well," the champion added with a grin. Mheanwhile newspapers from here to Los Angeles have been deluging Denver and Boulder with long distance calls and urgent telegraph messages for interviews and pictures of "Edith."

One brought the following news dispatch:

Denver, Colo., May 20.—Miss Edith Rockwell, to whom Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, was reported engaged, stayed at the Y. W. C. A. here until two weeks ago. At that time she disappeared and none of her friends have seen her since.

This dispatch just added to the merriment of the Dempsey party hoaxsters.

Kearns Talks With Promoters.

After the champion's departure Manager Jack Kearns conferred with Tex Rickard and Frank Flournoy, promoters, regarding the proposed championship contests.

Assuming that Jess Willard, the former title holder, and Harry Wills, the New Orleans Negro heavy, were the most formidable opponents for Dempsey, Kearns and the promoters discussed possibilities for holding contests with both of them in August or September.

HERE HE IS WITH HIS MONOCLE

JACK DEMPSEY. JACK KEARNS.

World's heavyweight champion, as he appeared on his arrival in New York with his manager. Jack says he doesn't propose to make the monocle a habit, but wanted to give his friends a thrill. Jack denied his assertion that he was going to take a wife unto him self. He said he was only spoofing his newspaper friends, doncherknow. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

SUZANNE AGAIN NEAR COLLAPSE, BUT WINS

MOLLA SAILS

NEW YORK, May 20.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory sailed for England today supremely confident as she leaned over the rail of the Cedric, on which she sailed with Miss Edith Sigourney of Boston. The American woman tennis champion said: "I'm going to Wimbledon to win that title. I came close to it last year, but feel I'm at the top of my game now and can win it. Then I'm going to France. If I do not meet Mlle. Lenglen in England, I'll play her there. She beat me the last time we met in Europe, and she may do so again. But if she does, she will have to play a lot better tennis than she did before."

BRUSSELS, May 20.—[By Associated Press.]—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen won her way to the final round of the international hard court tournament today by defeating Miss McKane of England, 10—8, 6—2, after the English player had a lead of 8—7 in the first set. Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California decisively defeated Mme. De Borman of Belgium, 6—2, 6—0, and qualifies to play Mlle. Lenglen in the final round.

Cochet Wins Way to Finals

In the men's single semi-finals young Cochet of France won his match, defeating Misha of Roumania, 4—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—1.

In the finals of the international mixed doubles Suzanne and Cochet, representing France, defeated Mrs. Beamitss and Gilbert of England, 6—4, 4—6, and 6—0.

Another match in the men's singles returned Count de Gomar of Spain victor over Borotra, France, 4—6, 8—6, 6—1, 6—0.

Suzanne Near Collapse.

After Mlle. Lenglen was leading, 3—0, in her match with Miss McKane, the English player led successively at 5—4, 6—5, 7—6, 8—7, and looked like a sure winner, for the Frenchwoman began complaining of pains about the heart, repeatedly placing her hand as if to ease the pain, and looking up appealingly at her father in the grandstand. She began making many errors and outs, and seldom got her first service past the net. Miss McKane tired, however, even when Suzanne seemed on the verge of collapse.

Mlle. Lenglen may abandon tennis after this tournament. She has been complaining throughout the week of a heart affection. Her father is urging her strongly not to play in the Wimbledon tournament, but she is anxious to defend her title there. She will consult a Paris specialist Monday and abide by his decision.

Woods and Waters

BOB BECKER

SOME DOPE ON OUTDOOR EQUIPMENT.

If there ever was a year when the outdoorsman can go on his vacation rigged out with a maximum amount of A-1 equipment, this is it. There are more new and improved outing articles on the market than you can shake a stick at. Honestly, if these manfacturers don't quit turning out new things designed to make a fishing, motoring or camping trip as comfortable as staying at home there won't be an edge left on this stunt of going to the woods.

* *

To look through an outdoor magazine and studiously observe the ads (which we all do, especially at this time of the year) is like reading a house furnishing catalog, what with the alluring reading matter about collapsible gasoline stoves, comfortable air beds as easy as a feather bed, and "ice box" lunch baskets. The only thing that I havn't seen advertised is a tent with hot and cold running water in it. When that arrives the railroads will be ruined; the resort owners up north will then have to bring their lakes to the camper instead of the camper going to the lakes. The popularity of motor camping has certainly stirred up the tent makers until there is an assortment on the market with so many varieties that the most fastidious outdoorsman can now be satisfied.

One of the neatest little inventions that will make camping easier and very likely more popular is the small, folding gasoline stove which will burn whether it rains or shines. We have just recently tried out one of these and they sure are nifty. They can be started and operated in any kind of weather and produce a hot fire on short notice. Quite as handy as the stove itself is the folding oven which goes with this Auto Kamp Kook Kit that we have. With this little oven you can turn out a pan of biscuits or bake a fish just like on the old gas stove at home.

BOY SCOUTS

SCOUTS TO RULE CITY.

NEXT Saturday the Eagle Scouts of Chicago will for one hour, between 11 o'clock and noon, assume the responsibilities of the city officials from the mayor down. A session of the city council will be held in the council chambers. The Eagle Scouts who will fill these positions were selected at the meeting of 5,000 Boy Scouts held in the Auditorium theater immediately after the Boys' week parade. This was probably the largest and most enthusiastic bunch of scouts ever assembled in Chicago.

Leaving Ogden park at 9:30, Scout messengers going at Scout's pace will carry a message from the southwest district to the headquarters of the Chicago Heights council on Saturday. At Chicago Heights a contest will be held in the afternoon.

Calumet Scout masters will meet on Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Palmer park for their monthly meeting. Reports of the district camping committee and executive committee will be submitted.

Scout Executive Stephenson has just returned from the Owasippe group of camps. Building of the two new mess halls and three new swimming piers is already under way, and will be completed by the time camp opens. The Scouts at the spring camp planted over 10,000 tree seedlings. The Michigan state hatcheries will stock the lake with fish this week.

FIRST STEEPLECHASE IN 15 YEARS SUNDAY

For the first time in fifteen years Chicago will next Sunday witness a steeplechase. It will be run off in connection with the annual Stock Yards Derby at Palatine and will be only one of the features of the Stockyards Racing association meet. The steeplechase will go a distance of one and one-half miles. In addition to the purse the Illinois Automobile club trophy will be given the winner.

Fifteen entries are expected in the Derby event. Another feature will be the Dexter Park handicap, of five-eighths mile, contested by thoroughbreds from many parts of the country.

A card of trotting and pacing races will be run.

Chicago Trims Racine on Saier's Homer in 14th

Racine, Wis., May 20.—[Special.]—Saier's long home run in the fourteenth inning terminated a sensational ball game here, the Chicagos defeating Racine, 6 to 5, Black and Shields, finishing on the mound for the Belles and Chicago, respectively, yielding three and four hits each. Catcher Goldthwaite also made a homer for the visitors. Score:

Split Bamboo for Better Casting

HEDDON split bamboo has a spring that comes from no other material—the live, quick-acting resiliency that gives great casting force and accuracy, with the least strain on rod, wrist and arm.

The short butt and long tip of Heddon Rods, devised by Jim Heddon, gives the long, springy sweep that distributes every strain equally over the whole length of the rod and prevents breakage.

Beautiful balance that makes the rod seem like a part of your own arm. A rod you will be proud to own. Comes in 4½, 5, and 5½ foot lengths. $6 to $30.

See them at stores in your city displaying the mammoth bass window card. Universally sold and used.

DR. RAEDEL WINS TRIAL HEAT FOR GOLF DERBY PLAY

MORE HOLES IN 1

ALTHOUGH John O'Neil, manager of the Great Northern hotel has played golf only a short time, he has listened to a lot of golf conversation. This may have helped him to get the ninth hole at Glen Oak in one early last week. It measures 150 yards. Yesterday Richard Salter, one of the stars of the club, made the fifth hole, 143 yards, in a single.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Dr. Edward H. Raedel, lengthy representative of the Westmoreland Country club, yesterday proved the best performer on a rather soft track in the trial heat of the annual golf Derby at Midlothian Country club. With a card of 41—40—81 he finished three strokes ahead of Kenneth P. Edwards of Glen View, who played his first golf as a knickerbockered boy at Midlothian. Kenneth had a card of 43—41—81 and tied with C. V. Essroger of Flossmoor, 41—43—84.

John H. Coulter of Oak Park and J. Howard Johnson of the home club had similar totals of 85. The annual event brought out a fine crowd, many former Midlothian players turning out. Leading cards:

Raedel—Out	5	4	4	4	4	5	6	4	5	—41
Edwards—Out	5	3	6	4	5	4	6	5	5	—43
Essroger—Out	5	3	4	5	4	6	5	4	5	—41
Raedel—In	6	5	3	4	4	3	5	5	5	—40—81
Edwards—In	4	6	3	5	4	4	6	5	4	—41—84
Essroger—In	5	5	3	6	6	3	5	5	5	—43—84

Finishing with a best ball of 58, J. A. Bender, C. A. Frary, A. C. Frost, and C. J. Frechette won the prize for the leading foursome. All of the entrants were stabled last night at the club and will start the thirty-six hole round today in foursomes.

MIDWEST NEEDS COLLEGE ROWING TO RIVAL EAST

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

W. ECKERSALL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

In recent years, college athletics in the middle west have improved to such an extent that teams developed in the section can be rightfully entitled to an equal rating with the best in the east. This was proven conclusively in football last fall, when Notre Dame, Chicago, and Nebraska invaded the east and won from the Army, Princeton, and Pittsburgh, respectively.

The best teams and athletes in the middle west did not attend the Penn relay games this year and there is no way of comparing the two sections on the track and field unless the east elects to send them to the National Intercollegiate on Stagg field, June 17, Middle west baseball and basketball teams to match with those in the east.

Middle West Behind.

Despite this rapid improvement, the middle west is sadly behind in rowing. With the exception of Wisconsin, which has maintained a crew for years under adverse conditions, no institutions in the middle west have taken kindly to a sport which is looked upon with tremendous favor in the east.

If the middle west intends to try to keep pace with the east, other middle western institutions should give Wisconsin enough of a helping hand so that crew work will be taken up and plans made for holding a midwest regatta each year. This can be done without a great initial layout of money but the sport has so many possibilities that it may not be long before a rowing classic similar to one held annually off Poughkeepsie on the Hudson, in the east, will be planned for the middle west.

Impossible at Some Schools.

Conditions at some universities and colleges make rowing out of the question. Illinois, Iowa, and Ohio State are without any neighboring stream or lake, while most of the others are within a reasonable distance of some body of water on which the crews could work in the early spring. At these institutions those in charge claim lack of funds makes it impossible to even give the sport a thought.

Tom Jones, capable director of athletics at Wisconsin, in a recent statement asserted a rowing crew is maintained at Madison at an annual expenditure of about $5,000. This, of course, does not include cost of equipment.

"Our expenditures for rowing usually run around $5,000, if the Poughkeepsie regatta is part of our schedule," Director Jones said. "Added to this should be the cost of a new shell once in four or five years. This would be approximately $1,000.

"About 250 men participate in this sport, beginning in the fall with work on the rowing machines, which continues through the winter. From this number eight or ten crews are selected for spring work on the water.

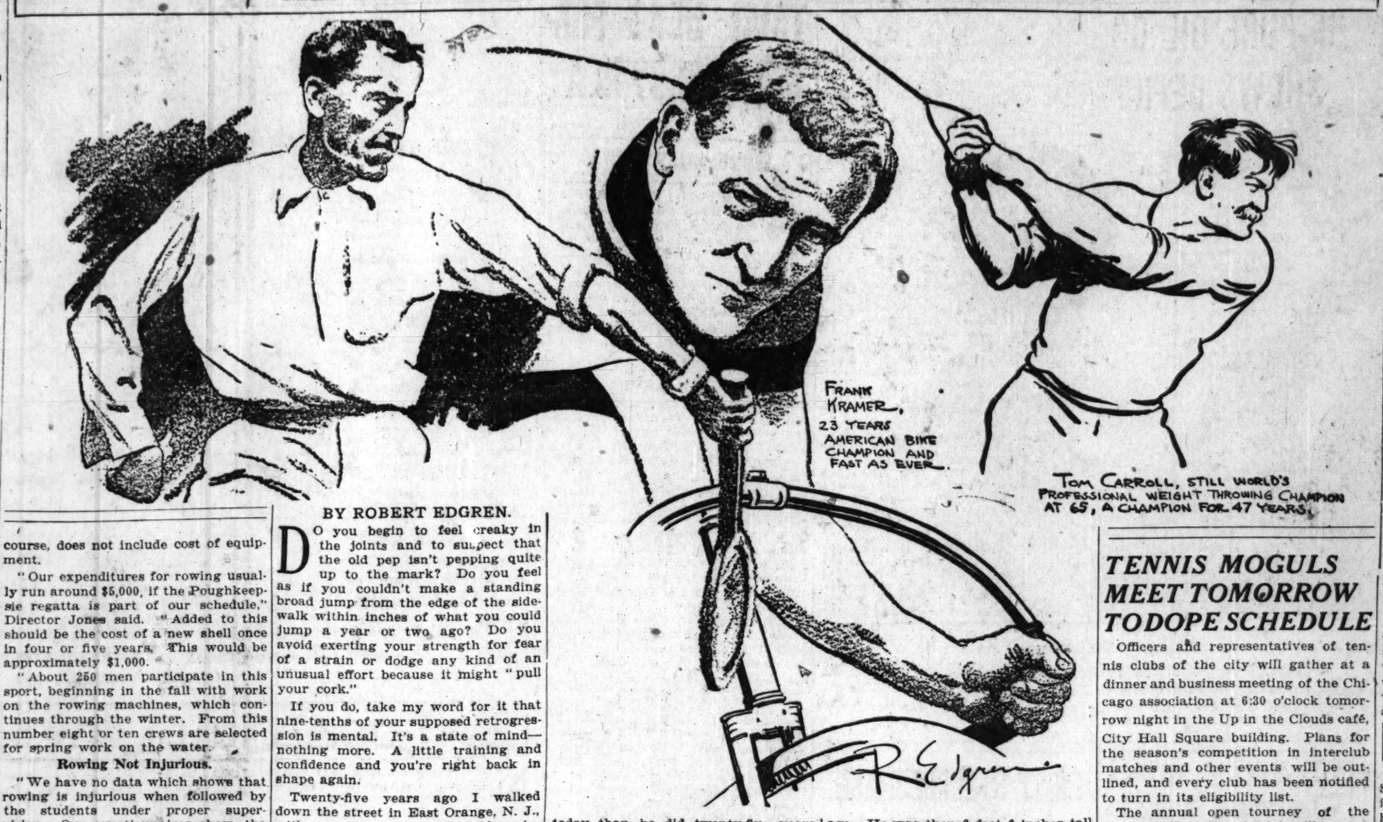
Rowing Not Injurious.

"We have no data which shows that rowing is injurious when followed by the students under proper supervision. Our questionnaires show the opposite, that it has proven beneficial. Studies made at Columbia, Harvard, and Cornell all disprove the theory that rowing has a bad effect on participants. Wisconsin students and alumni have always taken a keen interest in this sport, and if the neighboring colleges having proper rowing facilities would take up this sport and establish a midwest regatta this interest would greatly increase in the section."

Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan, recently asserted rowing would demand too much money. The veteran football mentor has decided to take part of this amount of money to build an outdoor gymnasium, which will furnish facilities for thousands to exercise. On the other hand, Director Yost said if the same amount of money was put into rowing not more than 250 students would benefit from it.

Outside of Wisconsin, Purdue has the best natural advantages for rowing.

MENTAL STATE HELPS OLD ATHLETES TO SUCCEED



BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Do you begin to feel creaky in the joints and to suspect that the old pep isn't pepping quite up to the mark? Do you feel as if you couldn't make a standing broad jump from the edge of the sidewalk within inches of what you could jump a year or two ago? Do you avoid exerting your strength for fear of a strain or dodge any kind of an unusual effort because it might "pull your cork."

If you do, take my word for it that nine-tenths of your supposed retrogression is mental. It's a state of mind—nothing more. A little training and confidence and you're right back in shape again.

Twenty-five years ago I walked down the street in East Orange, N. J., with a young amateur bike rider who had just won two or three races and had shown a remarkable turn of speed for a novice. His name was Frank Kramer.

Kramer Dopes Out Future.

"I'm going to stick to racing," said Frank, "and I'm going to take care of myself and last as long as I can. I think I'll be riding faster twenty years from now than I can today. I have it all figured out. Clean living, plenty of sleep, no dissipation, lots of work."

A few weeks ago, April 16, to be exact, Frank Kramer started his twenty-third year of racing as a champion professional bicycle racer. In all he has raced for twenty-six years, four as an amateur champion, and twenty-two as a professional. He has lost races occasionally, of course, but has always come back with another winning streak. His early speed stays with him and in fact he rides faster today than he did twenty-five years ago—which makes his prediction more than good.

Frank Kramer is now 41 years of age—and his speed is still there.

If you asked Kramer the reason for his success he would tell you that he keeps his speed because he sleeps ten hours every night. He lives largely on a fruit and vegetable diet and eats sparingly. His only drink is water. He never smokes. During the last five years Frank has played a great deal of golf, which he says gives him the right amount of physical and mental exercise to keep him fit.

Carroll Strong at 65.

Tom Carroll, the great professional weight thrower and all around athlete, is another remarkable figure among the long lived champions, the greatest athlete I have ever known. Tom first began breaking world's weight throwing records when he was 18 years of age. He was then 6 feet 6 inches tall and weighed about 190 pounds.

Today at 65 he is 6 feet 7, weighs 265 pounds, hasn't a gray hair, is built like Jack Dempsey, and can still throw a 56 pound weight as far as ever.

The most remarkable amateur golfer I know of is Walter J. Travis, who started playing at 35 to restore broken down health, and continued playing tournament golf to the age of 59. He won many American titles and in 1904 at Sandwich captured the English Amateur trophy—being the only American who ever turned the trick.

GOPHERS TAKE DUAL MEET FROM BADGERS, 68-67

Minneapolis, Minn., May 20.—In one of the closest events ever held on Northrop field here, University of Minnesota defeated the University of Wisconsin in a conference dual track and field meet today, 68 to 67. Not until the last two events was the winner decided.

After Capt. Merle Sweitzer and his teammate, Hirt, had taken the first two places in the half mile in a sensational finish, it was necessary that Minnesota win a second at least in the broad jump, the final event, to capture the meet. This, Farley of Minnesota did, jumping 22 feet ½ inch in his final try, beating the mark of 21 feet 7¾ inches made by Johnson of Wisconsin.

Each team took seven firsts and tied for one. Guy Sundt of Wisconsin was high individual point getter, placing first in the shotput and broad jump, second in the javelin throw, and third in the discus, for a total of 14 points.

IOWA WINS STATE MEET

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—University of Iowa athletes, scoring in every event except the discus, ran away with the thirteenth annual state track and field meet here this afternoon, scoring 79 points. Iowa State college of Ames was second with 54 points, Drake third with 19, Grinnell fourth with 15 points, and Morningside fifth with 5.

OHIO WINS AGGIE MEET

East Lansing, Mich., May 20.—Ohio State's track team today beat the Michigan Aggies, 68 to 58. Moorhead was high point winner for Ohio, taking two firsts and a tie for one second place. Guerney of Ohio lowered the field record for the half mile, beating Brendel by less than a foot in 1:59 1-5. Capt. Ernst of the Aggies set new field marks for the 440 yard run and the 220 yard low hurdles. Ernst was the high point winner of the meet.

RIDGE PARK BEATEN.

Staging a ninth inning rally of six runs, the Western Union defeated Ridge Park at Beverly Hills, 8 to 7. Score:

Western Union	000	200	006	8	14	0
Ridge Park	012	020	000	7	12	1

Batteries—Turek and McDonnell; Sutherland and Rheinberger.

The Peerless of Today

To those who demand an accounting in the way of uninterrupted motor car service, the Peerless, with its eight cylinder Peerless-built motor, is worthy of preference.

For, after all, supreme motoring comfort has its chief source in the velvety ebb and flow of a wealth of power. The Peerless conveys that sense of power abundance and power control in every phase of its performance.

The keen new interest in the Peerless is justified by the cars now built by R. H. Collins and his associates.

We want you to see these cars, to drive them, to know how well they meet your demands, however exacting they may be.

Coupled with the performance of the car itself and equally important in judging motor car values, is the exceptional service we are equipped to give Peerless owners at this direct factory branch.

Closing hog trade was comparatively strong with few left unsold. A third of the 8,000 received Saturday were consigned to packers from outside markets. Day's top at $11.00 equaled high point since March 10. Owing to poorer quality, Saturday's average dropped to $10.70, against $10.75 Friday, $10.50 a week ago, and $8.65 a year ago. Packers were good buyers.

Week's receipts of hogs at 138,500 increased 11,100 over the previous week and 8,300 over a year ago, standing 6,000 below the ten year average. Estimated average weight last week, 241 lbs, against 244 lbs the previous week, 240 a year ago, and 234 lbs for the ten year average.

The week's cattle trade after a sharp break the opening day was generally satisfactory, with closing prices for beef steers practically the highest of the week. The general average price of good beef cattle at $8.25 stood within 5c of the high week of the year. Exporters sent out about 1,500 steers during the week, which cost around $8.00@8.25.

Lamb Trade Closes Strong.

Eastern competition at the close forced handy weight aged lambs values 25c above Friday's level, with several loads of shorn ranging from $12.75 to $13.00 for 1930 lbs averages. Top for the week stands within 60c of previous week's best time, and $1.75 lower than two weeks ago, while general average cost of fat lambs at $12.40, owing to fewer wooled classes and recent sharp declines, shows a $1.45 drop compared with a week ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 21,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, against 23,563 cattle, 40,333 hogs, and 21,032 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 57,000 cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 65,000 sheep.

Probable receipt of hogs for Monday are estimated from 35,000 to 50,000. R. C. Griffith marked 35,000, J. M. Waters 10,000, H. H. Moore 40,000, Lester Arnour 41,000, F. W. Waddell and W. H. Overman 42,000, J. Fitzgerald 45,000, Edward Morris 48,000, and A. G. Wellner 50,000.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The stock market during the short period of trading yesterday was unusually active and prices of many stocks rose to new high record for the year to date. Railroad stocks especially were strong, gains of 1 to 2 points being numerous in this group. The advance in the rails was not confined to the high priced dividend paying shares; in fact, the low priced issues were most prominent, the basis for speculation being that more will be heard of railroad mergers within the near future. Petroleum stocks were also prominent as a result of increased demand for gasoline with more favorable weather. The coppers just about held their own, following the rapid rise in the earlier days of the week.

While United States Steel common sold up to 102, a new high record for the year, the independent steel stocks were particularly weak following the announcement that another company had dropped out of the proposed merger of independent companies. Republic Iron and Steel, now the main factor in the "five company merger," opened down 3¾ points at 72 and later sold at 71. At the close of 72¾ the stock recorded a net loss of 2⅞. Midvale Steel and Ordnance lost a point.

The action of Mexican Petroleum during the closing days of the week has created the impression that this stock has regained its old time leadership in the speculative oil group. At the high of 137¼ yesterday the stock recorded a new high record for the year, and it is now more than 30 points above the low price for 1922 established in January. It is said that during the early part of the week professionals sold the stock on the theory that it was too high. There was little doing in the oil stocks, outside of Mexican Petroleum, but Standard Oils and stocks of some of the independent companies traded in on the outside exchange were firm.

New York bankers yesterday announced the purchase of a bond issue of 30,000,000 guilders, approximately $12,000,000, of the Anton Jurgens United Works of Holland, one of the world's largest producers of butter substitutes and allied products. The offering price and the rate of interest will not be announced until the bonds are offered for public sale next week. An issue of 10,000,000 guilders will be floated simultaneously in Holland.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending May 17 by 199 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $949,177,000, compared with $902,332,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $949,177,000, compared with $971,728,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Exports of iron and steel from the United States in March totaled 210,095 long tons, an increase over January and February of 30 and 55 per cent, respectively, according to statistics compiled by the iron and steel division of the department of commerce. The total volume of American exports of iron and steel for the first quarter of the present year was 508,070 tons, or at the rate of slightly more than 2,000,000 tons for the year.

The Tennessee Coal and Iron company has advanced the wages of ore miners 15 per cent and of coal miners 10 per cent.

The total estimated valuation of building permits issued in 167 cities in April was $212,735,607, compared with $262,283,354 in March, according to the American Contractors' compilation. Disregarding a decrease of about $65,000,000 at New York, the total for the other cities continued the upward tendency shown in March.

There were 459 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 408 in the preceding week and 316 during the corresponding week last year.

The Ford company plans to make 1,100,000 cars this year, an increase of about 10 per cent over 1921 production, says a dispatch from Detroit.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Traffic Motor Truck corporation the plan calling for the transfer of all the assets of the company to the Associated Motor Industries, Inc., was ratified.

ANNUAL REPORT OF PURE OIL CO. SHOWS DEFICIT

Overproduction of crude and refined oils, general business depression, and writing down of inventories last year resulted in considerably reduced earnings by the Pure Oil company and subsidiaries. The annual report for the fiscal year ended March 31 shows net earnings of $4,966,781, but after all charges and dividends paid there was a total deficit of $5,864,093. In the preceding fiscal period net earnings were $8,636,050, but after all charges and dividends there was a deficit of $3,088,993. Surplus now stands at $46,414,481, compared with $52,151,757 on March 31, 1921.

In forecasting the future President B. G. Dawes says the present demand for refined oils for both domestic and foreign consumption has improved decidedly and a more prosperous year is expected.

Stock Increased, Notes Retired.

The common stock of the company was increased during the year by $3,490,025, of which $2,502,150 was sold for cash and $987,875 was distributed as a dividend. The preferred stock was increased $5,130,200 and sold for cash. The recent issue of common stock was fully sold at par by April 10, but only $1,292,600 is reflected in the report, which was the amount paid for up to March 31. From the proceeds the company will retire on June 1 its $7,980,000 serial notes.

During the year $7,000,000 was invested in the stock of the Humphreys Oil company, $4,000,000 in the stocks of the Humphreys-Pure Oil Pipe Line company and the Humphreys-Pure Oil Refineries corporation, and $4,339,852 in capital expenditures. At present the Humphreys-Pure Oil interest is one of the largest producers of light grade crude oil in this country.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east of Chicago and St. Louis gave favorable account of traffic conditions in spite of the continuation of the coal strike and the small shipments of that commodity compared to normal. The total shipments are running better than a year ago, and in the case of most commodities, coal excepted, the offerings of freight reflect a general increase in activity. Officials of southern roads find similar conditions prevailing. Barring the coal traffic conditions, there is little to complain of in regard to general outlook.

Railroads serving the nonunion coal fields reported a substantial increase in the coal movement. The Norfolk and Western, the Virginian, and the Chesapeake and Ohio report loadings of bituminous in the first two weeks of May as considerably in excess of those of May, 1921.

The interstate commerce commission has suspended until Sept. 15 the operation of certain schedules published by the Louisville and Nashville, which proposed to cancel joint through commodity rates and apply in lieu thereof combination rates on bituminous coal from mines in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Virginia to points in Minnesota and South Dakota and to Superior, Wis.

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha railroad asked the interstate commerce commission for authority to issue and sell $2,700,000 in debenture bonds of 1930. The interest rate will be 5 per cent and the road proposes to reimburse its treasury with the receipts from the sale of the securities for expenditures on additions and betterments already made.

The New York Central railroad authorized immediate commencement of construction of Castleton, N. Y., bridge and cut-off calling for ultimate expenditure of about $20,000,000, of which approximately $12,000,000 will be spent in next two years.

The Grand Trunk railway has decided to begin grade separations in Detroit as the first step in an improvement program, which will add a large industrial area to the company's freight producing territory. The road plans the expenditure of $20,000,000 in anticipation of the intensive industrial development of the territory embraced.

Disposition of Southern railway's order for 5,300 box cars is as follows: American Car and Foundry company, 3,000, with option on 1,000 additional; Mount Vernon Car Manufacturing company, 1,300, and Standard Steel Car company, 1,000. Miscellaneous orders placed recently call for 635 cars, passenger and freight. It is estimated there are additional inquiries in the market for about 15,000 freight cars.

The Value of Investment Experience

IN ascertaining the facts about any investment the investor must rely, to some extent, on the word of the one offering it to him. That is why it is to your advantage to deal with an Investment Banking firm which has been in business long enough to have proved its adherence to safe investment principles.

DeWolf & Company, during its thirty-three years' history, have confined their dealings to high grade securities. A "DeWolf Approved" bond, therefore, not only represents its own present and future safety, but also reflects the experience we have gained during a third of a century.

We offer the following bonds, subject to prior sale and change in price:

Investment "Don'ts."

Don't buy securities from an individual—whether he be a stranger or your best friend—unless you know him to be representing a reputable concern.

Don't assume the concern he claims to represent is reputable just because he tells you it is. Any reputable firm should be willing and glad to furnish bank references. Demand these and inquire at the banks before you invest. If the firm refuses to furnish references, let it alone. It is just as cheap to purchase securities through an established, reliable investment house as through a shady one—and a great deal safer.

Don't invest your money in any security—no matter who is selling it—until you know all about the security you are purchasing. A reputable investment house or a reputable corporation (if you purchase direct from the issuer) will be glad to show you the latest financial statement, the history of past business and earnings, dividend record, etc.—in fact, all data bearing on the investment value of the security they are selling. If they will not or cannot show you data which indicate that the security is a sound investment do not invest. Substantial investment houses have ample information in their files on the securities they handle. This information is usually the result of careful investigation on their part and is at the service of their clients.

Don't be lured into an investment through dazzling promises of big returns unless careful and thprough investigation shows the investment to be safe. You don't throw your money away in the conduct of your business. You know where every dollar is going and why. Carry this same business judgment into your investments. You employ men to work for you in your business and you know just where they are employed and how. In an investment you put your money to work and it is equally important that you should know just where it is to be employed and how.

Don't jeopardize the safety of 100 per cent of principal to secure one or two additional per cent of interest.

Don't hesitate to ask the advice of this department on your investment problems. THE TRIBUNE maintains this service for investors.

THESE bonds are secured by land in fee, size 83x213 feet, and building, leased to the United States Government and occupied by the Quincy Station. The Station has been completed and in operation for over a year, and is located in a district that for prospects of future development is unsurpassed in Chicago.

The lease is for twenty years, at $125,000 per annum, or $2,500,000 for the term. This income is more than sufficient to pay the interest, retire the bonds and meet all other requirements.

An Opportunity That Must Be Acted Upon At Once

WHEN The Investors Company underwrote the $700,000 Quincy Station First Mortgage Bonds in January, 1921, the issue, due to its exceptional merit, was oversold in record time. Hundreds of investors were disappointed.

Now we have been fortunate to obtain a substantial portion for resale, at par, to yield 7%. Thus the many investors who were too late to secure bonds when the issue was originally brought out have the opportunity to get some now —if they act at once.

DORT MOTOR CAR COMPANY

FLINT, MICHIGAN
A DELAWARE CORPORATION
Transfer Agent: Guaranty Trust Co., New York
Registrar: New York Trust Co., New York

The following information is summarized by Mr. J. D. Dort, President of the Company, from his accompanying letter:

HISTORY OF THE COMPANY: The Dort Motor Car Company was established in 1915 by the managing personnel of the Durant-Dort Carriage Co., one of the largest manufacturers in the world of horse drawn passenger and commercial vehicles. The Durant-Dort Carriage Co. was founded in 1886 by W. C. Durant, until recently President of General Motors and now President of the newly formed Durant Motors, and J. D. Dort, now President of Dort Motor Car Co. With these gentlemen were later associated Charles W. Nash, now President of Nash Motor Car Co., C. B. Hayes, President Hayes Wheel Co., A. B. C. Hardy, now President of the Oldsmobile Co., C. H. Bonbright of the Imperial Wheel Co., and Fred J. Weiss, President of Flint Motor Axle Co.

MANAGEMENT: The management of the Dort Motor Car Company has been associated with the automobile business since the early days of the industry, the Durant-Dort Carriage Company being one of the organizers and principal stockholders of the Buick Motor Car Company, which was organized in 1904. All the present officers of the Dort Motor Car Company were associated with J. D. Dort in the Durant-Dort Carriage Co.

PRODUCTION: The capacity of the Company's plants at Flint, Michigan, is 150 cars per day, and up to January 1, 1922, more than 88,000 cars had been produced and sold. In addition to these plants, the Company owns a plant for the manufacture of its motor car bodies at Kalamazoo, Mich. On account of the rapid "come-back" of the automobile industry and the present strong demand for cars of the Dort-class, the company is now operating to large capacity its main plant at Flint, Michigan, and its special body plant at Kalamazoo. We are advised that the present production is at the rate of about 2,500 cars per month. Orders now on the books will keep plants running at full capacity through July.

CAPITALIZATION: With the sale of the 75,000 shares, the capitalization of the Company would be represented by 200,000 shares of no par value Common Stock. The only funded debt of the company consists of $1,000,000 First Mortgage Seven Per Cent Bonds due May 13, 1923, to May, 1927.

PURPOSE OF FINANCING: This offering of Common Stock is for the sole purpose of providing the Company with additional working capital and reduction of bank loans. The Company does not require capital for extensions or betterments, as it is amply provided with complete plant equipment for any normal extension of its business.

EARNINGS: (Before taxes, based upon the audit of Ernst & Ernst).

1916	Average	Capital	$300,000	Earnings	$321,347 or 107%
1917	"	"	$1,500,000	"	$336,391 " 22%
1918	"	"	$1,750,000	"	$165,815 " 9%
1919	"	"	$1,925,000	"	$1,171,088 " 60%
1920	"	"	$2,550,000	"	$1,008,091 " 39%

The drop in earnings reported in 1918 was due to restrictions placed upon automobile production by the War Industries Board. Despite that handicap the Company's earnings, before Federal taxes, during the five years shown above, averaged an annual net profit of over 37% on the capital employed. In 1921, owing to unprecedented conditions in the industry, necessitating inventory and other adjustments to meet declining prices, the Company reported a loss of $555,000. But including this loss in 1921, the Company, since organization seven years ago to date, has shown an average annual net profit of over 20% on the capital employed.

DIVIDENDS: Since organization dividends have been paid in stock and cash amounting to $1,714,209.13. It is the announced intention of the management to continue liberal dividend policies in the future as in the past.

ASSETS: With the sale of this offering the net sound tangible assets of the Company, as shown by the balance sheet at the end of the last fiscal year, October 31, 1921, would total in excess of $4,000,000, or over $20 per share for the Common Stock. Plants and equipment have been marked down to sound values, and inventories to market value. This does not give consideration to very valuable patents, from which last year were received in royalties over $20,000, trade-marks, trade name, and a good will commonly carried on the books of concerns of this character at millions of dollars.

LEGALITY: All legal matters in connection with this issue have been passed upon for the Company by Mr. John J. Carton of Flint, Michigan, and for the bankers by Messrs. Redmond & Murray of New York City, N. Y. Messrs. Winston, Strawn & Shaw, Chicago, have represented the Company in matters relating to the validation of this issue in Illinois.

STOCKS STRONG DESPITE FLURRY IN STEEL ISSUES

The New York Times.

New York, May 20.—[Special.]—That such "week-end readjustment" of speculative accounts as occurred on the stock exchange today should have been chiefly visible in the steel shares, which had been put up on the merger prophecies, was logical enough. But today's decline in that group of shares was also helped along by the second withdrawal of an important company from the negotiations.

The chief impression produced on the stock market by this incident was sudden doubt as to whether even a "five company merger" would become a reality. People outside the stock exchange were mostly impressed by the contrast between the ideas of the speculators as to the value of such a merger and the coldness with which the proposal seems to be considered by the participants themselves.

Railway Shares Move Up.

While the independent steel shares sold down and other industrial stocks were divided between advances and declines, a general and positive forward movement occurred in railway shares. It was hardly necessary to ascribe that movement to the dinner of the railway men with the President. What Wall street had probably been considering was the fact that while traffic and earnings of the railways had been improving steadily and substantially, and while prices for industrial stocks had been advancing rapidly, railway shares were selling last week no higher than they sold a month ago.

There were numerous advances in today's bond market, and while comparisons with a week ago showed much irregularity of movement, net advances for the week were decidedly in the majority and many of them substantial. Except for another fall in the German mark foreign exchange was firm.

Imports of Gold Dwindle.

The department of commerce today gave out the statement of April's gold imports and exports by countries of origin or destination. The total of gold imported during April was the smallest of any month since February, 1920, decreased arrivals of Transvaal gold from England being the reason..

It appears that $1,854,000 gold was actually received from England, but that sum compares with average monthly gold receipts during 1921 of $16,800,000. From the Scandinavian countries $3,500,000 gold reached us in April; this, although much less than the $23,000,000 which arrived from the same ports in March, shows that remittances of the soviet's treasure are continuing. We sent $776,000 gold direct to India in April. Thus far in May $2,000,000 has been shipped from the country to the same destination.

New York Loans Expand.

The New York clearing house statement reflected revival of activity in the stock market, actual loans and discounts increasing by about $97,500,000 and expanding that account to the largest total of the year. Actual cash holdings decreased almost $31,400,000, leaving excess reserves at barely more than $5,500,000. Deposits showed an increase of about $71,000,000. GRAIN RECEIPTS HEAVY

Wheat receipts at Chicago last week were 2,154,000 bu, an increase of 192,000 bu over the previous week and 1,821,000 bu in excess of last year, and were the largest at this time in over five years, both at Chicago and at primary markets. The latter is also true of corn and oats.

Corn receipts at Chicago and primary markets decreased steadily for the week and ruled materially over last year. Aggregate receipts of all grains at primary markets for the week with comparisons, the last three years being omitted, follow:

ILLINOIS CORN FEEDING HEAVY.

Heavy feeding of corn in central Illinois was reported yesterday by Frank Cheatle, who was over that section for Hulburd, Warren & Chandler. He says plowing for corn is delayed, but is not serious as yet. Corn holdings are regarded as below normal.

WE own and offer with our recommendation First Mortgage Bonds at prices to yield to the purchaser an annual interest return of from seven to eight per cent upon the amount invested.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

P. S. Goodman, the Clement, Curtis & Co. crop expert, has returned from the Kansas Grain Dealers' convention at Wichita, Kas., and in summarizing his trip said:

"Winter wheat is late everywhere and southern Kansas is not materially advanced over Illinois. In western Kansas the grain is so late as to preclude any commercial harvest. Wheat has an inherent tendency to go to harvest in Kansas about June 20 and should it follow its tendency this year the grain will not amount to much in weight. The plant everywhere is so watery that a couple of days of hot weather will burn and shrivel it. If the blooming period is passed without high temperatures, the chances will be improved. Uncertainty will prevail until harvest. Good observers estimate the Texas crop at 8,000,000 bu, or 3,000,000 bu less than the government's May 1 returns. Oklahoma hopes are being reduced as the harvest season approaches and this is likely to extend over the belt."

"Central City to Hastings, condition of wheat is a little more uneven," wired Burton Hungerford to Logan & Bryan from Hastings, Neb. "Oats and barley at a standstill. Spring wheat reseeded on abandoned winter acreage is thin, short, and off color. Everything needs rain soon. Movement of grain lighter than in the east, but some coming in at nearly all stations."

Official French crop report as of April 1 made condition of winter wheat 68 against 72 last year and rye 68, against 73 in 1921. French minister of agriculture inclined to take pessimistic view of outcome. Price of w

HEAVY SELLING CAUSES SLUMP IN MAY WHEAT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Scattered liquidation cotninues in May wheat, and with pressure from local professionals prices declined readily to a new low for the week and closed with a net loss of 4¾c. Deferred deliveries were rmer early, but weakened later with wheat, and lost ½@¾c. Corn and oats showed stubborn resistance to pressure and acted soemwhat oversold, corn closing ¼c higher and oats ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher, while rye was off 1¼@1½c.

While September wheat sold at a new high for the season the last week and other deliveries close to the high, the bulge was lost later as the buying gave out and with scattered liquidation on the finish was well toward the bottom, with net losses of ¼@7¾c, with May leading. Corn and oats held within narrow limits and closed with corn ¼@5c higher and oats ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower. Rye declined 2¼@2¾c. Provisions were unsettled, with lard 2½@5c lower, while ribs were 7½c higher on May and 10c higher to 5c lower on the distant futures.

Pressure Brings Sharp Slump.

Wheat acted somewhat oversold early and it took but little commission house and local short covering to make a fractional advance, but the persistent selling of May in small lots by scattered longs and the pressure from a local professional caused a sharp drop in that delivery and at the inside it showed over 12c under the outside figures of earlier in the week, and the undertone at the last was rather heavy, although there was considerable week end evening up in the distant deliveries.

Local sentiment continues rather bearish, with a disposition to follow the May. Local interest in the latter is generally light, with the bulk of the trade in the July. Elevator interests sold some July and bought September at 5c difference early. Liverpool closed ¾@1d lower. Deliveries on May contracts remain liberal and further purchases were made to come here from Missouri river points. Crop reports were somewhat less favorable.

Slight Change in Corn and Oats.

Corn and oats both acted a little oversold and net price changes for the day were small. Receipts were not large and cash demand fair, with prices about unchanged as compared with the futures. Forecast was for unsettled weather over Sunday, whereas dry and warm is needed for the completion of corn planting.

Rye was due and easier, the action of the wheat being the main influence.

Scattered selling more than offset the effect of a strong hog market and provisions averaged lower. Reports on the cash meat trade remain very satisfactory. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date aggregates 1,338,000, against 1,326,000 last year. Lard closed 12½@15c and short ribs 2½@5c lower for the day. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A fair export business in old crop Manitobas and in new crop winters was put through at the seaboard, but the total did not materially exceed 250,000 bu. Sales of corn were 500,000 bu and rye 150,000 bu. Chicago handlers sold 10,000 bu corn to the seaboard.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 6,000 bu wheat, 85,000 bu corn, and 50,000 bu oats. Purchases of 300,000 bu wheat were made to come here from Missouri river points, some coming from mills. Charters were for 100,000 bu corn from Milwaukee to Georgian bay. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 430,000 bu wheat, 167,000 bu corn, 10,000 bu oats, and 6,000 bu rye.

Consignments of wheat to Chicago from the country are increasing. All of the leading railroads have ordered out inspection crews for work Sunday and liberal arrivals are looked for Monday. No. 2 hard and red winter on track sells mainly at May price and No. 3 grades at ¾@1¼c under. Receipts 193 cars.

Outside cash wheat markets were easy. Omaha, 4@5c, and St. Louis, 1@2c lower, with a heavy undertone. Minneapolis was generally unchanged.

Cash corn prices and the basis were practically unchanged. No. 2 mixed, 2c, and yellow and white, 1¾c under the July. Receipts, 113 cars. Outside markets were ½c lower to ½c higher.

Demand for cash oats remains good, with sample values unchanged. No. 2 white brought 1@4c over July, and No. 3 white July to 1½c over. Receipts, 101 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

May wheat was under pressure from all interests. Scattered holders are getting out and a few local traders are pressing the market at every opportunity, while the buying was scattered and whenever the pressure was removed prices rallied. May at the low point was $1.35¼, which was practically the close. Prices showed a loss of 12¼c from the high point on Wednesday, yet were ¼c above the low figure of the previous week. July wheat has dropped nearly 6c and September almost 4c from the high point of the week, with the close flat and the trade in general bearish and looking for lower prices. It is said that the short interest has been increased and new influences and buying are necessary to counteract the effect of big receipts and prospects of a heavier run the balance of this month.

It was the impression of the trade that the big holdings of May wheat while possibly reduced are large enough to make an uncomfortable situation for the shorts later in the month, although indications are that the longs will have to take a large quantity of wheat on delivery the balance of this month. In the last three weeks 6,286,000 bu of wheat have been delivered, which includes some duplication. At the same time deliveries of corn were 5,558,000 bu, oats 5,904,000 bu and rye 1,703,000 bu.

July wheat has come out in large volume from houses connected with the largest holdings of May. Some people in the trade are inclined to believe that it represents selling by May longs who were hedging. The feature in the trade yesterday was the buying of May here and selling in Winnipeg by the same interests who have been at it for several days, also the buying of September and selling of July by two of the big cash houses.

The country has apparently suddenly become impressed with a desire to sell its wheat and it is coming out from all quarters, especially from Kansas and Nebraska farmers who were not supposed to have a great deal. Omaha houses have bought 300,000 bu from the interior the last few days and Chicago houses bought 300,000 bu in all positions in the west and central west today. There were 2,158 cars of all grain on track here Friday morning, of which 1,315 cars were at the elevators.

Oklahoma messages yesterday were bearish on the new crop outlook, estimating it at 35,000,000 bu. An Enid message said the elevators there had received more wheat during the week than all last month, farmers marketing their old wheat and cleaning out their bins. One report said that they could buy 100 cars at $1.15. Crop prospects were reported as good.

Wheat on ocean passage for Europe, as estimated by Russell, decreased 4,400,000 bu for the week, making the supply 46,160,000 bu. Indications are for larger world's shipments for the week. Corn on passage decreased 2,200,000 bu and oats 100,000 bu. Corn supplies are 14,350,000 bu and oats 2,400,000 bu.

Kansas City wheat stocks decreased 1,157,000 bu for the week and are 2,997,000 bu. Receipts there yesterday were 328 cars and Kansas City people predict that a good run for the coming week. New York reported acceptances of No. 2 red wheat yesterday and that the continent is a good buyer of corn.

THE GLYNDALE APARTMENT BUILDING
6035 to 6045 Winthrop Avenue—secures a new issue of our proven location First Mortgage 7% Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds.

There are undesirable locations in Chicago where people have been practically compelled to live on account of the shortage of housing. Buildings in these sections may seem good enough security for loans while apartments are scarce and rents high. But when the demand for buildings lessens, as it will—what then?

That's when you and other farsighted investors will be glad you invested in H. O. STONE & CO. proven location bonds—bonds like these of the Glyndale Apartments on buildings in districts not where people are forced to live but where they WANT to live.

North Edgewater—One of the Proven Locations

Some sections of Chicago are so delightful—the natural surroundings so beautiful—the neighborhoods so handsomely built up—the advantages of transportation, stores, theatres, etc., so complete—that at all times, regardless of conditions, people pay a premium to live in them. General demand for apartments has comparatively little to do with the demand for homes in these proven locations. YOU want to live in one of these locations—everybody does. That is why H. O. STONE & CO. selects buildings in these districts as the best possible security for the bonds we offer you.

THE GLYNDALE is a 42-apartment building in one of the finest proven locations—North Edgewater—less than two blocks from the Lake. A steady income will be produced by this building—over three times the greatest annual interest. This means sure and prompt payment, without fail, of your 7% bond interest and principal when due—just as these have always been paid on every bond ever sold by H. O. STONE & CO.

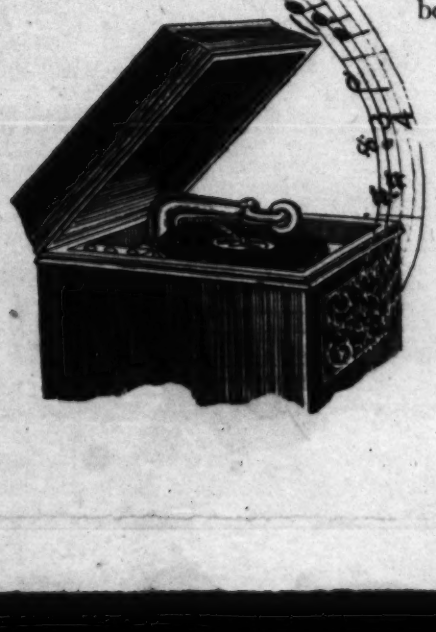
Ten Minutes' Fun a Day Gives You Health, Strength and Vitality—Free Record Proves It.

A GREAT and new idea—and more fun than a game! You cannot appreciate the fascination, the glow of health, the amount of "pep" you acquire from exercising to music until you have tried it!

Ten minutes a day of genuine fun will keep you fit. Walter Camp has made it possible. The famous "Daily Dozen" Exercises of this great Yale coach—exercises that reach and strengthen every muscle in your body—have been set to music on phonograph records, with Mr. Camp's special permission.

You put a record on the machine and the lively, spirited music carries you through ten minutes of the most exhilarating fun. You are swept along with a buoyancy that will amaze you. And the result of this ten minutes' fun a day is a glowing health, a glorious vitality, a springy step, a bright eye—and, in short, a whole, healthy, breathing and zestful man or woman tingling with the very glow of life.

But the famous "Daily Dozen" do not stop their wonderful work there. Far from it. If you are overweight they will reduce your waistline. If you are underweight they will put firm, sound flesh on you. They revitalize your body. They revive weak, flabby muscles and rebuild them into live, vital tissue. Thousands of men and women and boys and girls are regaining health, strength and vitality through use of the "Daily Dozen" Exercises.



The "Daily Dozen" Build Muscle

Increase your wind, develop your chest, strengthen your powers of endurance and your energy to work. Put on muscular shoulders, acquire strong stomach muscles, get a wonderful and superb physique—and enjoy yourself every minute you are doing it.

The "Daily Dozen" are set to music on large double-disc records, playable on any disc machine. In addition there are charts with 60 actual photographs illustrating every movement with clear and simple directions. On the record itself a clear voice gives you the commands, telling you exactly what to do. All you do is put a record on the machine. Inside of ten minutes you will feel a glow that is priceless in its benefits to your health. You can say good-by to constipation, headaches, backaches, insomnia, run-down condition, nervousness, emaciation, want of appetite and that tired, exhausted feeling.

Record Free

So that you may see for yourself the wonderful benefits to your health that the famous "Daily Dozen" will give you, we will send you, absolutely free, a sample record containing two of the "Daily Dozen" Exercises and a chart illustrating the movements. Put it on your phonograph and follow the simple directions of the clear voice on the record. That great sensation of glowing health you feel when you have gone through these new exhilarating and interesting exercises will amaze you.

There is no obligation. The record is yours to keep. Just enclose a quarter (or 25 cents in stamps) with the coupon, to cover charge of postage, wrapping, etc., to Health Builders, Dept. 875, Oyster Bay, N. Y.

Now you can give a professional "finish" to the dresses you make

They can be as perfect in every detail as an expensive imported frock—

IT IS the perfection of those last little touches that makes a dress a joy—or just a dress.

The French call it the "bloom" of a dress—that air of assurance with which the neckline is finished—the feeling that just that particular bit of trimming is right and anything else there would have been wrong.

That is what you can give to everything you make now! A finish that is truly French! The Deltor that now comes with every new Butterick pattern shows you exactly how to finish your dress perfectly.

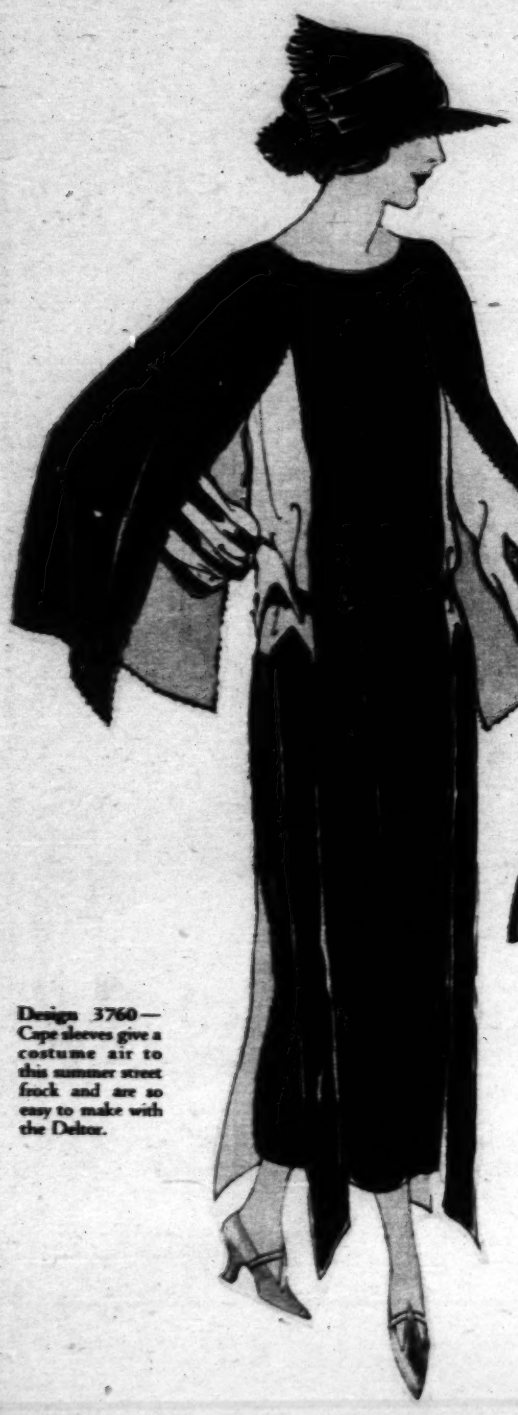
Every Butterick pattern is actually made up and fitted on a living model, before the pattern is put on sale. As the expert cuts, puts together and finishes the dress, everything he does is carefully noted down. This exact record of just how an expert made up the dress is the Deltor.

It is really a complete illustrated dressmaking course for that particular garment.

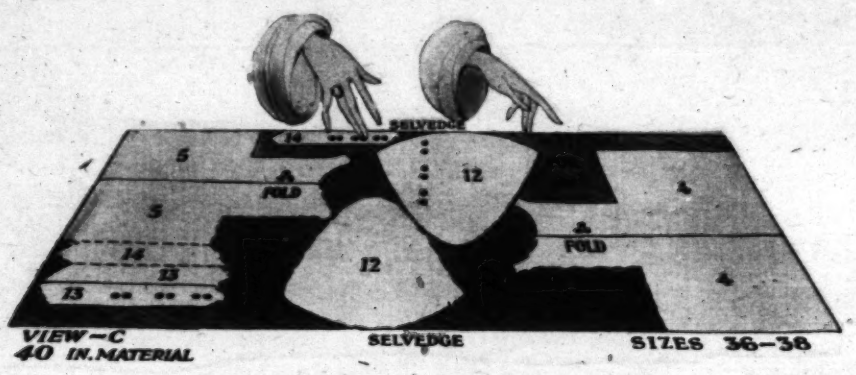
With it you can not only give your dress the perfection or finish that has so long spelled Paris, but you cut with the economy of an expert, and know exactly how to put your dress together with the swift ease of a professional.

With the Deltor you can make dresses you never dared attempt before. It is the greatest dressmaking help since the paper pattern itself. Get your Butterick pattern with the Deltor enclosed, at the pattern counter today.

Butterick—New York, Paris, London.



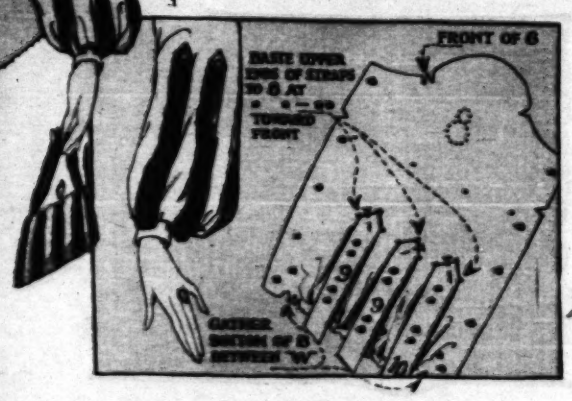
Design 3760—Cape sleeves give a costume air to this summer street frock and are so easy to make with the Deltor.



You save from ¼ to 1⅜ yards on every dress you make

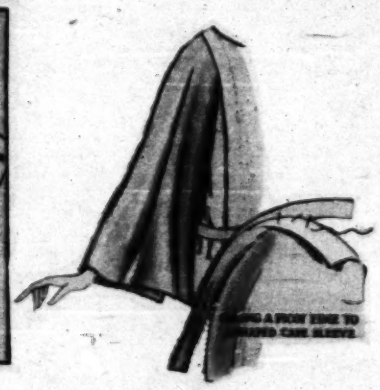
Women who have sewed all their lives say they are simply amazed at the time and money the Deltor cutting layouts save them.

These layouts are made by men who specialize in cutting. Not one person in a thousand, however talented, has their skill. Each Deltor gives a cutting layout for each view of the model in every size, laid on every suitable width of material. You just select the one for your size and width. You have a layout that exactly fits your case—it saves you time and money.



Your dress goes together so easily

There before you in pictures and words is the way an expert dressmaker put your dress together. Gone is all the old time uncertainty, worry, ripping. You just follow along stitch by stitch with the same professional ease the expert had, and your dress is all put together so quickly! And you have given it the very lines of the original model, like an expert.



The very newest "finish" is easy for you

You know just exactly how to carry out the method of finishing your dress and material call for—it is all here in the Deltor for you. You finish a bateau neck so there is not a pucker, make exquisitely those new flower effects. Quickly, surely, with the Deltor you finish your dress like a professional.

Delightful things you can do easily with the Deltor

Design 3750—Hand hemstitching is charming for summer dresses and easy even for the novice with the Deltor.

Design 3726—Fabric flowers are the last note of style this season. The Deltor shows you exactly how to make this girdle.

Design 3722—The fashionable fabric trimming is simple to make with the Deltor.

Design 3762—Shirring is a charming finish for a neckline. The Deltor shows you exactly how to do it.

Design 3758—A finish like this gives a professional note to a dress, and the Deltor tells you just how to do it.

Blankets still as soft and fleecy as the day you first tucked them in

YOU had had one pair ruined. Cake soap—rubbing—and your handsome blankets returned to you matted and shrunken—their softness and fleeciness gone.

They could not stand the old stern methods. Wool is more sensitive than any other fabric, and requires more careful laundering. Even the suds from a harsh soap or harsh soap flake will make its delicate scale-like fibres tangle and shrink.

With Lux you need not hesitate to wash your soft, fleecy blankets at the first sign of dinginess.

The creamy, satiny Lux flakes whisk into a thick lather. There is no rubbing to shrink and mat the tiny fibres—not one bit of solid soap to stick to the soft wool and yellow it. Your blankets come from their Lux bath as big and soft as when you put them in.

The Complexion that Charms

IT is not the cheek that glows with the red of the rose, nor the skin that has the wax-like pallor of the lily. The two must be mingled in a hue that is delicate, modest, natural. And therein lies the serene assurance of Bourjois' [Pronounced Bourge-wah] Java* Face Powder. Designed to please the critical eyes of the women of France, Java is, before all else, natural. Women whose complexions are universally admired, whose faces never show a trace of powder, these are the women who use Java.

Ashes of Roses* Rouge

A charming woman told us recently, that not until she used Ashes of Roses Rouge with Java Face Powder, did she fully understand how much natural beauty she had. Perhaps there is a suggestion in that for you. Both these products are included in the twelve leading preparations found in the Bourjois Cabinet Assortment at progressive dealers. For the woman who prefers a lighter shade of rouge, we suggest Rouge Mandarine.*

Men, women, boys and girls and little children, every one is putting on Keds —America's summer footwear.

Growing number of Clotilde pattern purchasers shows increased pulling power of the Tribune

INCREASED response from Tribune readers, with the increased circulation of The Tribune, is indicated in the swiftly growing number of women buying Clotilde Patterns. Every month approximately 15,000 women buy these patterns through The Tribune. There were 38 per cent more purchasers in February and March of last year than in the corresponding months of 1920. In March, 1922, there were 29 per cent more purchasers than in March, 1921. Altogether, 127,304 women bought Clotilde Patterns through The Tribune last year.

Write for folder showing sources of 15,000 orders for Clotilde Patterns.

Orders from 15,000 purchasers were recently analyzed to determine their sources. Ninety-five per cent of these women lived in the five states of the Chicago Territory—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin—indicating a definite concentration of power. The rest of the orders were scattered in 36 other states, the District of Columbia and Canada, suggesting something of the national character of The Chicago Tribune.

Those were the days when the floodtide of settlers was still sweeping into the west. Ragged unsightly cuticle

You need never again have it

HANDS that are in themselves really beautiful are often ruined by an unsightly ragged cuticle. Yet everyone can have shapely nails and smooth, even cuticle. For manicuring is no longer the dangerous and difficult undertaking it used to be.

No more harmful cutting of the cuticle! For no matter how careful you are, you simply cannot cut the hard dry edges about the base of the nail without piercing through to the living skin. This dangerous method of caring for your nails soon gives you the ragged, ugly cuticle that you especially want to avoid.

But of course the surplus cuticle has to be removed, and this can be done easily, quickly and harmlessly with Cutex Cuticle Remover. With an orange stick dipped in the liquid you work gently about the base of the nails. Then rinse and when drying push the cuticle gently downwards. Your nails rims will remain smooth and even.

The finishing touch of distinction—a brilliant polish

Your manicure will not be complete until you have used one of the brilliant polishes to add the finishing touch to your nails. Cutex has just produced two new marvelous ones in the most popular forms, powder and liquid.

The Powder Polish is practically instantaneous. A dazzling luster that lasts better than any you have ever had before. The Liquid Polish is uniformly smooth, dries instantly and leaves a brilliant luster that will last a week or more.

Cutex Manicure Sets come in four sizes, 60c, $1.00, $1.50 and $3.00. Or each of the Cutex items comes separately at 35c. At all drug and department stores in the United States and Canada.

Introductory Set—now only 12c

Could you write a story like this?

COULD you recognize the vital dramatic situation in this scene—and write a scenario about it?

It is a scene from the Rex Ingram Production (Metro Pictures Corporation), "The Conquering Power." Situations like this are taking place around you every day. Right in your own street, in the house next door, in your home, there is a great drama being lived.

Why can't you build a plot around it? The successful screen writers are men and women who see the dramatic value of every day occurrences. A few years ago these men and women were receiving ordinary salaries for doing humble tasks. Now their incomes are thousands of dollars yearly.

$1,500 Paid for a Scenario

That is the average price. Just for the synopsis of a dramatic plot.

You do not need writing ability. It is not hard to write a photoplay synopsis when you understand the principles of dramatic construction and photoplay technique.

You cannot tell at this time whether you possess the ability to write photoplays. No test or analysis could tell you, for your sense of dramatic perception is undeveloped and your conception of plot construction is unformed.

But it is worth finding out, certainly. For if you want to write stories—if in your day dreams, you make up tales about yourself—you are creating. And remember, it does not take fine writing, just the instinct to create and a knowledge of photoplay construction.

Producers Want Your Stories

They must have stories. Plots are the only thing the motion picture industry lacks. All the leaders in the profession are demanding plots, looking everywhere for them.

Your opportunities as a screen writer in the opinion of the film authorities are fully explained in 32 page illustrated book. The Fox Plan of Photoplay Writing is outlined. The book is yours FREE if you are interested in writing for the screen. Send the coupon today.

Aprons so clean you are proud of them

SMUDGES from the stove, grease from pots and pans, splashes from scrubbing brush and pail.

The dirt on your aprons is fairly ground in. Yet even this is easily and safely dissolved by Rinso.

Let your aprons soak in its big lasting luke-warm suds while you are doing other things. Then lift them out and look them over. You will be astonished to find that they have actually soaked themselves clean—you will have to rub only the most soiled places—lightly—with a little dry Rinso.

Rinso is so pure and perfectly balanced that it does what soap has never done before. It soaks clothes clean without hard rubbing.

Rinso is made by the largest soap makers in the world. It comes in two sizes—the regular size and the big new package. Get it today—at grocery and department stores everywhere. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

NOTE—In hard water it takes from ¼ to 1 package of Rinso to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1½ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

cathartics—

one of the chief causes of constipation?

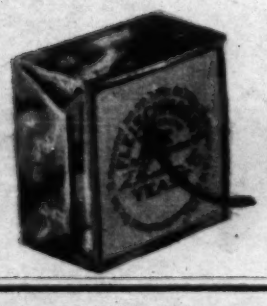
The quotation is taken from an important paper on the treatment of constipation by a well-known physician.

DID it ever occur to you that the cathartic you take to relieve constipation, is the cause of your trouble?

Yet when a number of doctors were discussing this almost universal complaint one of them said: "Probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation is the indiscriminate use of cathartics." For years physicians have tried to persuade people to give up laxatives and to eat corrective foods instead.

It is now known that Fleischmann's Yeast is a food which makes the use of cathartics unnecessary. Because of its freshness it helps the intestines eliminate waste matter.

People who are adding Fleischmann's Yeast to their daily diet find that their body functions are kept normal and regular. Eat 2 or 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast before or between meals every day. Place a standing order with your grocer. He will deliver Fleischmann's Yeast fresh daily.



Here You're at Your Best

no matter what you wish to do.

By A Traveler

A "Southern California Summer" is an experience that you, perhaps, have yet to enjoy. Ninety nights in June, July and August under blankets, is the rule.

A friend once amazed me with that statement. I had never been to California. But I travel widely, and once went there—to see for myself.

I've spent seven summers there since then.

In no other land are there so many different diversions and strange sights. And nowhere else, it seems, do you feel as you do here.

You're at your best in golf and every other sport. It's in the air. And there's interesting change wherever you may turn.

Lunch on a great desert like Sahara. Dinner that evening in a famous restaurant in one of the wor'd's large cities. The same evening, a visit to the seashore.

You fish in mountain lakes or streams, rest at mountain camps, ride horseback over wild trails, bathe at a seashore resort at the foot of a mountain range.

Four thousand miles of paved highways to take you to these places, all of which are within a hundred-mile drive.

Add these attractions to an ideal summer climate—warm days and nights that are really cool and you have not an imaginary summer wonderland, as this may seem, but one in fact.

Average mean temperature for Southern California: June, 66 degrees; July, 70 degrees; August, 71 degrees; September, 69 degrees.—The 44-year record of the U. S. Weather Bureau.

Summer? An amazing summerland—you'll never spend a more delightful, restful, interesting summer anywhere. Best of all, you'll have this complete change! And in that feature is the real value of vacations.

Ask any railroad ticket office for further information, or mail coupon below.

Beauty Is Its Own Reward

Beauty is a precious thing because it is so fragile. It stays where it is well-treated; neglect it and it steals away.

If you would remain young and beautiful you must obey the simple laws of health and guard your teeth against the coming of Pyorrhea.

Four people out of every five who pass the age of forty and thousands younger suffer the penalties of this disease. These are official statistics.

When you brush your teeth at night and in the morning—watch your gums for Pyorrhea's warning.

If the gums are tender, if they bleed when brushed, see your dentist at once, heed his advice, and start using Forhan's For the Gums that very day.

Whatever you do, heed Pyorrhea's warning. If you ignore it, you may pay by the loss of health and beauty.

Pyorrhea's work is thorough. It attacks the gums and loosens the teeth until they drop out or must be pulled. It spreads disease germs throughout the system, undermining the health and often resulting in serious illness.

Forhan's For the Gums is a formula prepared by R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., for the treatment and prevention of Pyorrhea.

Used consistently and used in time it will prevent Pyorrhea or check it in its course.

Don't wait for Pyorrhea's coming. Use Forhan's regularly as a dentifrice. It will keep your teeth white and clean and your gums firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's — How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

THE FEW DAYS OF LITTLE FIJI

by Henry B. Fuller

Being An Animated Essay on the Importance of Finding the Right Jungle in Which to Pass One's Days.

WHEN Fiji first came to live at the Studios, the instant question was, "How long can he be kept?" The dozen or more commensals gathered at lunch, just off the patio and its pool, followed this inquiry with others: How soon would those little striped paws, now rather slow and clumsy, lift themselves in rage; how soon would that ringed tail, now so docile and passive, begin its lashings; how soon would those sharp teeth, taking their first snapping bite, bring blood, and with blood the first full disclosure of a dangerous nature? "O, well, he will be safe enough for a month or two," was the facile decision the table reached.

Meanwhile, not much definite thought had been given to the little creature's actual breed. The fraternity boys in the house at the corner of the Parkway had conveyed the impression that he was a jaguar. The artists, who knew little beyond lions and eagles, accepted this dictum, if such it really were. Then followed further questions: "How big does a jaguar grow?" "What will he eat, and how much?" "Are they as dangerous as leopards, for example?"

But Mr. Tee, chief of all the Studios and head of their common table, hesitated over the notion of a jaguar. College boys, as he knew, were thoughtless and reckless enough; but, even at that, would one of them introduce into a fraternity house an animal that was really a beast of prey and out of place anywhere save in its native forest or in a zoo? Moved by such considerations, another luncher suggested a panther—if such an animal were found in Nicaragua. A third thought a puma more likely. A fourth vaguely suggested a cougar. Miss Waugh, who had assumed responsibility for the creature, whatever its breed and name, made no observations. She had the animal itself, she was beginning to like it, and she was already determined to keep it as long as she could.

She had first seen the little alien through her side door, in looking past her bed of verbenas and petunias toward a scrub oak under which a group of the Phi Gammas were gathered. They were playing rather roughly and uncomprehendingly with what, save for its wonderful coat of variegated browns, seemed a compact and clumsy cat, and if they understood him little he seemed to understand them even less. His eyes, of a light, translucent blue, widely set, and sensationally large for the small face, seemed to be asking: "Who are you? Why am I among you? What are you going to do with me?"

This last was Miss Waugh's own question as she hastened over the grass. "Why, boys," she said textually as she reached the scrub oak, "whatever in the world are you going to do with it?" The boys, a nice enough lot of young fellows, except when they were playing ball too close to Miss Waugh's flower beds, frankly said they didn't know. They supposed they'd keep it for a month or so, and after that—— But there seemed to be no "after that" assured. "Why," thought Miss Waugh, "they won't know what to do with it then. They don't even know what to do with it now!"

Then Miss Waugh put some further questions. She knew the boys well enough by sight, if not by name. They sometimes came in, if very new, to look at armatures and molds and Houdon's "Ecorche" and the cast of the Giustiniani "Minerva." Their handball in the spring and their football in the early autumn were always imperiling her flowers, together with the elegiac figure (study for a monument in the cemetery at Menominee) which stood among them, and her friendly expostulations and their facile, soon forgotten promises made together a certain slight bond between them. So it was easy for her to ask further: "Where did it come from?" and "How do you happen to have it?"

Well, it appeared that one of their own number, moving independently of term-time and indifferent to any degree, had followed up a business opening which led to Central America. He had returned on a fruit freighter to pack up his belongings, bid friends and alma mater good-by, and spend a few seasons among the banana plantations of Nacaragua. Incidenally, as a farewell offering to his fellow students, he had brought with him this little creature from the wilds, less than a fortnight old when picked up from the side of its murdered mother. "I don't know what George meant by lugging it along," said one of the Phi Gammas, meditatively frank; but Miss Waugh remembered the baby alligators brought up from Florida and the fuzzy yellow little flocks turned loose from Easter incubators, and asked no further explanation. "Folks are like that," she thought, regretfully.

The boys, she saw, knew not at all what to do with their gift. A jaguar—if jaguar it should turn out to be—was not quite a raccoon or an opossum; no, nor even a purified skunk; she had heard of all these as pets or mascots of Greek letter societies. The forlorn little creature turned its big blue eyes her way, and Miss Waugh at once made her offer. The boys knew that she had a leaning toward the dumb creation; she sometimes kept a friend's canary during the outing season; she often fed lumps of sugar to the laundryman's horse; she gave asylum to stray cats, and once in a while she had a lost and injured dog boarding at the "animal man's" on the trolley line half a mile away. "You can see him any time you want to, of course," she promised. "I'll be ready to take him tomorrow." And with the morrow Little Fiji was introduced to his new jungle.

He found it spacious and varied. Downstairs, plenty of dark cubby holes and storerooms; upstairs, on a balcony, Miss Waugh's bedroom, bath, and kitchenette. A jungle, yes; but it was a jungle with a north light and a cold concrete floor, and it was the scene of many processes damp, clammy, and sloppy. Still, there was sometimes warmth from a big, bright cavern at one side, and there were plenty of dusky and inaccessible nooks to which a shy and baby alien might retire. And in the center of things, in the very middle of the cold, wet floor was the growing statue of Senator Simmons of Michigan intended for the public park at Cadillac. And the senator was almost as full of nooks and crannies as the studio itself.

"Is he a jaguar?" was still the question. "I doubt it," said Mr. Fulmer; "what do those boys know?" Mr. Fulmer was a leisured amateur who sometimes joined his artist friends at lunch. He possessed, as a relic from a genteel past, a "Prince Albert"—a garment now impossible to wear at a reception, or even at a funeral, but just the thing when "sitting" for an old time "statesman." Mr. Fulmer, as he sat, promised that he would take the "L" into town some day before long and read up the whole cat tribe at one of the libraries. "It's a cat of some kind," everybody agreed. As Mr. Fulmer sat, Fiji prowled dubiously among the settees and model thrones and pedestals. He was of a glorioous spotted brown — or browns; cinnamon brown, snuff brown, orange brown — and he was not only spotted but striped as well. That is to say, his very spots were arranged in stripes; he was like a baby tiger combined with a baby leopard but more richly beautiful than either. "Pink nose," observed Mr. Fulmer; "immense translucent blue eyes; above all, those two pearl colored spots on the back of the tip of each ear. If one can't go by earmarks, what can one go by?"

Day after next Mr. Fulmer slipped into his Prince Albert, mounted the model throne, and proclaimed: "Your 'jaguar' is an ocelot. I have seen the pictures in the books and have read the text. He won't grow too big, and he won't grow too wild. 'The ocelot,'" he quoted, "'can be tamed and almost domesticated, if taken young. It is occasionally kept as a pet by the Forest Indians,'" and so forth and so on. Miss Waugh clasped her clay bemired hands, set her mouth, and nodded her head. "That settles it," he almost heard her say.

Mr. Fulmer now began to refer to the new pet as "Ossy," and he was followed by one or two of the artists who knew little about the Greek alphabet and less about the transformations which the Greek language experiences in current undergraduate usage. But Miss Waugh said: "No; the Phi G.'s gave him to me, and 'Fiji' he shall remain." And "Fiji" he did remain—save when shortened to "Feej." "How soon will he grow up to his forepaws and his eyes?" she began to speculate. She speculated comfortably—sure, now, that he would never grow too big nor become too violent.

"Domesticate" was the word that had been brought from the reference library. Miss Waugh saw a widening of her career. She would devote herself to domesticating Fiji, and in the intervals she would continue work on Senator Simmons. Fiji met Miss Waugh half way (all animals did) and soon he was happily at home in her quarters and fairly habituated to her régime. There was but one drawback: Old Nick, the black studio cat, sometimes known as Satan. However, Nick's satanic days were about over: he was ending his years with the hope of as little stir and change as possible, and no rivalry at all. He had banished a half-grown black kitten of his own breed, a friendly, confident, forth-putting thing whose youthful love of company had earned him the equivocal name of "Tagalong," and he looked upon the newcomer with cold and dignified resentment. Wholly at a loss in making the interloper out, he, too, retired to the jungle—or to some neighboring jungle—and was sometimes lost to sight for days.

"Why, Nick," expostulated Miss Waugh, on one of his returns, "will you break your poor Dora's heart? And what have you been living on, I should like to know!"

But Fiji, grandly unconscious of being an interloper, or so completely conscious of it that a heightened degree made no great difference, went on, in his puzzled little way, to come to good terms with the only friend in sight. Sometimes he tried to play with Mr. Zip, the black and white puppy, round the pool in the courtyard; but it was a forced play—at arm's length, so to speak—and Fiji was usually glad to return to Miss Waugh and Senator Simmons.

The senator was progressing finely. Life size and half as much again, he sat high in a shallow niche. He had long passed the stage when he was but a framework of yellow varnished slats, and was now pretty well shaped in clay. Then would come the plaster cast, then the trip to the foundry, then the last trip of all to the park in Michigan. He lived mostly behind an oilcloth curtain, with his head wrapped in wet rags, while Miss Waugh considered the folds of his trousers or agonized over the toes of his stubby, old fashioned boots. As she went up and down her short stepladder lonely Fiji would descend from the balcony and establish himself on the senator's shoulders, behind his damp, massive head; here there was at once company and seclusion. Miss Waugh was his only real friend and comforter. Though he became accustomed to Mr. Tee, who sometimes came into the place in blouse and slippers, no one else was welcome, or even tolerated. Baby spits and growls told you not to come too near.

It was now mid-August. "Why," Miss Waugh asked herself, "shouldn't the little thing have a real jungle all his own?" She bought a roll of woven wire, assembled a few sticks and posts, and built him a roomy cage among the nasturtiums and four o'clocks that edged her north wall. North as ever; everything about the studio was north—even to her own bedroom windows. "But it will be nice for the summer," she said; "besides, the boys can see how he is getting on." The boys had already called once or twice in small delegations; rather respectful and constrained, however noisy and rampageous in their games outside. They learned about Fiji's diet and poked into some of his favorite haunts, and saw how he was growing—though not very fast; and they acknowledged that Miss Waugh was doing much better for him than they could ever have hoped to do.

Though Fiji was of a rather solemn and retiring nature during the day, yet about dawn, after a night on the foot of Miss Waugh's bed, his essential babyhood asserted itself and he often insisted on a spell of play. This involved small pounces, growls, scratches, and bites, and Miss Waugh sometimes came down to her waiting senator with torn and bleeding hands; but it was all done in the spirit of affection, and Miss Waugh, as she slapped and scooped and prodded at her passive statesman, often asked herself, "Why are animals so warm-hearted and people so cold?" She would not have had a single laceration. "The little thing really loves me," she declared with satisfaction and pride.

Yes, Fiji was constantly growing more tractable and affectionate, but he was not growing much bigger. He got about a bit awkwardly on forepaws, which seemed bulkier than they ought to have been (even allowing for the disproportion that accompanies youth), and which were none too straight. Miss Waugh noted this and so did Miss Kerr, who was summering in the studio with her.

"Are you sure," asked Miss Kerr, "that you are giving him the right food? And do you feel that this place is—is quite bright and warm enough?"

Miss Waugh, having lived in "this place" for several years, assumed that it was bright and warm enough—had she not her skylight and, at need, her fireplace?—but she was willing to listen in the matter of food.

"The book said, you know," Miss Kerr

A BREATH OF MILITARY AIR

The Terrible Mr. Woolland Employed His Vacation to Dictate Abuse of His Colleagues into a Phonograph.

"I don't care. Send him off."

The house he had hired lay at the back of Pherson laughed and excused him, putting a man with a harder skin on to the job.

"I think," McPherson presently wrote to the chief, "it would be better to let us have your messages differently. What you've got to say to the board had better be said to them direct, per phonograph, and not taken down by one of the men. And if you'll have each department's cylinders packed separately that will facilitate matters. I must say your change seems to be doing you good. There's a lot of power in your work."

Mr. Woolland smiled grimly when he read this and, calling Kitch to heel, strode off towards the esplanade for his daily constitutional. He had just reached the front when he almost ran into Baker.

"O," he said, glaring at his dismissed clerk, "it's you, is it?"

"Yes," said Baker, now the free and independent, "it's me."

"And what are you doing here?"

"I suppose," said Baker, "I may have an aunt at St. Anselm's? As you have been good enough to give me a holiday of unlimited length, I thought I would pay her a visit."

"O!" snorted Mr. Woolland, not believing him. "I thought you might have—here, call off that mangy puppy of yours or my dog'll kill him!"

Baker's mangy puppy was a plucky, wire haired terrier of unimpeachable breed, a gentleman, indeed, compared to Kitch. The warning was too late. A growl as of distant thunder, a snap, and they were rolling over on the asphalt. What might have been a serious conflict was only ended by a man hosing down the esplanade, who turned his pipe on the struggling canines and effectually separated them.

"Never let me see you or your mongrel again!" shouted Mr. Woolland, shaking his stick at Baker as the latter walked away, dragging the wire haired with him.

One thing, however, had happened. Kitch and the wire haired had now as little reason to love each other as their masters.

An Interruption

AFTER tea that day Baker, leaving his dog at home, took his book into the public park and lay down near the hedge. He lit his pipe—the regulations didn't forbid smoking—and was soon engrossed in his novel.

After a time a persistent sound began to come between himself and his hero. At first he had taken it to be the note of a bumblebee, which is known to be exceedingly talkative over its meals. After a time, however, the humming took the shape of a human voice, and that voice—to Baker's surprise—Mr. Woolland's.

Baker peered through the hedge and descried, half hidden by a mass of foliage, the form of a summer house. He rose and walked down the hedge. Yes, the voice came from the summer house. Mr. Woolland was evidently indulging in a soliloquy, for he seemed to be talking without intermission, no other voice intervening. Baker would have probably moved away had not his own name fallen on his ear at that moment. He listened.

Baker listened for no more. The blood surging hotly to his face, he walked away. But on second thoughts he stopped and peered through the hedge again. Was the old beast dictating to an amanuensis? The [illegible] eyes distinguished a glint of brass. By Jove! he was talking into a phonograph. Baker walked on.

Mr. Woolland, like all such men when they have been persuaded to tear themselves out of their groove, soon had reason to acknowledge the wisdom of McPherson's advice. The change was doing him a world of good. His eye was growing clear; a healthy tan was appearing on his face; he was becoming a new man.

The phonograph method was working admirably. Advices from McPherson told him that all his instructions had been rigidly carried out.

Capital! Surprising he had never thought of this before. Better health caused him to grow optimistic. He felt confident his amalgamation scheme would be accepted by the board. He was already rich. This amalgamation would make him a millionaire and take a load of trouble off his shoulders.

On the day before the board was to meet to decide this weighty point Mr. Woolland walked down to his summer house in a complacent mood. He would entrust to the phonograph a few last words on the subject addressed to the board in general and to his own men on that body in particular. A few nice, well chosen words. As well for him not to be there in person.

It was as fair a day as an English summer can show. Mr. Woolland, his heart light at the thought of achieving the greatest project of his life, sat down, and, after a little quiet thought, commenced his opening speech to the directorate.

He had uttered, perhaps, half a score well rounded sentences, all most conciliatory in tone, when Kitch raised his head and gave a growl. This was followed by a bark, and then, his whole body pulsing with rage, Kitch glared once in the direction of the hedge and charged headlong at a gap in the same that Mr. Woolland had not noticed before. It was a small gap for a man, but a large one for a dog. Kitch shot through it with ease.

Bellowing reprimands, Mr. Woolland lumbered out of the summer house and hastened to the hedge. He could only discern objects on the opposite side with difficulty, so he sprawled down and peered through the gap. At that instant there arose a terrific yowling of dogs at war. Kitch was fighting. With many snorts Mr. Woolland endeavored to worm his huge bulk through the gap, but without avail. He only tore his hands and face. At length, with deep fulminations, he arose and hastened up his garden. He could only enter the public park by the gate proper, and that was half a mile distant.

A minute elapsed, and then a head appeared in the gap; then a pair of shoulders; then, after a short struggle, the figure of a man emerged on all fours into the garden.

The man was Baker, erstwhile employe of the Oilmen's Supply Combine, to whom the entire personnel of the board was an old familiar friend.

After a quick glance round he entered the summer house and, seating himself at the rustic table, began to talk into the phonograph, taking up the parable, as it were, at the point where the managing director had dropped it.

A great deal can be said in ten minutes. At the end of that period Baker stole out of the summer house and insinuated himself back through the gap. A few seconds later Mr. Woolland entered the gate proper of the park at a sort of rhinoceros gallop and headed for the parkkeeper, who was chasing a bull terrier that had come into the park unattended, and with no sign of strap or chain on its collar, and engaged in mortal combat a most respectable wire haired brother that had complied fully with the regulations concerning his kind.

Some Final Remarks

AT the solid round mahogany table in the board room of the Oilmen's Supply Combine sat, on the following afternoon at 3 p. m., Mr. Woolland's six fellow directors. Mr. McPherson had also attended in his official capacity as secretary to the board.

In the middle of the table stood a phonograph. Mr. McPherson opened a leather case and took therefrom a number of cylinders.

"Mr. Woolland advises me, gentlemen," he said, "that he has a few final remarks to address to you before you proceed to your final discussion on the amalgamation question."

A cylinder was placed in position, the phonograph set working, and as Mr. McPherson sat down the deep, harsh tones of the managing director fell upon the ears of six men who hated him with a heartiness that has seldom been equaled in the history of company promotion.

Harsh though his voice was, Mr. Woolland's opening remarks were, for him, couched in an accent that was almost mellifluous. He greeted his fellow directors in a few really gracious sentences. His desire to be friendly was apparent, and yet there was nothing fulsome about his exordium. McPherson marveled at the man.

The directors smiled. Evidently the boss was in an amiable mood. The country air was doing him more good than he imagined.

A fresh cylinder was placed in position and Woolland proceeded to utter a few last words on his scheme. The directors listened attentively.

"Finally, gentlemen," he said, plunging into his peroration, "I should like to remind you that most of you have interests in common with me——" here the growling of a dog intruded on the speaker's tones—"your interests, indeed, are mine."

There was a sharp bark; then a prolonged pause. The board waited patiently. At length the voice went on, in a slightly higher key.

"You, for instance, Burt. That turps I've helped you to sell. Poor stuff, eh Burt? I think you'll vote for me, Burt; I think so, you furtive eyed, crawling little tradesman!"

A gust of laughter burst from Burt's colleagues. Burt alone sat silent, white with passion, yet dumb with apprehension.

"And you, Gunter," the voice went on in measured, cruel accents, "you herring gutted varnish hawker!" Mr. Gunter started to his feet. "You've put some pretty bad stuff on the market in your time, Gunter—what? If everything was known about you that I know, you Holloway Pet, it wouldn't be long before a pair of handcuffs was snapped on your wrists. You'll vote for me, Gunter. O, yes!"

"I'm perished if I will!" screamed the varnish expert.

"I see you chuckling there, Michaelson, you beetle browed ruffian," went on the voice, "but you'd chuckle on the other side of your face if I gave half a column about you to the financial paper. Yes, you ticket of leave man, I know a few things about the way you cook your balance sheets. Handle the bag in your dissenting chapel, do you? Yes, and handle its contents, too, if I know anything about you——"

"Stop the thing!" shouted Michaelson with an oath.

Clarke and Melville, the two anti-Woollands, whose hands were fairly clean, sat with ill suppressed mirth on their faces. This was only a bit of the great man's humor, they told themselves. A thought ill timed, perhaps, but most of what he said was quite true.

"And you, Levy-Peploe. Don't you think you're going to get off. I know all about you, sir! How about that little widow at——"

"It's a lie!" howled Levy-Peploe, thumping the table with his fist.

"Mrs. Levy-Peploe would be highly edified if she knew all about it," went on the voice. "And yet you have the impertinence to sit on the Midville Vigilance Committee, you hypocritical blackguard!"

"I'll never speak to the man again!" roared Levy-Peploe, his face crimson and his fingers twitching.

His colleagues gazed on him in surprise. His agitation was self convicting. As a business man a little lacking in the highest principles of honor, perhaps, in his private life he had been regarded by them as a saint.

So far the distant Woolland had confined his vituperations to the four colleagues upon whose support he had counted. Now, just as if to show how impartial he could be, he turned his guns upon the opposition.

"As for you, Clarke, don't think you're forgotten, you Old Bailey bird. Don't think I haven't got you weighed up. I wouldn't trust you one-half yard out of my sight. Your scandalmongering, canary beaked wife is bad enough——"

"This is unbearable!" cried Clarke in a frenzy. "Turn the thing off. Turn it off!" he almost shrieked, clawing over the table at it.

But the iron faced McPherson waved him aside. "Let's have all he's got to say. Got a sudden fit of frankness on top that it's healthy to hear."

"Yes, for dirty finger intrigue and general disloyalty to the firm," continued the voice, "commend me to you, you shallow browed, crime pitted outsider——"

"He's mad!" wailed Levy-Peploe.

"And so it is," went on the voice, "with the lot of you! You're scum! The only white man among you is Melville, and I can't think why he mixes with such a rabble. I suppose it is because he's not got a shilling to bless himself with since his brother made ducks and drakes of the business and wants the fiver a week he gets as a director."

"Hitting the target every time," muttered McPherson to himself.

"Here, let's have an end to this," snarled Melville. "After this there can be no more talk about amalgamation. And I, for one, won't sit on the same board as the bounder. See me!"

"McPherson," shrilled Levy-Peploe, "those cylinders mustn't get about!"

"Smash 'em," said Michaelson briefly. And suiting the action to the word he snatched up the cylinder nearest to him and hurled it into the fireplace.

In a few moments all the tale telling cylinders were merely fragments of wax. "Gentlemen," said Burt, who was only just recovering from his first shock, "I put it to you that at the meeting of shareholders to be held tomorrow we declare against the amalgamation with Woolland, and furthermore state our unwillingness to sit longer on the same board with him. He will have no other course then but to resign."

"Agreed!" came the chorus.

And then six white faced men filed out, leaving McPherson twisting his moustache thoughtfully.

her! The mother of Musinga, the great Mtussi king of Ruanda, was credited with having poisoned six of his little brothers to clear the throne for him.

So Alice had always to trot out and shake hands with the chief, then she would trot back to her dolls or drawing. She was neither afraid of the natives nor particularly interested in them. She did not see the strangeness which we did, or think them at all unusual—they were simply part of the amazing world which she was daily discovering and a natural part of it to her.

They were not at all frightening or repellent, but she did get tired of the way they hung about her tent, sometimes trying to touch her yellow curls. Some of them thought the curls were ornaments and wanted to see if they would come off; others simply wanted to feel that strange, fair hair. But they were never intrusive or impertinent, and brought her gifts of baskets or eggs. None of them had seen a white child before.

One day I saw a boy drop on his knees. He muttered over and over a lot of unintelligible things in which I caught the words Jesu Christ. I called the invaluable Mablanga.

"What this boy say?"

Mablanga took off his cap, his invariable respectful prelude to speech, and smiled in an abashed yet amused way. Then as usual, when stuck for power for explanation, he resorted to negatives.

"No understand, miss."

"I think he say 'Jesu Christ.'"

"Yes, miss. One time he go mission. He see little thing—made like baby. He say that Jesu Christ."

The boy had seen the colored image at the mission and to him Alice was the living image. So presently he went away and came back with a little basket for present. We thought it very touching and thanked him fervently. But he was not satisfied. He made several emphatic remarks.

"What he say, Mablanga?"

"He say now time Jesu Christ make present," responded Mablanga.

So Jesu Christ gave him fourteen cents and he went away reconciled.

Rwakatiga had some distinctly advanced ideas. He wanted a white wife; he had heard there were many in the lands far away and he wanted the white people to write and get him one. He had sixty-five black ones, but he was willing to part with them—or most of them—for he understood the Europeans—all whites are Europeans—were conservative, and his men would build her a house in true European fashion.

He had suggested this both to Mrs. Barns and Madame Van Sacheghem, and now he endeavored to convey it to me, but my phrase book was unequal to anything intime. I had heard what he wanted and I understood his words about writing a letter, but my boy was too scandalized to translate his request any further.

There was no hint of race problem in Africa—not as far as white women were concerned. Not one of us had ever the feeling of any personal timidity.

The FLAPPER WHO FOUND HERSELF by Inez Haynes Irwin

Flutter, Chatter, Laughter—Letty Lacked These Magic Gifts of Flapperdom Until She Made the Great Discovery.

WHEN Letty opened the door of her sister's house her eyes fell first on a letter on the hall floor. It had come through the quaint slit in the quaint door, and it lay face up. It was almost as though somebody, softly welcoming, had called her name; for the envelope was addressed to her.

Letty picked it up; walked into the room at her right, tearing it open.

Dear Miss Mannering: I am more sorry than I can say that I cannot keep my promise to Margaret to spend the coming three days with you. I stumbled on the stairs last night and sprained my ankle, which will of course keep me indoors for many days. But I want you to come at once to stay with me—here at my boarding house—until your sister comes back. I am so sorry that this accident happened; for, aside from the pain and inconvenience to myself, I did hope to show you something of Boston before Margaret's return. But, as it is, I can only direct you what to do. Cordially,

"ADELINE BURTON.

P. S.—I should have said first of all, of course, that Margaret was very well when she left, but heartbroken that the sudden call to New York took her away during the first days of your visit.

Letty read the letter twice; sat down with it in her hands. She became conscious—she could not ignore it—of a soft sense of relief, the first faint melting of an inner tension. Most poignantly she yearned to be with Margaret and Paul—she had seen neither since their marriage last June—but even more she yearned to be alone for a while. She wanted to make a little mental survey of herself. She wanted to consider a problem which in the last year had loomed larger and heavier in her consciousness; a problem which during her visit to Dora Elwell had developed malignant weight and ache. She did not want to go to this unfamiliar Miss Burton. She did not want to go anywhere where there would be strangers.

She glanced about her—from the tiny drawing room to the tinier dining room, to the even tinier hall. How quaint it was! Margaret had written that her little two storied West End house was older than anything in their own flourishing middle western city; and it looked every year of its great age. Yet how hospitable, with Margaret's share of their mother's things giving it a poignant familiarity, Margaret's wedding presents making it gay!

The many paned windows of the drawing room were on a line with the shoulders of the passersby. But how few there were of these; and what a friendly street—so narrow and curving, with trees here and there; a great murmurous, fragrant linden at their very door! She would not—could not—be afraid of solitude in these doll-house surroundings. Her mind suddenly snapped to resolution. She would stay alone there. And on the impetus of that first snap she wrote a sympathetic and appreciative letter to Miss Burton, declining her hospitality.

The letter posted, she made a complete inspection of the house. It seemed to entreat her not to change her mind. Uneven floors, sagging casements, low ceilings; paneled doors, the deep fireplaces, the delicate stairway—all mutely begged for companionship.

"It's as though," Letty thought to herself, "old houses get so accustomed to company, they cannot bear to be alone. No, don't you be worried, old thing. I'll stay!"

There was ice in the icebox; bread in the bread box; cake in the cake box; milk; and there were in addition eggs, oranges, honey, lettuce, strawberries—all she might need for dinner and breakfast. Letty rummaged into this squat doored cubby hole of a closet; into that slim doored, long paneled one. The joy of youth in the adventure was setting into palpitation all kinds of emotional currents in her mind. Oh, if only they would wash her problem away! But the problem stayed—like a worry logged chest, caught so fast on the floor of her mind that no tide, however happy, could stir it. Must she think of it now?

On her question the bell rang—her trunk. She began feverishly to unpack it in the square back guest chamber.

"I feel as though I ought to take out a family of dolls and a set of dolls' furniture," she said to herself. "If I only knew a little girl in this neighborhood, I believe I'd buy a lot of toys and go straight to playing house!"

But what emerged from the trunk—"flapper fluff," her brother described it—was lace and ribbon trimmed piles of lingerie that went into bureau drawers, organdy and taffeta files of gowns that went on hangers into the closet; a bathing suit, a tennis racket, sport shoes, sleeveless sweaters in every color, tams to match.

She disposed of them all with a neatness so long drawn out and meticulous that time withered away before it. Dusk approached and she flew feverishly to the preparation of her supper. Cold, abbreviated—that took but fifteen minutes, the eating of it less. The problem stirred. In another instant it would float up to the surface of her mind. To what should she turn now — reading? Rummaging among Margaret's book shelves, she came across one of the year's literary sensations. She plunged into it.

It could not hold her, though. Her eyes, running swiftly along the print, ate up the pages; but at the end of the first chapter her mind was a blank. She tried another book, and another, and another. No use; the hour had struck. And on her recognition of the fact that worry logged chest pulled up its anchor, floated straight up to the surface of her mind—caught immovably there. She threw the book down, angled her elbows on the window seat, cupped her chin in her hands, looked at her problem square.

Yes, her visit to the Elwells had been a complete failure. Out of the dozen young people who formed the house party she alone was not a success as a guest. What was it that made her different from other girls? Or was she, Oh, was she what Rob called a dumb bird?

Why was it that the instant a boy entered the room she turned tongue tied? She liked boys, and how much she wanted them to like her she could not tell! Not that she desired them to be mushy! All she asked was that they pick her for a partner for tennis, for golf—above all, for dancing. But it was obvious that they liked to do none of these things with her. On the other hand, they liked so much to do them with Dora that they almost fought for the privilege. What was it Dora had that she lacked? Or what was it she had from which Dora was free? In her heart she knew well enough what her handicap was. Her inevitable, her inescapable, her horrible shyness! What a blight that shyness laid on her! It descended the instant a male (under twenty) entered the room, descended like a fog—a fog so heavy, so soggy, so gluey that it bound her body, choked her speech, slowed her thought.

Dora bore no such social burden.

The entrance of the male (under twenty) released things in Dora. She turned to another and more radiant being. She was never still for a moment. She fluttered about the room as though borne on invisible wings. She chattered incessantly. She laughed without ceasing. Her hands never stopped their gestury flurry. Her little feet were always breaking into dance steps.

In the two weeks that Letty had spent with the Elwells—a two weeks in which the house was overrun with boys—Dora had always been the dominating figure. Letty, silent, heavy—ever thinking that in another instant she would break into that stream of chatter which flowed in a starred rainbow colored torrent between Dora and the boys—never once succeeded in doing it. It was as though she were a piece of furniture standing inert there. What was the quality in Dora that produced the flutter, chatter, laughter? Why hadn't she it?

Inside the case lay a single cigaret.

Letty's thoughts ran down this mournful channel again and again. She recalled scenes, episodes, conversations in which she had played so colorlessly negative or so positively awkward a part that she writhed thinking of them. She invented other scenes, episodes, conversations in which she was the triumphant center of all gayety. But her thoughts, running down these imagined avenues, always came flush on to the same impasse: What was it Dora had? Why didn't she have it?

In the meantime a wan dusk, attended by a pale crescent of new moon, tentatively descended. Outside Letty's window the linden kept up its friendly murmur, poured on her its delicious perfume. A syringa bush, in the tiny slit of garden across the way, wafted odorous welcome. A single spear point of diamond tipped silver pricked through the sky. Suddenly over the sky surged waves of stars. A cool evening slid into the place of the warm day. A group of children, making the most of the meager hour before bedtime, materialized from nowhere.

A trio of girls, welded by their interlocked arms into one group, walked up and down. Pairs of absorbed lovers passed. Fragments of their talk, strangely close, flew in at Letty's window. They deepened a strain of melancholy that wound in and out of Letty's reflections.

Some girls were not only social failures at first but all their life. Social success had nothing to do with being pretty, wearing charming clothes, having a nice family and a delightful home. She herself had so much. In boarding school, for instance, she had even rated higher than Dora for looks. How could she avoid realizing that, when everybody told her so! And indeed she knew she was not plain. It all came down again to that something, compact of flutter, chatter, laughter, that Dora had and she hadn't.

There were other things a girl could do—social settlement and charitable work. Hadn't she better make up her mind now to retire from the world and devote herself to the poor? She had always hoped that she might marry and—and—have a family . . . a quite large family—two boys and two girls. But manifestly she could not marry unless somebody asked her. Equally nobody would ask her unless he fell in love with her. And he couldn't fall in love if he didn't even notice that she was in the room.

She must signal to him that she was there! But she had no signals—not a single one. It must be, she decided, a retirement from the world, service to the poor. She pitied babies most, and old people. But, Oh, never to swim or play tennis or dance again!

A tear splashed off the round of her cheek. Others followed. She put her arms down on the window sill and her head on her arm. Gradually the romping children retired from the street. The giggling girls withdraw. But all the time the linden murmured and the syringa poured its perfumes on her. Her eyelids fluttered, closed.

The Midnight Visitor

HE awoke suddenly; awoke with a start—awoke with a paralyzing sense of terror. Somebody seemed with awkward, inexpert fingers to be fumbling at the screen. Trembling, violently, she pulled herself upright. Followed a detonation which, rasping across her sleep filmed ear drums, sounded in the midnight silence as loud as an explosion. But the orange-tawny flash which trailed it revealed that it was only the scrape against the clapboard of a match. It revealed something else—the head and shoulders of a man—a lad tall and reedy.

It was he who had lighted the match. And now, head down, he shielded the flame with his hands until it burned steadily; lifted it to the cigaret in his mouth. He took a rapid puff or two and then, while still the match burned—perhaps drawn by the steadiness of Letty's gaze—he looked up.

He stood, stock still, and stared at Letty.

She sat, stock still, and stared at him.

Letty saw a tall, slim lad with a cheek innocent of beard, as smooth and warmly colored as an apple. His black hair, flowing straight up from a rectangle of white forehead under the pushed back straw hat, showed the beginning of one of those permanent waves with which nature so often dowers ungrateful masculinity. His eyes were brown, steady, and clear, the lashes turned so far back that their curling tips

A BREATH of COUNTRY AIR by R.S. Warren Bell

The Terrible Mr. Woolland Employed His Vacation to Dictate Abuse of His Colleagues into a Phonograph.

IT was felt that Mr. Woolland, managinging director of the Oilmen's Supply Company, really ought to take a holiday. By nature a domineering and hectoring individual, the cares of office and neglected, rather than failing, health had served to render him positively unbearable. The whites of his eyes were yellow, his skin was a repulsive vermilion, his fingers were puffy with gout. When he dressed down, as the term is, some unfortunate department manager, the wallpaper seemed to shrink and cower beneath his hot and angry breath. For when a man of sixteen stone, heavy with uric acid, contents himself, by way of exercise, with staggering out of his carriage into a lift, and out of the lift into his boardroom, the pores of his hide clamor vainly for ventilation.

Mr. Woolland was a brute of a man possessed of but one idea—to make money, for the sake of the power that money gives. He loved power as a she wolf dotes on her cub. His colleagues on the board of the Oilmen's Supply Combine were six in number. They were all men in a large way of business, all wholesalers of established repute. Each was a specialist in something akin to oil. Here was a merchant, there a dry colors manufacturer; here a tallow king, there a fancy man in cart grease. The retail oilmen hated the combine, but had to bow to its decrees. Most of all they abominated Woolland, for, in addition to holding the managing directorship of the combine, he himself possessed a large oilmen's supply business that was entirely distinct from the combine. Between, therefore, Woolland on his own and Woolland at the head of the combine the small men had a horrid time of it.

What had for a long time kept Woolland from treating himself to a proper amount of leisure was his desire to amalgamate his private business with that of the combine. And he wanted half a million from the combine for it. His hopes, he fondly believed, were now approaching realizaion; he had reason to suppose that four out of his six fellow directors were with him. These four were Burt, Gunter, Michaelson, and Levy-Peploe. Opposed to him were Clarke and Melville. The secretary of the combine, a Scot called McPherson, was neutral. He attended all the board meetings and, in a quiet way, had as much power as Woolland himself. He was, at any rate, the one man in the show Woolland had any respect for.

"If I were you," said McPherson to him one day (they were on quite familiar terms), "I should go down to the coast, man, for a bit. You're done up. Get a house right by the sea. A breath of country air will do wonders for you. Play golf."

"What? That baby game!" snarled Woolland.

"That baby game. And always replace the turf. You'll hit a deal of it up."

"Any more instruction, Mr. McPherson?"

"Yes. Don't take a secretary along with you. You'll only feel you ought to give him something to do. Take a phonograph. Speak your instructions into it. Send the cylinders up here, and a shorthand writer will take down all you have to say."

"I don't care. Send him off."

"If you mean it, I will, but——"

"I do. Now let's get to these figures. I propose, in the first instance . . ."

So Mr. Woolland took a furnished house at St. Anselm's, a small place on the coast that was beginning to get popular, and went off to it, not giving a thought to the young man he had thrown upon the world with a month's money in his pocket.

The house he had hired lay at the back of the town and had a large, overgrown garden bordering on the new public park that had recently been laid out by the St. Anselm's Borough council—a park noticeable for uneven turf, unhappy looking shrubs, and stern regulations on notice boards—one of the sternest forbidding the bringing of dogs into the park unless on a lead.

A growl as of distant thunder, a snap, and they were rolling over on the asphalt.

Woolland, with a gasp of approval, hit him heavily across the shoulder blades. McPherson, broad and steady, was the only man in the firm who could have withstood the blow without flinching. This was fortunate. Levy-Peploe would have had to be taken to a hospital.

"Splendid," said Woolland. "Shout the stuff into a phonograph, eh, and send up the records every night by train? I'll do it. I'll give it 'em!"

"I've no doubt you will," said McPherson dryly. "And now as regards this young fellow Baker?"

"Send him off," roared Woolland. "Give him a month's money and send him off."

"It's a great pity. He's a smart young fellow."

"He's an impertinent scoundrel. I walk into the counting house at lunch time and what do I find? Baker—obliging with an imitation of myself!"

McPherson hid a smile with difficulty.

"He meant no harm, I'm thinking. He's an amateur actor, and prides himself on his 'impersonations.' But no man is better at his work. He's punctual and accurate, and has got plenty of initiative, which isn't too common a quality."

When Dog Eats Dog

THE amalgamation he had his heart on was just now the one soul possessing thought of Mr. Woolland's existence. It was more of a real necessity to him than the combine imagined, though two of its members—those opposed to it—had their suspicions. The combine, as matter of fact, was biting into Woolland's business. It couldn't help itself. So what better way out of the impasse was there than that Woolland should sell his business to the combine for a round half million before the combine ate it all away? It was an astute move on his part, and four of his brother directors were too dull to see it, for Woolland had assured them that, so far from the combine doing him any harm, it had thrown business in his way.

The amalgamation completed, he would be able to concentrate his entire gigantic energies on to the combine, and then wouldn't the little men know it? The vermillion hue of his face took a deeper shade when he thought of it.

Near the end of Mr. Woolland's garden was a summer house, and here, while the birds sang and the bees paid their marauding calls on the flowers, Mr. Woolland sat and growled into his phonograph. The beauties of nature made no appeal to this gross man; the sweet call of the surf on the beach had no more effect on him than the sound of a cab whistle. Irritated by the letters that reached him with every post, and having no unfortunate department heads to belabor with his tongue, he poured his venom into the brazen ear of the phonograph, lashing all and sundry with a singular wealth of epithet.

This was his one employment. At night he took the phonograph into the house and went on talking to it. The only break he allowed himself was a daily walk with his dog, a bull terrier of massive build and surly disposition, named Kitch (short for Kitchener).

Away in the offices of the combine a couple of shorthand writers were kept busy all day long transcribing Mr. Woolland's messages.

Many of them read curiously. One of the stenographers, a particular Baptist, at length flatly refused to take down any more of the phonograph's unblushing conversation. Mc-Pherson laughed and excused him, putting a man with a harder skin on to the job.

"I think," McPherson presently wrote to the chief, "it would be better to let us have your messages differently. What you've got to say to the board had better be said to them direct, per phonograph, and not taken down by one of the men. And if you'll have

Mr. Woolland, like all such men when they have been persuaded to tear themselves out of their groove, soon had reason to acknowledge the wisdom of McPherson's advice. The change was doing him a world of good. His eye was growing clear; a healthy tan was appearing on

AT the solid round mahogany table in the board room of the Oilmen's Supply had completed fully with the regulations concerning his kind.

with all suppressed mirth on their faces. This was only a bit of the great man's humor, they told themselves. A thought ill timed, perhaps, but most of what he said was quite true.

"And you, Levy-Peploe. Don't you think you'd be going to get off. I know all about seemed ready to prick through his eyelids. His face tapered down to an indeterminate boy mouth and ended with surprising firmness in a square chin.

"You had your chance—why didn't you take it?"

He saw what—framed by the square of the screen—might have looked to sophistication like a portrait of a young girl; a wistful blonde face which would have shown a certain piquancy of tip tilted nose and cleft chin if the hour and the blur of tears and its own innocence had not rendered it poignant. The disarranged hair dropped in frail tangles and airy wisps of gold on to her forehead and over her ears. Nevertheless, the clear gray of her candid eyes carried through the tangle. And nothing veiled the faint color in her soft cheek or the intenser one on her warm lips.

The lad gazed and gazed as though spellbound. And, equally magnetized, Letty gazed and gazed. Suddenly he jumped, looked down at his hand. The forgotten match had burned to the flesh. He dropped the stub, murmured a confused "I beg your pardon," moved on.

He was the only person on the street. Letty listened to his footsteps. They stopped a few houses on; where, she conjectured, he re-lighted the neglected cigaret. The footsteps started again; became staccato in their rapidity; then blurred off into the silence. Letty listened also to a nearby clock which almost instantly struck twelve. Other clocks took up their midnight responsibilities, and she listened to them, too. But all the time she was listening most intently to the clamor of her own thoughts.

What they were saying she did not exactly get. She realized only that she felt extraordinarily light and cheerful. After a while she arose, stretched, yawned, smiled. "You'd better go to bed, miss," she advised herself. "You're sleepy and tired! And, remember, no foolishness about being alone in this angel of a house! Now go into the dining room and kitchen and see that everything's locked there!"

She obeyed herself.

"Now try the front door and see that it's locked!"

Again she obeyed herself.

"Now take the screens out of the windows in the front room, close windows; lock windows! Number one done! now number two. Hullo, what's this?"

This was something that her hand struck just outside on the window ledge—something small and boxlike, cool, and satin smooth. She lighted the candle on a nearby table. It was a cigaret case of gun metal studded with turquoises.

"O, Paul, I've certainly got one on you!" Letty gibed at her absent brother-in-law. "What a goop! Think of leaving such a lovely thing where any passerby might steal it! I suppose he sat there smoking and just forgot all about it."

She pressed the spring. Inside lay a single cigaret.

She took her find upstairs to her room—for safekeeping, she told herself—spread it open on the top of the old fashioned bureau. She did not go to bed immediately, however. For suddenly she found she was not sleepy at all. Beside, with equal suddenness, temptation—a mighty one, a gay one—swooped out of the air upon her. She sat down at the mirror and examined the case all over again.

Letty Makes a Confession

SHE slept soundly until six. Then for some unaccountable reason she awoke with a start. She tried to hypnotize herself into sleep again, for she realized that a long day lay before her, and for an equally unaccountable reason, that day looked lonely. But her system of hypnosis did not work, and presently she jumped up, dressed; drew on one of the little gingham gowns that hung in the closet.

Downstairs in the microscopic kitchen she built a fire; put water on to boil. She set the tête-à-tête dining room table with scrupulous care: one flowered saucer on a flowered plate for strawberries; a second flowered saucer on a flowered plate for breakfast food; a flowered egg cup; three of the slender, dented silver spoons that Margaret and she had teethed on. While she waited for the water to boil she went into the drawing room, opened the windows, and put in the screens. The odor of the linden mingled with the syringa and poured a heady volume of perfume into the room. In the garden opposite a robin was calling. She leaned out. The narrow slit of sky showed a warm blueness, but the morning air struck cool on her cheek. The street looked dead; all the houses were blanked by drawn curtains and there was only one person in sight. Idly she followed him with her gaze—a man, no, a boy.

He was coming slowly along, stopping at each house and examining the ledges of all the ground floor windows. What an extraordinary proceeding! Yet there was something vaguely familiar about him. Where had she seen him before? In a flash she remembered. It was the young man who had lighted the cigaret under her window. But what in the world was he doing? Why—why, he was looking for something! What did he expect to find on window ledges?

Suddenly it came to her. Of course. The cigaret case belonged not to Paul but to him. It was the touch of the case against the screen as he deposited it on the window ledge that had wakened her.

She rushed frantically upstairs; tore frenziedly downstairs. She opened the front door and stood on the threshold panting, listening to the footsteps that slowly came nearer and nearer.

Closer he drew. She heard him stop at the first of the drawing room windows; then at the second. He passed the doorsteps; cast a casual glance upwards—stopped and stared as Letty held out the cigaret case to him.

"I—I beg your pardon," Letty faltered, "are—are—you looking for this?"

"Yes—I—I am!" The lad faltered, too. "I'm much obliged to you for—for keeping it for me. You see I rested it on the window ledge last night while I lighted my cigaret."

"Yes. I—I found it a few minutes later when I—I took the screen out," Letty explained, still faltering, "but I—I—I thought that Paul, my brother-in-law, had left it there."

"I sorta—hated—to lose it," the boy explained, "my—my sister gave it to me last Christmas."

"It's awfully pretty," Letty managed to say after a long stop. "I—I just adore gunmetal things—anyway."

The tongue tied feeling was invading her. Flutter! Flutter! Gesture! Why couldn't she? Why couldn't she? Again there was pause. Then the lad broke it.

"I—I missed it the moment I got home, but I—I—I—knew I'd left it on your window ledge. I—I couldn't seem to remember what part of the street it was in, though. That's why I came to look for it so early. I—I was afraid people would take me for a burglar or a—or a lunatic, or—or—something!"

His halting speech came to an end. Letty tried to think of something to say, but the tongued tied feeling had all of her now. The lad took the conversation up with a new and freer impulse.

"Besides, my last cigaret was in it. My—my mother made me promise that I'd only smoke three cigarets a day until I was twenty-one. I—I—can't tell you how I have been thinking of that smoke as I walked along." He came to a pause.

Lett's silence was a frozen one, but an instant fever invaded her cheeks. He seemed to cast about him for more talk, found none, and in default of it pressed the spring of the cigaret case. The cover flew open.

Letty's blush was a crimson that paled Paul's Harvard banner hanging in the hall behind her. Her merciful lids dropped over her horrified eyes.

"Why, it's gone!" the lad exclaimed. "That's funny. I was sure there was one here." He slipped the case into his pocket.

Letty faced him full. All the spiritual temptation of a long line of Puritan ancestry looked out of her eyes, but all their triumphs over those temptations rang in her tone. "You are not mistaken," she said, "there was a cigaret in it. I—I—I—smoked it."

The boy stared speechless. He tried to speak, but words would not come. A crimson flush painted his cheek that faded Letty's blush as Letty's blush had paled the Harvard flag. Some trained impulse in Letty took up its instinctive work. "Wait a moment, please!" she dropped in a fainting voice. She turned and fled up the stairs. In an instant she was back again, her white skin still showing banners of scarlet. She held out her trembling hand to the boy. In it was a case of silver opened to show files of cigarets.

"Please take one," she begged. "Take a lot! They're my brother Paul's."

The boy docilely took the case from her, extracted a single cigaret, put it between his lips, tried to light it. His fingers made awkward work with the match at first. "This is a pretty cigaret case," he finally breathed, but he said it as one who is unconscious of his own words.

"Yes," Letty answered. "Paul bought it in Nuremburg." For an instant she surveyed a mental blankness in which was no word. Then, as an inspiration, "It's—it's very old."

Ensued a hollow pause in which neither cigaret nor cigaret case offered conversational inspiration to Letty.

"Do—do—you know," the lad finally broke the silence in a voice that seemed to have absorbed some of its hollowness, "of any—any—place round here where I—I—could get my breakfast? I'm—I'm—a stranger in Boston."

"I'm so sorry," Letty breathed, "but I—I don't. I'm—I'm a stranger, too."

"Oh!" The lad removed his hat. "Thank you for finding my cigaret case. Good-by."

"Good-by!" Letty said—and closed the door.

Once in the house, Letty's blushes again had their way with her. What a thing to happen! What a hideous thing to happen! And to happen to her of all girls! The episode would take the place, she knew, with half a dozen similar incidents, the thought of any one of which in the stark middle of the night, first scorched, then drenched her body with humiliation.

That terrible moment in boarding school theatricals when, before a hall full of audience, the pasteboard blade she had just drawn broke in the middle—and she burst into tears! That awful instant at luncheon when before a tableful of company she pronounced heterogeneous — hete*rog*enous. That horrible interval—at the end of the dancing class—when she walked across the hall with a long run in her stocking. That unspeakable time on the tennis court when her petticoat came off. If she had only lied—told him that the cigaret dropped out and broke when she opened the case. If she only hadn't—if she only didn't—if she only wouldn't—if she only could—

Flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter!

Letty fell after breakfast into an orgy of work. She washed her dishes. She made her bed. She dusted the entire house. But these tasks took only a small portion of her morning—and through them all that scarlet shame hotly seared her consciousness.

In the afternoon she wandered futilely about the West End streets for a while. But walking alone was an unsatisfactory process. Her eye did not long contemplate what it fell upon. Her memory kept going back to that fatal cigaret. She returned to the house, tried again to read, again failed, fell into revery. Flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter. To retire from the world. Very little babies and old, old people. That cigaret . . . If she could only see him again to wash away the impression of the social horror she had committed. She would ask nothing more of fate—the chance to talk with him once. She invented nimble wonders of repartee and epigram to scatter along the conversational way. Also she would drop casually:

"How I came to smoke that cigaret was just exactly this: You see, at boarding school where I've been, there was a girl who had an aunt come to visit her who had always lived abroad. She was a countess—a really, truly countess. She came into my room to see the view—and I talked with her alone for nearly half an hour. She was the most wonderful, marvelous, fascinating creature I ever saw in my life—as beautiful as a movie star—just like people you read about in books. Well, while we were talking, she said she was simply dying for a smoke. She took out of her bag the most lovely cigaret case I ever saw. It had her monogram on it in diamonds, and she had a holder of green jade with a diamond monogram on that, too. She'd been staying with some people who did not approve of smoking and she hadn't had a cigaret for three days. She told me not to tell and, of course, I said I wouldn't. But I was nearly petrified for fear one of the teachers would happen to drop in. Oh, she smoked beautifully—you should have seen her. And she blew rings in a most enchanting manner."

A sudden conviction pulled taut in her mind.

If he were shy with her she never would be shy with him. Never! Never! The thought of his shyness miraculously evaporated here. Flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter.

A dazzling idea rocketed through her mind. He would call for his cigaret case in the morning. She would invite him to come back believing she smoked. Somehow that brought out in her a curious contradictory defence, a sparkle of sophistication. Flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter. Well, watch her!

Dunbarton-Kent said with conviction. "Why haven't you married?" she demanded.

Though Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had hurled her questions, Marie was not in the least discomposed; she was so certain that Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was prompted by kindness.

"I think, madam, because no man has made me love him sufficiently. I think I do not love easily," she confessed.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent surprised Marie by getting up and walking the floor. She continued to walk until there was the sound of some one on the stairs. She stopped abruptly. "Gibbs, I suppose?" she said.

Marie knew it was not Gibbs, not that light step. It was West who called "May I come up?"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent Protests.

MRS. DUNBARTON-KENT went out hurriedly to the landing and closed the door behind her. On the stairway she confronted West, and her look was of the sternest. "You mustn't come up here, West."

His smile vanished. "It's Marie should decide that, isn't it, Aunt Bulah?"

"It happens to be my garage, West."

"I am determined, Aunt Bulah—do you mean you're going to make it hard for me?"

"I don't approve of it. I think you've taken leave of your senses."

"I haven't. She's different from everybody. It's like finding a gem. I'm in earnest, Aunt Bulah."

"I'm thinking of the family, West."

He flung back his head. "The family! A little honest blood would do it good! See here, Aunt Bulah," he added more calmly. "I'm in dead earnest, but it rests somewhat with you. If you give your countenance, it will be a romance; the society ground won't be cut from under her. If you object, play the family against her, send her away, you'll as good as end it, for I wouldn't ask a girl to subject herself to the treatment she would receive. Don't make it impossible, Aunt Bulah?"

"Choose some one in your own class, West."

"Mrs. Brant-Olwin possibly?" he retorted with sarcasm.

"You've been attentive to her."

"Because she's amusing. But I couldn't love Mrs. Brant-Olwin. But this little girl!"

"I don't approve of it," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent maintained stubbornly. "Leave her alone, West, or I shall have to send her away."

"I won't!" he returned hotly. "I can't! I shall see her and talk to her the first opportunity I get," and he turned and went down the stairs, his shoulders squared.

But at the foot of the stairs he stopped; then he came back. "Jones tells that he had a chance to talk with the servants at the Smith house and they told him that Mrs. Smith left the house just after the commotion in the park last night. They don't seem to know anything about her, except that she comes and goes in her runabout, and usually without any notice to them. They told Jones that occasionally she telephones out to them from town that she is coming, but her orders are that the house shall always be ready, fires kept going, and food in the pantry, and so on. Jones says that they are good enough servants, but particularly stupid. Mrs. Smith hired them in New Orleans and brought them up here. The men about town all know that she's a confirmed gambler, though, Aunt Bulah. Haslett told you that, didn't he?" West had lost his flush of anger; he looked as anxious as Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looked as soon as Mrs. Smith was mentioned.

"Willetts told Haslett and me this morning about Jones' talk with the servants," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said in lowered tones. "Haslett and I talked things over. He went back to town and a messenger brought me a letter from Haslett at noon. He found out at once that the woman has been gambling heavily the last month, losing big sums, winning, too, sometimes. Every gambling resort knows her. But so far she has put up nothing but ready money. He's trying to trace her, find out just who she is, but that will take time. If only she doesn't stake a diamond or two some time," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent added heavily.

"I think she'd be too shrewd to do that, Aunt Bulah," West said reassuringly. "Discovering her may be a way out for us all. I'd try to look at it that way."

"Possibly. It's what Haslett said," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent returned drearily. "I'm glad of one thing, though. Haslett has changed his mind about that child."

West's eyes flashed. "I should think so! I never heard of anything so ridiculous! Any one with an atom of sense would know that she's nothing but sweetness. Haslett couldn't risk talking to her himself, of course, but he might have chosen something better than a jackass like Walter Greene to interview her. I want to get her away from all this."

"Not as you propose to do it, though, West," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said with an instant return to sternness. "I won't have it—let her alone."

West looked his defiance only. He went down the stairs with his shoulders squared and his head high.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looked after him. "Um!" she said to herself.

When she went back to Marie she said gravely, "They say that the Smith woman has gone. She cleared out last night."

"Madam!" Marie exclaimed. "I think she has gone forever! I think there is something secret and wrong about that woman. I am glad she has gone."

"Well, I fancy you can walk about the park now without fear of death. I'd do my strolling in the daytime, though. Have you any girl's clothes, Angouleme?"

Marie was surprised by the sudden change of subject. "But—yes, madame, in my trunk."

"Good looking ones?"

"A neat suit, madam, and furs that are really handsome, and a little hat which is pretty, I think. Also some gowns for the house," Marie answered with a touch of pride.

"Well, as soon as you're fit, put them on and walk about. Walking will be good for you, and when you sit down set to on that lace you said you'd make for me."

"But, madam, the cars?" Marie said wide eyed.

"O, Anderson or somebody can do the heavy work and run the errands, and you can drive me. You turn into a girl for a while."

"Yes, madam," Marie said, submissive but amazed.

A Period of Leisure.

GLAD in feminine garments, Marie found herself a person of leisure. Even the lace making was forbidden for a few days; besides, the materials had to be ordered from town, which necessitated a delay. "Consider that you're having a holiday. Walk about," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent commanded. "Get that head of yours well as soon as possible."

Willetts, Marie discovered, was the man who had carried her up to the house when she was hurt. On the first morning Marie was able to go down into the garage Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent brought him in and introduced him. "Angouleme, this is Willetts," she announced with her usual abruptness. "He's the night watchman, so if anything scares you again just remember that he's about and call him."

Marie liked Willetts instantly. Though he looked rough, he had a nice smile.

"It is a pleasure to meet you, Mr. Willetts," she told him. "I wish to thank you that you bore me to the garage the other night. From experience I know that an unconscious person is heavy," and, to Willetts' evident surprise, she held out her hand for him to clasp. Her big eyes looked more than ever the larger part of her face, for her accident had told on her.

"O, that was all right," he said with some embarrassment. "You're no weight at all—besides, Breck and I had you between us." His observant eyes softened pleasantly; few men would be proof against such a glance as Marie bestowed on him, for when Breck's name was mentioned the light in Marie's eyes became a positive glow. So Breck had helped carry her. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had not told her that.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was not pleased by the admission; it was so unlike the cautious Willetts. Then she relaxed into amusement. It was Willetts, as well as Mr. Walter J. Greene, who had regarded the little chauffeur with suspicion, and now he was only too evidently distracted by a smile. Such was man! Marie in her chauffeur's uniform was highly picturesque, but in the little blue dress, with lace at throat and wrists and curly hair bound with a red ribbon, she was remarkably pretty. With color in her cheeks she would be beautiful, a purple pansy sort of beauty that in a picture hat and furs would be ravishing, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent decided.

She removed Willetts promptly with the parting injunction to Marie to walk in the park.

Marie said, "Thank you, madam, I will," but she said nothing about a vague intention of hers which took definite form as soon as Willetts had made his admission. Marie had spent two days thinking of how to win over Breck Dunbarton-Kent. That was the next most important thing to be accomplished.

Her morning walk was down the driveway and designed to prove to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent that she was obeying her. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent sat in her room in the mornings and would see her.

So in suit and furs and a little toque Marie circled the house and started down the driveway and was captured at once by the breath of spring. It was both chilly and warm, invigorating. The birds were announcing their arrival. Marie stopped at the edge of the park and watched them.

"Are you conjuring the birds, Marie?" a voice behind her asked.

She turned quickly. It was West. He had come from the house and had crossed the lawn, so she had not heard him. He had gone straight to Marie, determination in every line of his body, a backward glance having told him that Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent sat in her window.

Marie smiled brightly. "No, monsieur—still I do not know the meaning of the word 'conjuring.' I was thinking that soon in the trees there would be nests."

"It's the nature of birds—and men—to build nests, if we can persuade a woman to help us." He held out his hand, his eyes intent yet smiling, and when Marie gave him her hand he held it. "Are you feeling as well as you look, little Marie?" From the entire front of the house they could be seen. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent from her sitting room, Bella from the library, and Gibbs from the dining room were witnesses of the meeting. West knew that they were.

It did not occur to Marie that they were being observed, but West's manner embarrassed her. She drew her hand away and substituted a pretty speech.

"I think I am altogether well, monsieur, and partly because of the beautiful roses. I think they brought the spring; and who could be ill in so lovely weather?"

West's gaze swept her admiringly. "Are you going for a walk?" he asked.

"A little—in the park, monsieur."

"May I come with you?"

Marie was more surprised now than she was embarrassed. Most men either looked or made pretty speeches, but there was something determined about the way in which West looked and spoke, quite different from his manner when he had talked with her in the garage. Suddenly there was about him this air of the determined lover. It was astounding. Men like West Dunbarton-Kent did not look and speak in this way unless they were in earnest; not unless they were openly and honestly courting a woman. Marie's color rose and, with the feminine instinct to withdraw when approached with unexpected determination, her air was reluctant. "But I shall walk such a little way only."

"Very well, just to the park entrance then?"

"Perhaps, monsieur—but you are without your overcoat. I am afraid you will take cold."

"I'm not in the least afraid of taking cold—I'm warm from head to heels. It's a delight to see you again. Come!"

Having shown the proper degree of reluctance, Marie had no objections to offer. However, she looked at the trees and the road, at any object rather than at West. She gave him her eyelashes to read and answered his eager questions, meanwhile puzzling over him. It was so utterly surprising; he was paying court to her. But such an impossibility! He was doing it quite openly, with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looking on. The night she was hurt he had seemed anxious and she had thought it was merely because he was kind. But this way of looking and speaking?

"You really feel all right again?" West asked.

"Altogether well, monsieur—only a little lazy."

"You feel weak. I've worried terribly about you. The other night I didn't know you were hurt until Gibbs began fussing around the house trying to find lint and things for Aunt Bulah. When I went out to the garage and saw you unconscious I had a shock. You looked ghastly, Marie."

He spoke with such feeling that in sheer gratitude Marie looked at him. "I will never forget your kindness, monsieur. You and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, you have made me happy so I begin to love Kent House."

West looked at her in a way that made her eyes fall. "I hope you will love Kent House still better, or, rather, that you will love—a Dunbarton-Kent better. As I told you, I am thoroughly sick of this life—there is no satisfaction in a merely social existence. I want to settle down and work. I have several inventions to which I'd like to give my time. I can't work here; family troubles cast a pall of gloom over everything. I want a home of my own. I'd like to go to Canada—what do you think of that, Marie? Some beautiful place on the St. Lawrence?"

"There are such places, monsieur, where you could work most peacefully," Marie answered with determined steadiness, though her heart was beating uncomfortably. She felt bewildered. She wished intensely that she could escape to her room and think. Happily they had reached the entrance to Kent House park; in going back she would walk more quickly.

West looked at her lowered lashes and crimson cheek. "You are utterly sweet, Marie," he said with sudden passion. "In all my life I've never met any one like you!" They had paused at the entrance and he had come close. He slipped his hands into her muff and held hers, drawing the muff up against his breast. "Listen, dear, I want to tell you something."

Marie caught her breath. "Monsieur—please——"

West bent to kiss her and Marie recaptured her usual elusiveness. She left the muff in his hands and put the road between them. "I prefer that we walk more apart," she said, poised for flight, her manner half grave, half mischievous. "I think I love this Kent House greatly, but whether I love—a Dunbarton-Kent—of that I am most uncertain. And I do not kiss when I am asked—unless I wish to."

"I am in earnest, Marie," West said decidedly.

"But you are in earnest too suddenly, monsieur."

"I'm usually sudden—when there's something I really want."

"And I am most unsudden. The thing I wish for at this moment is my muff—my hands grow cold," and she shivered with a mock chill, her small feet patting the ground, about as tantalizing an object as man could look upon.

West eyed her unsmilingly; then, suddenly, he relaxed. "Well, be 'unsudden' if you want to—it'll be all the same in the end—you'll go with me wherever I want you to go. You were a quaint thing when you were a little chauffeuress—I thought about you all the time I was in Washington and the other night in the garage, when you were crying, I didn't know whether I was in love with you or not. But, when you were hurt, I knew. In skirts you're a formidably lovable person and the prettiest thing on earth. Now here's your muff—will you come for it?"

"I think not, monsieur."

The half serious laughter in her eyes had lodged in his. "May I bring it across the road to you?"

"I think it will be best for you to throw it to me."

"O, very well—catch!"

Marie secured her muff. "Now we walk to the house, but, please, you on your side of the road and I on mine," and she walked off resolutely but with the corners of her mouth rebellious.

West looked both exasperated and amused. "You're pretending," he asserted. "At this moment you're thinking about as hard as you ever did in your life."

It was true. Marie was walking jauntily, but in her muff her hands were tightly gripped. "Indeed, monsieur! Of what is it I think so profoundly?" she asked with determined lightness.

"Mostly of the great mystery, my black-a-browed cousin, Breck."

The Romance of a Million Dollars

By ELIZABETH DEJEANS

THE STORY THUS FAR

PRETTY Marie Angouleme, our heroine, traveling to New York to recoup her fortunes, is nearly strangled by a mysterious woman in sables when she enters the wrong berth by mistake. Arrived in New York, Marie obtains a position as chauffeuse for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, a widow. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's son, Breck, is in love with Marie, but Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent has other plans for her son. Marie is hurt in an automobile accident and is taken to the Dunbarton-Kent home, where she is cared for by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent and Breck. Marie's identity is discovered by Walter Greene, a friend of Breck's, who tells Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent that Marie is a notorious character. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent tells Marie to leave the house. Marie goes to the garage, where she is found by Breck. He tells her that he loves her and begs her to marry him. Marie refuses, saying that she is not worthy of him. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent tells Marie that Breck is engaged to Miss Haslett. Marie leaves the house and goes to the garage, where she is found by Breck. He tells her that he loves her and begs her to marry him. Marie refuses, saying that she is not worthy of him.

"They are so beautiful and so sweet—I waked thinking it was spring."

"West got them for you," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent announced, and watched closely Marie's flush of pleasure.

"Did he, madam! That was most kind."

"West has a way of being kind to girls. He's been a much sought after young man, smoking and she hadn't had a cigaret for three days. She told me not to tell and, of course, I said I wouldn't. But I was nearly petrified for fear one of the teachers would happen to drop in. Oh, she smoked beautifully—you should have seen her. And she blew rings in a most enchanting manner."

Sophistication

THE afternoon dragged its slow length away to twilight. Letty's thoughts dragged with it. After a while, not because she was hungry but for diversion, she began to cook her lonely dinner. Suddenly there came a sharp peal of the bell. Who could that be? Not Margaret! She was not due till day after tomorrow. Letty ran to the door. The hero of the cigaret case—panting and flushed, but an eager light in his eye—was standing on the steps.

"Oh—I'm—I'm so—I'm glad to find you in," he stammered, remembering, after an instant, to take his hat off. "A little while ago I put my hand in my pocket and found your brother's cigaret case. I don't know how I happened to steal it on you. I—I ran all the way here. I hope he hasn't missed it."

"Oh, no," Letty answered, taking the cigaret case. Words of explanation came in a rush. "He's away. So's my sister. I'm all alone in the house. They won't come back until day after tomorrow. I hadn't missed the cigaret case yet." Her mind started glibly on her carefully rehearsed monologue, "The reason why I smoked that cigaret was just exactly this," but her lips refused to take up the words. The tongue-tied feeling was coming over her again, invading her like a heavy, slow tide. Oh, flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter . . .

A thin, gray silence seemed to settle between them.

"I'm glad you hadn't—I'm glad you didn't think——" the boy plunged into that silence. "I'd have hated to have you—to have you think I'd stolen your case when you—when you—when you'd just given mine back to me."

The tongue-tied feeling had her tight. "Thank you!" oozed stupidly out of it. But that—of the volume she had to say to him—was all Letty's tongue would tackle.

"I—I found a place to eat," he went on, retreating backward down the steps. "Not—not good—but all—all right. Good-by."

"Good-by!" Letty managed to say as he vanished. But an instant later, upstairs in her room, flat on her bed with her head lost in pillows, she was articulate enough—even through her sobs.

"Idiot — dummy — blockhead — lemon — donkey—ninny—prune—fish," were some of the epithets she hurled at herself. "You had your chance. Why didn't you take it? O, you are a dumb bird!" Her sob-broken accusing apostrophe kept up until hunger dragged her downstairs.

After dinner she tried in various ways to rouse her spirits. She mixed a loaf of bread. She looked over Margaret's collection of foreign photographs. She knitted frantically on her new henna colored sweater. She pored over the fashion magazines. She wrote in her diary. She made out the accounts of her allowance which a stern father demanded of her every month. She played on the piano and even sang the latest jazz. But none of these occupations really helped. The tears kept coming.

Finally the clock struck eleven.

"Now you go to bed, young woman," she commanded herself with a feeble, jaded determination. "And no more foolishness about people you'll never see again as long as you live! Go into the dining room and kitchen and see that everything's locked there."

She obeyed herself.

"Now try the front door and see that that's locked."

Again she obeyed herself.

"Now take the screens out of the window in the front room; close windows; lock windows. Number one done! Now two! Hullo—what's——"

But Letty did not add this. This time her tone was not inquiry — only surprise; ecstatic, rapturous surprise. Her hand had struck something outside the window — something small and boxlike that felt cool and satin smooth. But that was not all she found.

For as she stood there holding the gun metal cigaret case in her hand a lightning flash of intuition zigzagged across her mind. Why, he was shy, too . . . shy as she . . . shyer! He had wanted to be invited to call, but he couldn't bring his lips to . . . While she had wrestled with the tongue-tied feeling, he had, too. He was so shy that he had to play this trick to show how he felt! He was so shy that he had never realized that she was shy. Why, if he were shy . . .

A sudden conviction pulled taut in her mind.

If he were shy with her she never would be shy with him. Never! Never! The thought of his shyness miraculously evaporated hers. Flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter.

A dazzling idea rocketed through her mind. He would call for his cigaret case in the morning. She would invite him to lunch . . . dinner . . . lunch . . . dinner . . . till Margaret came home. Another dazzling idea broke. She would never explain about the cigaret. He had come back believing she smoked. Somehow that brought out in her a curious confidence, a sparkle of sophistication. Flutter . . . chatter . . . laughter. Well, watch her!

Trembling, violently, she pulled herself upright.

THE FEW DAYS OF LITTLE FIJI

reminded her, "that they live by htunting; they catch birds."

Miss Waugh thought that, pretty soon, Fiji might begin to catch sparrows outside; surely it would be some time before she must undertake to supply him with screeching and flopping pullets. "He has his milk and his meat," she said sturdily, "and those, for the present, are enough."

Oh, the present! If ever a creature lived in the moment, it was poor little Fiji.

His eyes continued to make questions. "How do I happen to be here? Where is my true home—where are my real kind and kindred?" And Miss Waugh would catch him up: "Yes, yes, darling, I know. But we are doing the best we can for you—the very best!"

"Oh, come!" Miss Kerr would say tartly; "contain yourself." Then Miss Waugh would put Fiji down and return to her senator.

The senator was coming on splendidly. His future, at least, was assured. One day arrived Mr. Bemm to brace him for his plaster mold. Mr. Bemm was a brave young man who had camouflaged it in France, where he had built acres of landscape and had vari-painted scores of camions and gun carriages. But Mr. Bemm had his doubts about Fiji, and always preferred to know just where he was and just what he was about.

Next week came Mr. Bartelli, to throw on the plaster of paris. Mr. Bartelli, thoroughly urban and civilized, by race, tradition, and experience, was frankly afraid. Recalled, too, were the senator's daughters, who had come to see the "resemblance" and who had started for the door.

"You see what people think," said Miss Kerr.

Miss Waugh recollected a private estate out on the Fox river, forty miles from town, where there was a small zoo. Must Fiji in time be banished to that?

"I love him," sobbed Miss Waugh within herself, "and I know he loves me."

Miss Waugh had had honors and dignities. She had been president of this, and she had received medals for that. But had she ever received her due measure of affection? She thought not. Most of her studio friends were but pleasant companions. Most of her family lived "downstate," whither remittances from well-to-do patrons were re-remitted in due and frequent order. But here was her home, and here was a child in it. "I'll keep him as long as I can," Miss Waugh declared.

Fiji continued playful at intervals, and even picked up a number of ingratiating little tricks; but he did not thrive. Miss Waugh considered. One day she put him in a hamper and put the hamper in her automobile, and drove to the big zoo in the park. The director would know. This able man consoled homesick Eskimo dogs, and tossed basketfuls of fish to the seals, and stuffed the python for its long winter sleep. She reached the park just as the big carnivora, anticipating their afternoon feed, were pacing behind their bars, jumping up on their shelves and down again, and growling and yowling to the awe of hundreds of assembled children and their guardians. Fiji shrank from so many strange faces. Nor did he seem to feel the smallest affinity for the tigers, the leopards, the panthers, or even the pumas.

"Well, how about it?" asked Miss Kerr on the return.

Miss Waugh put down her charge on the cold, damp floor. "He mentioned rheumatism," she said, contemptuously. "A two months old baby with rheumatism!"

"Will they take him if you want to let him go?"

"No. They have two already. Besides he is not valuable."

Miss Waugh picked up her pet and clasped him close. "He—is—not—valuable, you understand."

"Oh, I'm sure——" began Miss Kerr, sympathetically.

"Not valuable!" repeated Miss Waugh. She shut her lips close and said no more.

October came. The educational blank of September was well past. Students again swarmed over the parkway. Again came a delegation from the Phi Gammas. The Phi G.'s had given up their house to the Sigma Nus and had moved not only beyond the parkway, but a full half mile beyond the gray walls and towers that bordered it. They were "rushing" some new boys, and two or three of these had been brought along to see the wonders of art and the curiosities of nature. Old Nick turned his back and walked out, leaving his mistress to display her pet.

The old boys found him interestingly larger (though they had evidently expected to find him larger still), and the new boys found him interesting, regardless of size. But he growled and spat a little at all of them impartially. "He is not very well today," said Miss Waugh in apology.

Among the early October days came one that was mild and warm. No blaze needed in the fireplace; no wraps needed over one's shoulders. The studio gave a tea on the lawn, while the Sigma Nus looked on from their front porch, and while cries, admiring or derisive, came from motor cars speeding along the parkway. The artists were all present, and their friends; and Mr. Fulmer led along a connoisseur from Milwaukee. Miss Waugh presently brought out Fiji and placed him on the grass. Fiji looked about him a little and then slowly walked away. Perhaps the complexions were not swarthy enough. Perhaps it was the absence of serapes and of high crowned, wide brimmed hats. Perhaps it was because the banana groves were missing and his true mother was inexplicably absent. And there were no bright plumaged birds to snatch at as they flitted through tangled undergrowths. He stole back to his own indoor jungle of smeared clay boxes and dusty death masks—perhaps not quite the right jungle, yet a jungle nevertheless.

These lines were started to characterize Fiji, not to commemorate him. Far too many favorite horses and faithful dogs have died in concluding paragraphs; yet what shall one do when Time's pace is faster than the pen's?

Two or three days later the "animal man" came over from his post on the trolley line. A heavy cold had been added to other troubles—and diet had remained as much in doubt as ever. The next weekly tea was held indoors, for the weather had become chilly. A fire burned in the studio—a generous one, for the summer seemed definitely over. After the last guest had departed Miss Waugh held Fiji for a while in her lap, to his seeming comfort. Then she made him as comfortable in his bed as she could, and stepped out to dinner. "When I return," she said, "I shall hold him again as long as he likes." But when she came back she found him dead.

An hour later Old Nick, who had absented himself for three days, walked in complacently and began to show himself at home in his old haunts. Nobody had told him—nobody could tell him; but he knew. Miss Waugh cast a sidelong glance at him. It would have been almost indifferent—if it had not been slightly indignant.

"I wonder," she said, "if a mere tame cat can ever content me now?"

She laid Fiji away amidst the autumn blooms that surrounded the elegiac lady with clasped hands, who stood in the midst of the flower bed, where the petunias and verbenas had turned to salvias and asters. The artists attended in a body, sympathetically; and no one added to Miss Waugh's pain by telling her that it was "all for the best." Little Fiji, like others of us, had got into the wrong jungle. Let us hope that he, and others with him, find the right one.

The Romance of a Million Dollars

by ELIZABETH DEJEANS

THE STORY THUS FAR

PRETTY Marie Angouleme, war heroine, traveling to New York to recoup her fortunes, is nearly strangled by a mysterious woman in sables when she enters the wrong berth by mistake. Arrived in New York, Marie obtains a position as chauffeuse for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, a social leader with an income from millions. Marie notes an air of distrust about the Dunbarton-Kent household, which includes Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's two nephews, Breck and West, and her niece, Bella. Marie herself is questioned closely. Finally she finds a friend in West, although she is much attracted to the somber Breck. Wandering about the estate, she hears piano music, and traces it to a "spite house" built by "Mrs. Smith," whom Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent regards as an enemy. Marie recognizes the player as the woman in sables. She is about to scream when a hand—Breck's—covers her mouth. Breck is jerked away and Marie falls. When she awakes Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent is attending to her injuries. Marie learns it was Allen Colfax, whom her employer distrusts, who attacked Breck. West visits Marie and reveals his love for her. One of Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's agents tells how Breck has visited "Mrs. Smith."

"Listen, dear, I wish to tell you something," said West gently.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

West Declares His Love.

"WHAT did Breck say to you on the way?" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent asked Willetts.

"Just what he said to you when we carried her into the garage, that he was 'on the road to the farm,' and when he reached the cottage the girl ran into him, almost knocking him down, and the next thing Colfax and his dog attacked him. He said he thought something must have frightened the girl, and as for Colfax, his intentions were all right; Colfax must have thought he was attacking the girl—'Just a concatenation of mistakes,' he said to me. The dog tore his coat into shreds, and Colfax must have bruised him up some. Though he talked quietly enough, he was white as paper and excited, and when you sent him off he must have gone the straightest road down to the Smith house. He beat me to it, all right." The fact evidently rankled, for Willetts shook his shoulders impatiently. "I'd like to have seen them together."

"She must have heard the noise," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said.

"Sure she heard it. She came out on her porch to see what it was. I was busy separating Breck and Colfax, but I saw her. Then she went back in. The house was still lighted up when I went back with Jones and saw Breck coming out of the house. Then, in a little while, we saw the colored couple who work for Mrs. Smith turn off the lights and then go off to their quarters above the garage. If she left, it was Breck who gave her the tip and she got out just before Jones and I reached the house, for I'll guarantee she didn't go while we were there—unless she made an astral body of herself."

"I don't know that it makes any difference whether she goes or stays!" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent burst out suddenly in a sort of passionate depression. "Every day seems to bring new complications and dangers!"

There was that something about Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent which had won Marie, which attached her servants to her, which, in spite of her almost laughable exterior, compelled deference, more than mere respect, a genuine liking. There was real sympathy in Willetts' answer.

"Things look bad, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, but I hope it'll come out all right."

"God grant it, Willetts!" she said deeply. "Go now, and do the best you can with one problem and I'll try to think out the other."

It was noon of the next day when Marie waked from a vivid dream that it was spring and she was gathering sweet scented flowers in a meadow where the birds sang. She opened her eyes to a room which was not too much shaded to keep out the sun, and on the table beside her bed was a bowl of roses; they scented her room; while on the window sill a bird chirped and ruffled its feathers. There had been a change in the weather; the third of April had dawned mildly and the sun had risen vigorously warm. The window where the bird preened itself was open.

Marie's eyes rested first on the roses, then on the open window and the bird. Then she saw Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent sitting only a few feet away, her head laid back and her eyes closed. But she was not asleep, for Marie noticed her fingers played a noiseless tattoo on the arm of her chair. She was pale; she looked as if she had not slept at all. She looked tired, yet her lips were set firmly.

Marie felt that she had waked to an entirely new world—April sunshine, flowers, and a friendly spirit. Cautiously she drew herself up in bed. Her head felt muffled and sore, but there was no real pain. She felt hungry.

Then Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent opened her eyes and turned. "So you're awake! How do you feel?"

Marie had hoped that there would be the note of kindness in Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's voice. It was there, and Marie's smile was sunny. "I am so well that I am hungry, madam. I am afraid I slept without any regard for you who have watched so kindly."

"Hungry, are you? Well, you've waked just in time for lunch," and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent heaved herself out of her chair and felt Marie's pulse and touched her cheek. "Your skin's cool and your eyes are clear."

"But, madam, it cannot be noon!" Marie exclaimed aghast.

"It's one o'clock."

"And you sat with me through the night and all the morning! O, madam, it is no wonder you should be tired!"

"I had plenty to keep me awake," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said grimly. "At any rate, we're rid of the doctor's palaver. He's come and gone. I wouldn't let him wake you. Now what are you going to eat?"

"Almost anything, please, madam."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent chuckled. "Well, you're going to be disappointed, for the doctor ordered spoon food for today. And you're to keep to your bed till tomorrow. It's all very well, I suppose, but a little soap and water won't do you any harm while I go and call up Gibbs."

"But your luncheon, madam? I am quite able to be left. I must not continue to be a trouble to you," Marie protested.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent brought a basin and towels to the bed. "I shall have my lunch here," she said in a tone that disposed of argument. "Stop bothering and wash as well as you can; most of you is bandages," and she went off downstairs.

Marie wondered about the roses on her table. She reached and touched them. "They are so beautiful and so sweet—I waked thinking it was spring."

"West got them for you," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent announced, and watched closely Marie's flush of pleasure.

"Did he, madam! That was most kind."

"West has a way of being kind to girls. He's been a much sought after young man, Angouleme."

Marie partook pleasurably of her milk toast. "That is quite natural, madam, for he is both handsome and of a distinguished family, and his manners are most charming."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent suppressed a chuckle. She wished, somewhat grimly, that her nephew could have heard the speech, accompanied as it was by an enjoyment of milk toast. It bespoke so complete a heart wholeness and so entire a lack of self-consciousness. But Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent knew that, despite a certain volatile quality, West was both a persistent and a skillful person. He was an odd combination of worldliness and its opposite, of secretiveness and frankness, of coldness and of kindliness, quick witted to a degree, but rarely sharp spoken.

He had great self-control, for only those who knew him well detected a restless spirit beneath his charm of manner. He seemed to be craving something, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent could never determine what; that he was not a happy man she was certain. The temptations offered to money and good looks did not seem to stir him. Women either amused him or bored him, and if he had ever had a love affair deeper than a passing flirtation Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent did not know of it.

She had been utterly astounded by his manner to Marie. And yet, when she considered the thing, was it so astonishing? West was thirty, he had a considerable fortune, he was beholden to no one, and he was ennuied. They were a highly conventional lot. Perhaps what he craved was the unusual. There was a queer streak in those three Dunbarton-Kents, Breck and Bella and West. West was showing his peculiarity for the first time. This little Canadian girl had caught his fancy, but it would take little to disgust a man as fastidious as West. He had announced his intentions plainly enough.

By that gift of flowers he had notified her that he meant to court Marie. It might or it might not be a short lived courtship; West required careful handling. For that matter, every Dunbarton-Kent did. That was why she had not been successful with the children of her husband's brothers. She was too downright and they were subtle. West and this child! What an utterly impossible combination!

"How old did you say you were?" she asked abruptly of Marie.

"Twenty-three, madam—but I am little."

"Well, never let yourself get fat. It's a curse. You've never had much illness, have you?"

"In my recollection I have had the mumps only. They were most disagreeable," Marie said with conviction.

"You told me you were at a convent—you've never been taught to keep a house, though, have you?"

Marie was pleased by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's interest.

"O, yes, madam! To keep a house was the first thing I learned. It was my father's wish and my good aunt in St. Felix taught me strictly how a house should be managed. Afterwards, with my father, I cared for his house and he praised me as neat and thrifty. And my aunt taught me how to sew beautifully. If you will permit me, I will make for you some of the lace which she taught me."

"Very well. Did you make that lace on your night dress?" In spite of her anxiety the night before Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had noticed the lace trimmed night dress. It was a beautifully formed little body she had divested of its mannish clothes, a soft skinned, well cared for body.

Marie smiled at Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent through her tangled lashes. "Yes, madam. There is some of it upon most of my lingerie. I like much soft and pretty things."

"A man's job hasn't made you dislike housekeeping?"

"O, no, madam! I want to earn enough that I may have a home. I should much prefer to do a woman's work than a man's work, only the pay is not so great."

"Men seem to enjoy facing the world alone, but there's never been a woman who did, whatever she may say about it," Mrs.

Dunbarton-Kent said with conviction. "Why haven't you married?" she demanded.

Though Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had buried her questions, Marie was not in the least discomposed; she was so certain that Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was prompted by kindness. "I think—perhaps because my mum has died—I think—perhaps because my mum has died—I think—perhaps because my mum has died—

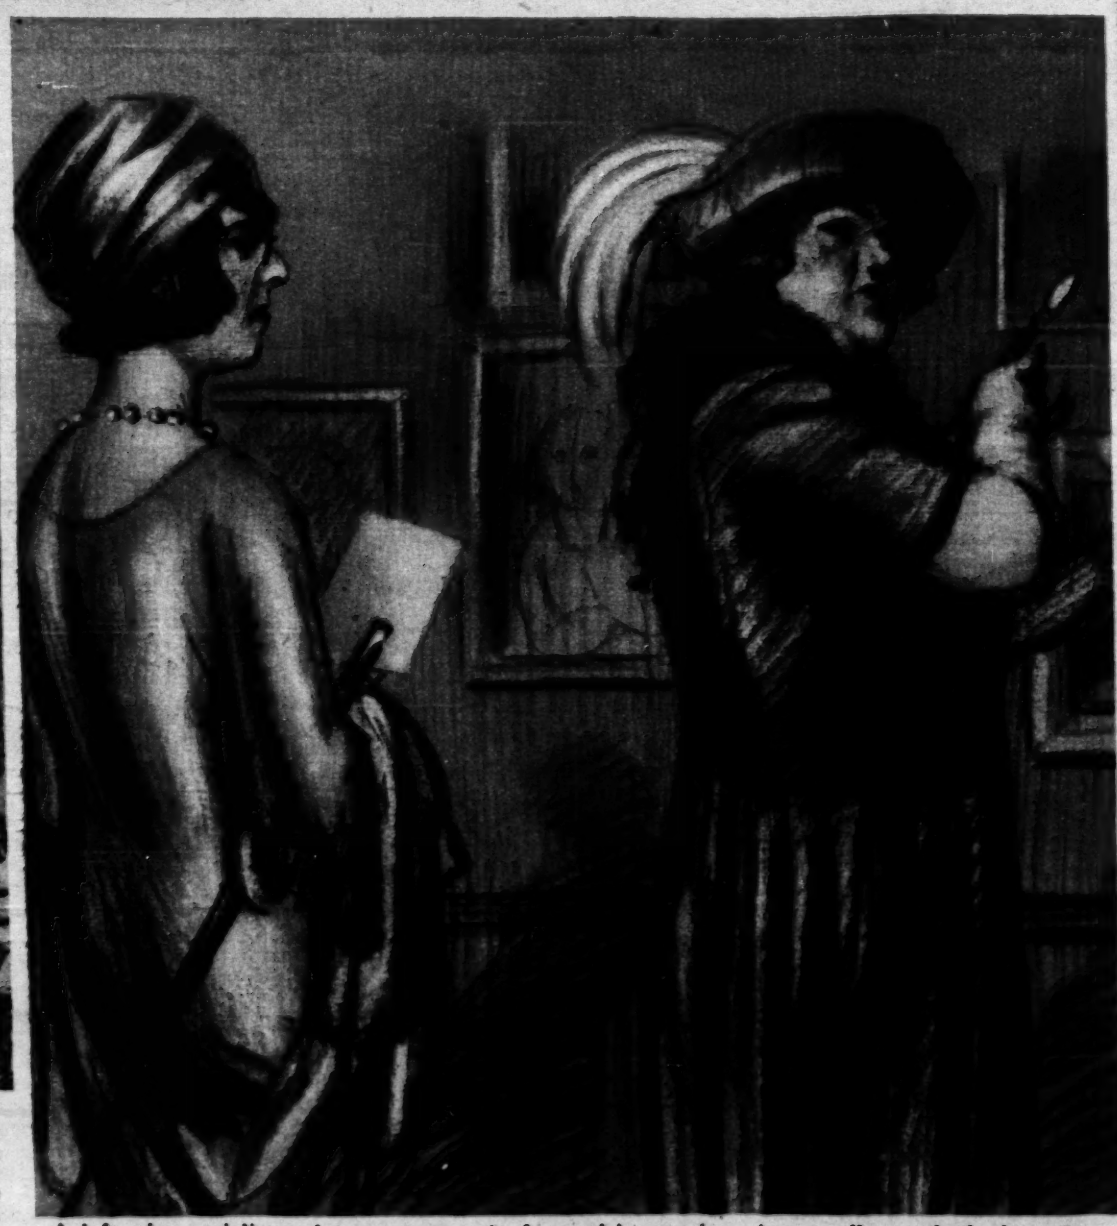
There are always tucked away in some corner of the city a small army of people who have reacted against their Puritan ancestry. They have come right out in the open and are leading their own lives, they will tell you, in the city, where nobody cares. Too much New England ancestry did it. (It took a lot of get-up-and-go for the young man on the extreme right to break away from the class consciousness of the grain business in Oswego, N. Y. Now he is a poet of the metronomic school and has directed several lyric shafts against the financier class.)

Herman, the headwaiter, from the standpoint of dollars and cents, is an expert at classifying the patrons of the Cafe de Fin and Haddie. After one brief but searching glance he will show the college boy and the Follies girl to a table alongside the dance floor, while the stoutish lady and gentleman from Flint, Mich., will be led around to the table way back next the pantry door. Herman is very class-conscious.



A left wing socialist and a member of the bougeoisie meet in a picture gallery and, oh, the scornful glances! If looks could kill certainly the lady with the paradise feather would be no more.

them, tore one man to pieces, and wounded four others. Then the rest of the men rushed in with their spears, piercing the gorilla through and through. The skin was so badly torn that it had not been preserved; Mr. Akeley was sorry not to get the skull.

He had some thought of stopping here and starting off towards those mountains for his gorillas, but the rumors about them were too conflicting and the distances too vague. It seemed wiser to keep on to the original objective, where the natives knew the gorilla range and had no superstition about hunting them.

We heard another story about gorillas from Monsieur Dargent, a Belgian administrator, on the little boat with us, going out to his post at Sake at the northwest end of the lake. He said that fourteen days' journey in the forest back of Sake there were gorillas which had so terrorized the natives that several villages had been abandoned. He had not seen the gorillas himself, but he had heard many stories from the natives.

This sounded like the good old demon gorilla of Du Chaillu's reports, which attacks man on sight and carries off woman. But Mr. Akeley was unshaken in his conviction of the animal's natural inoffensiveness towards man. I could see that a gorilla was going to have to treat him rough to make any impression.

And, of course, these were only native rumors, without any of the circumstances being given. It was perfectly possible that a food shortage had led the gorillas to prey upon the village shambas, and where men and gorillas were brought into collision over food there was no question but what the gorilla was a terrible antagonist. The great length of his huge arms gave him a tremendous reach and he was credited with being able to scoop out a man like a soft shell crab.

The question was, did he do this only in self-defense, or did he do it wantonly, and did he hunt man and attack him on sight? These were the questions on which we hoped for experience to throw a deciding light. A little time more now and we would put our luck to the test.

It was at Kantana that I began having the fever. Ever since entering the Congo it had been a question whether to take quinine regularly every day or not. Almost all Europeans in the interior took five grains a day on the theory that if you had enough quinine in your blood a stray bite wouldn't infect you, but there were others who did not take any at all until they felt ill. I rather liked that latter theory. I felt so supremely well that it seemed useless to take anything until I felt the need of it. I did give two and a half grains a day to Alice to make her doubly sure and Mr. Bradley and the two girls took their five grains each day, but I did not.

All I know is that I didn't take quinine and I did have the fever. And the same thing happened later to Mr. Akeley, who didn't take quinine regularly, while the others who did had none. That may not mean anything, but that is the way it happened.

I must have been bitten at Usumbura or on our march up from Tanganika, for Kivu is delightfully healthy and free from all mosquitoes and flies. Now, a small boat is no place in which to have the fever. We three Bradleys had our cots on the deck of the launch that night, while the others camped at the mission, and next day I huddled in my steamer chair, gazing heavily at the fairylike shores of Kivu, and thinking that if no one knew the difference between sunburn and a temperature of a hundred and four—it felt a hundred and forty!—I wouldn't enlighten them until I had to. The fever was accompanied by a headache, which grew positively thunderous, and when the real thunder broke over us—it came early that afternoon and caught us out on the lake—it seemed a mild echo of what was going on within.

The storm that day was a tremendous gust of wind and rain, and the ship's engine broke, so we rolled about helplessly until it consented to go on again. We were a drenched to the skin lot, in spite of raincoats, when we finally landed at Kissenyi, at the northeast end of the lake.

There, against the horizon, were the far, cloud wrapped peaks of our objective—Mikeno, Karissimbi, Vissoke. We were to camp at Kissenyi until we could collect porters, provisions, and information to go on. Kissenyi has the air of being quite a place. Along the shore runs an avenue, straight as a marine parade, shaded with eucalyptus and edged tidily with lava rock and shrubs. To the right were the clustering roofs of the native village and the soldiers' compound. There were two white families at Kissenyi, the administrator and his wife and the doctor and his wife. The doctor was a bacteriologist in charge of a laboratory investigating the rinderpest and other diseases. We had noticed their house coming in, a pretty one of brick in a lovely rose garden.

We pitched our tents in the dryest place possible, with the lake at our feet and the volcanic peaks all about the horizon. Our nearest neighbor, Chaninagongo, had a heavy cloud of steam overhanging the crater, colored with ruddy lights, but the crimson glow which burned in the sky at night came from Nyamlagira, many miles away.

Congo belles do not travel quite as luxuriously as did the Queen of Sheba or Cleopatra; they don't even insist on chairs.

The promised land.

That first night was all I saw of Kissenyi for some days, for I went to bed and had it out with the fever—and Monsieur Van Sacheghem, the bacteriologist, came twice a day and he and his charming wife did everything in the world for us, sending us eggs and butter and milk each day, and filling my tent with roses.

It was great good fortune to have him there, and it was a distinct relief when his blood tests told me I had only the regular African fever, from an infected mosquito, and not the kimpootoo, or spirillum fever, which comes from a tick bite, and is a recurrent blazem, often deadly, with great danger of paralysis. The kimpootoo is found chiefly on the caravan routes, brought in on the carriers' feet, and for that reason old camping grounds are not a bit desirable.

But even malaria isn't so cheery while it lasts, and I felt that it was no moment for the news which reached us—of a Belgian couple who had gone through the Congo just ahead of us, Dr. Deriddar and his wife. They had gone out to hunt on the Ruinidi plains, where we were going after we had finished with the gorillas, and there Monsieur Deriddar had died of the fever and his wife was lying desperately ill, mauled by a lion.

I made up my mind that if I lived through the fever I would avoid lions—at least avoid going into grass after them as Madame Deriddar had done. She had been finishing the hunt alone, after her husband had gone back to the camp, feeling the beginning of fever; she had come on several lions in a gully, had wounded three or four, who apparently made off, and in following them up she had been surprised by a wounded one, who sprang on her out of the grass. He had mauled her and then drawn back and she had had the pluck to get out her revolver and finish him.

I added to my good intentions the firm resolve to carry a revolver in lion country—and O, how poignantly I remembered that resolve one night upon the plains! But lion country or fever country or any country, I was going to take my five grains of quinine a day. I was utterably grateful that I had given it to Alice, who was blooming like a rose, playing on the sand on the beach—the only beach on Kivu—and keeping Miss Hall extremely busy with a violent little pastime called spearing gorillas, which she played with native spears.

We were very social, those days of waiting at Kissenyi. While our friends at home were doubtless picturing us as sweltering in some lonely, pestilential jungle, we were enjoying a climate of June's loveliest, untroubled by flies or mosquitoes, and going to tea at the administrator's and to dinner at the doctor's in true European style!

We had another neighbor who had been more than kind during my illness, a young Englishwoman, Mrs. T. Alexander Barns, the wife of an English hunter and collector. She was waiting at Kissenyi for her husband to come down from the mountains, where he had gone for gorillas for a group for the British museum.

Odd that two men, one for an American institution, one for an English, should have happened on the same spot in central Africa for the same purpose at the same time! Mrs. Barns and I hoped, humorously, but fervently, that there would be enough gorillas to go round!

And the accounts which came down the mountain of the cold and nettles and crawling on hands and knees made us realize that this was not exactly child's play on which we were engaged. I don't wonder that every one in the country thought the determination of women to see wild gorillas was distinct lunacy. But crawl or climb, Martha Miller and I were going on with it. We had not come the long trail to be turned back now, and if we had no chance on the mountains Herbert promised he would take the fourteen day trek to Wadikali to the gorillas Monsieur Dargent had told us about.

But our greatest sociability in camp came from our native visitors. Rwakadiga, the chief of Kissenyi, was an inveterate caller. Every morning, just the busiest moment of it, I would see the long procession of spears headed for the tents, Rwakadiga and his attendants in the lead. Then I would snatch at my phrase book of Swahili—an almost universal language—and scan it hurriedly in the hope of injecting something in the nature of conversation into the ensuing call.

My book was a hopeless affair. It abounded in such sterile offerings as "The foreigner has not received his canoes. . . . The wizard has cheated the ten simpletons of their spoons. . . . My blister is not your boil." But I had added more useful gleanings to it, so that I was able to conduct a strictly centralized series of remarks concerning my desire to buy the skins of animals and small, clean, and beautiful baskets.

The chief would head for the first tent, shared by Alice and me, and we would come out and shake hands ceremoniously with him. In the Congo you shake hands with a chief, a double clasp, first the hands, then the thumbs.

"Jambo, mamma" ("Greeting, mother"), was his speech.

"Jambo, mfalme" ("Greeting, chief"), was mine.

I was mamma to all the natives, except the tent boys, who said miss indiscriminately. Father is different in the different languages, but mamma is the same, Africa over.

We had had some idea that the natives might think our party rather oddly composed, but not at all. It was simplicity itself to them. I was the wife with the child. And they did not think it strange that I should travel with the child—we were evidently in favor and if I left the sultana at home the other wives would naturally poison

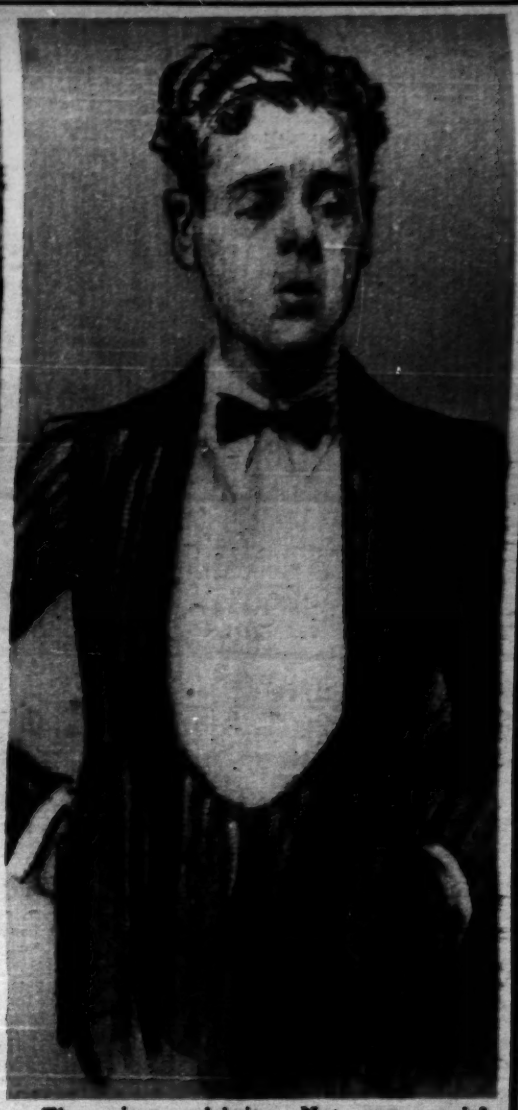
Between city people and country people there is an awful gap. And when two of the summer boarders (they are a crazy lot anyway) turn out to be artists from Greenwich Village—well, something ought to be done about it!



The minor celebrity. Not any special class, but all classes are the foes of the minor celebrity. Somewhat of an egoist, he wants all society to act as his background.

One of the hardest stunts in the struggle for supremacy is the uphill climb of the ambitious lady with plenty of coin of the realm, but absolutely no connections, or worse than none. At times it does seem as though "keep out" were the motto of the people at the top of the social ladder. Pause a moment and pity Mrs. Peter Holcomb (they called her Lou Holcomb out Little Rock way). She is all set for a nice bow in the direction of some one with whom it is quite necessary to be on bowing terms. Mrs. Holcomb will bow, oh, so sweetly, and the lady at the other end will look straight through Mrs. Holcomb and never move a muscle.

The oldest inhabitant, who still believes in an upper middle class and a lower middle class. She won't invite any one to her house who hasn't been in the social register for the last fifty years. So class-conscious it positively hurts.

Lady engaging a maid, and trying, oh, so hard to bridge the awful gap that exists between a cook and the so-called lady of the house.

The traveling man who forgot to wire ahead has been struggling manfully but unsuccessfully all the afternoon with seven room clerks of seven hotels. Each clerk is just a little bit haughtier than the one before, and if at 6:30 p. m. you were to ask the t. m. to divide the existing social order into classes (not that you would for a minute) he would say, "Upper, lower and hotel room clerks"—the room clerks being at the head of the column.

On the GORILLA TRAIL

Discovered—The Home Town of Jazz! It's a Village at the Very Summit of Africa, and the Proper Dancing Costume Is a Goatskin!

THIRD INSTALLMENT.
The Most Beautiful Place in All Africa.

WE stood on a hill top overlooking Lake Kivu, feeling we were looking at last upon the promised land.

For months we had dreamed of seeing this lake, reported the most beautiful place in Africa. It was the last to be discovered of the large central African lakes—rumors of its existence had been brought to Livingstone at Ujiji by Arab slavers, but the first accurate knowledge of it was obtained in 1894 by Count Grotzen, who visited its northern end. We were the first Americans to reach its shores.

All that day we had climbed endlessly, higher and higher over the last great barrier of mountains. We had crossed the pastoral basins on the highlands, an African Switzerland, where we wound among grassy slopes dotted with hundreds of native cattle, picturesque black and white creatures, with wide branching horns; past lush marshes, where the goldon crested crane were preening, past shambas of bananas rustling their suave fronds—an upland paradise for the dwellers in the little grass huts—then on, up and down and up again in switchback progress among the hills.

They are everlasting, those hills which surround Kivu, and they are extraordinary. They are grass grown, innocent of forest or deforesting, curving crests of velvet softness between the shadowy mountains and the gleaming lake.

Kivu has a beauty like nothing I have known. And I saw it first in a moment of sheer magic—a black storm cloud scudding across the lake with a purple drive of rain into waters that every answering gleam of storm and sky—purple and jade and peacock blue against a silver mist of cloud shot with rainbows and beyond the storm, sunshine—sunshine ineffably tender, ineffably radiant, shining upon those fairy hills and enchanted mountains.

The lake is the very summit of Africa, almost five thousand feet above the sea. To the north the country drains into Lake Edward and so to the Nile, to the east into Victoria Nyanza, to the west into the Congo basin, and the waters of the lake itself rush out south through the Rusisi river down to Tanganyika.

The lake is deep, over two thousand feet in places, and there is not a crocodile in it. We went down to the southeastern end, to Changugu, and sent a runner for the little launch, which was across at Bukavu.

Changugu is simply one of the tiny outposts that keep the white man's way open—a garrison of about twenty soldiers and a Belgian officer. But Changugu was more than that. It was a home. It was Lieutenant Keyser and Madame Keyser and their little son, Jean-Jean. They received this astonishing invasion with such cordial hospitality that our cook took a complete vacation and the children played so happily—despite the difficulties of language—that when the launch came, the gasoline having providentially arrived, they parted with frank tears.

An African State street. The native market of Usumbura, on Lake Tanganyika, during the rush hours.

This is the tree beneath which Stanley "discovered" Livingstone in 1871. It is four miles from Kigoma, on the east shore of Lake Tanganyika.

The launch had space for our luggage in the hold, our boys in the bow, and our steamer chairs under cover at the back. We were three days upon it, for the captain traveled only in the morning on account of the storm, which came each afternoon. It was the last of October now, the height of the fall rains.

The first day we tied up at Bukavu, on the southwestern shore, and camped upon the banks. The rain did not come until late and all afternoon the native women danced before our tents. They danced in a half circle, advancing, receding, swaying, clapping, all to monotonous singsong of weird chants, while the few men who danced did a muscular solo performance before them.

It was jazz in its own home town. It was not the shimmy, but it was a recognizable toddle, and there were some other things that even our younger set haven't discovered yet. There was one little offering entitled "The Dance of the Young Girls," which I piously hope was misnamed, for half the participants joggled through it with totos slung in a goat skin on their backs. They were not enticing looking young girls and they were clumsy appearing in the goat skins they wore bunched about their waists out of deference to European ideas. They were the Wania-Bongo. But there was one remarkable woman, a visitor, the wife of the cannibal chief, Kabaka, one of the Waregga.

She was of royal blood herself, the wife who gave the chief his heir, they said, and she was certainly the most royal looking creature I saw in Africa, with the lines of a Greek statue and the perfect aplomb of one, too. She discarded her goat skins and appeared in her royal regalia of copper armlets and leg rings, with beaded necklaces, and a trifle of girdle. Her skin was not black, but a gorgeous coppery brown, and she had the carriage which is supposed to belong to a duchess, but which is really the perquisite of carrying a huge water jar in calm balance on your head all your life.

And she had filed teeth. It is denied that cannibalism exists now to any extent among the natives, but I heard that day of a village back of the mountains which had made a raid upon another village and in the moment of excited triumph consumed its natives—and in the light of that information I looked upon all filed teeth with a certain gruesome interest. At the least they were a symbol of the good old days!

Fifteen years ago, a Congo administrator told me, he used to see slaves destined for eating led from hut to hut for prospective purchasers to chalk out upon the living flesh the particular cut they desired. Of course that was only in certain tribes and it was fifteen years ago, and where the white man has power it is finished. But back of the mountains is still black man's Africa, and little can really be known of what goes on there.

It was the business of the young agent territorial at Bukavu, Monsieur Massart, to travel from tribe to tribe, sometimes for months at a time, visiting the chiefs, persuading the refractory, strengthening the bonds of peace, personifying with all his power that vague but persuasive thing, the white man's administration.

He invited us to accompany him and I would have dearly loved it, but there were the gorillas to get and Mr. Akeley's time was limited. So on we went with the boat next morning and stopped that night at the Katana, a mission of the White Fathers, high on a hill on the western shore. Here we got the story of the gorilla invasion which had occurred just two weeks before.

For the first time in the memory of the mission the gorillas had come down from the forests on the mountains and had entered the plantations of the natives, where the natives found them in the morning busily feeding.

Now, that tribe has a superstition against killing a "man-ape," believing that the man who does so will have childless daughters and that his son's wife will lose her son, so the men were chary about attacking the invaders. They tried first to drive them off with drums and shouts, and then at the chief's orders went in and tried to scare them off with sticks.

The female did make off, apparently, at their approach, but the male turned on

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—While just the ordinary clients have been flitting around the fashion salons and millinery houses of Paris during the last month, bewildered by the marvelous variety of modish things for the spring and summer, society and stage leaders have quietly selected their fashions and there no longer remains a question of what is the thing to wear.

The generally fashionable things have been fixed just like that, for, whether the average woman means to or not, she will inevitably be drawn to those shapes and styles which are worn by the most famous women of the land. It is they who are most seen in the fashionable places, and what they wear both in gowns and millinery is naturally above question as to modishness. The rest follows just like the cycle of the seasons. Hence it is that, with the leading ladies of France now in actual possession of their new spring hats, what to wear ceases to be an uncertainty.

The only little irritation is that even with the models properly set before the feminine world there is such a variety of correct things the seeker of fashion may be the victim of indecision when confronted with the dazzling array of chapeaux, each of which, the proud maker will tell you, is the original of the one now being worn by some woman whose name is known the world around for her art or social position. It remains then for us to select the woman we most admire and take from her collection the ideas that best suit our liking. And ideas, alone, they will be, for the designers of Paris hats aren't in the habit of selling exact counterparts of things they furnish to the women who fix the fashions. Nevertheless, the styles themselves are for all the women who choose to adopt them.

There is one place among the many in Paris where this process of outfitting famous women has been going on with a vim these capricious spring days past, and now that a large part of it has been completed, Lewis, the proprietor, is having his annual thrill of pride, knowing that his creations are being talked about in every country of Europe and lands beyond the seas as well.

To begin with, he showed me a fascinating hat from among the popular small shapes for the coming season which had found the favor of Mlle. Cecile Sorel of the Comedie-Francaise, one of France's most renowned stage artists. The material in this one of many hats for Mlle. Sorel is known as "satin soleil." It has a little visor of turquoise silk across which is a huge jade beetle with filmy wings. A huge cockade of burned chanticleer feathers completes the dainty little confection, which, when worn by the widely admired stage beauty, will become a model for scores of fashionable women.

There are the stream lines of a graceful airplane or motor boat in the red raffia model which is among the nicest of the vast lot of spring hats selected from the Lewis salons by Mlle. Germaine Gallois of the Theater du Gymnase. In fact, the whole creation is shaped like the prow of a boat, narrowing to a point in the back. The band, almost as high as the crown itself, extends backward and flares into two outward curved points which give it such graceful lines. Little triangular pieces of red silk inset in the crown help the stream line illusion along.

Incidentally raffia is being used for the first time this year in hats and is immensely liked. It can be first made into a delicately meshed shape, after which the figures and designs are worked out by hand in coarser strands, which have a glistening appearance not obtainable in ordinary straws. In its many variations raffia is being used not only in hats but as embroidery, fringe, and a score of other dress trimmings.

Mlle. Gaby Morlay of the Theatre des Capucines has borrowed a little bit of Egypt and something of Rome in one toque she chose from the house of Lewis. It has a foundation of black timbol straw, molded into such a shape that it has a suggestion of an ancient Roman helmet worn sidewise. In other words, there is a sharp little ridge running across the crown and giving a most interesting profile view. A scarf of silk in the rich "bleu de roi" is wrapped closely in front with a variation of the Egyptian winged disc in jade, with a center medallion bearing an Egyptian head in red enamel. There is a bit of yellow, too, in the design to carry out the colorings of the land of the Nile.

Among the larger shapes, which, with the tiny toques and turbans have a monopoly on public favor for spring and summer, there is a wonderful confection selected by Mme. Baletta of the Theater des Varietes. Its large brim is of that new oval shape which droops slightly at the sides and forms fine, curved lines in front and back. The shape is of black lisere straw, one of the many new things in this material, and there is a narrow binding of red which also is almost wholly lined beneath with the same deep shade of red. The only garnishment of the crown is a large cocarde of forget-me-nots and geraniums laid on a background of geranium leaves.

Departing from stage celebrities for the moment, it might be said that among social and diplomatic circles in Paris the Countess Sforza, wife of the Italian ambassador to France, is considered one of the best dressed women of the capital. Thus her choice of hats was an interesting subject upon which to question M. Lewis. He exhibited one of her most recent choices, which also followed the small shape preferment. It is an excellent example, too, of the extensive use that is being made of lace in seasonable hats.

The shape is an ingenious creation of lace with a deep band of roses in jade silk. And about the chic little headdress is wound an exquisite length of black silk lace, which falls in a drape to the floor, or can be caught up and attractively used as a scarf.

The well loved Mistinguett of the Casino de Paris, another of the famous women whose hats were shown me, has one so out of the ordinary that it deserves to be put into the collection from sheer novel attractiveness. It is unusual in both color, trimming, and its effect, which conjure up visions of mellow summer afternoons and ripe harvest fields with poppies gleaming among the waving grain. The shape is of the larger type, and the wide brim, like that of the one shown before, is oval and daintily dropped. The entire shape is of airplane silk in a rich yellow. Even the wide band, plaited and closely sewn on, is of the same material. Then, across the top of the crown, there are sprays of ripe rye, drooping downward to the brim, and the harvest illusion is completed by blossoms here and there over the crown and brim in red, green, and yellow, a great deal like those that bloomed in grandmother's garden in late summer days.

Colors in millinery have run absolutely riot. There is that deep pink or geranium shade which came out early in the season and which holds its popularity in spite of the fact that every little shop window is a blaze of hats in the shade at prices to fit all purses. Usually when such extensive copying is done the original and genuine fad disappears and leaves the imitators stranded, but such has not yet been the case with the geranium shade.

Then there are yellows, the ever popular rust browns and deep reds, violet and jade hues, which make veritable flower gardens of every millinery salon in Paris.

The Riviera season, which is now on the wane, showed a preference, especially among English women, for white felt, close fitting, and plainly trimmed hats. With the much liked jersey outing dresses which were everywhere on the Côte d'Azur, clever little toques of astrakhan straw were seen again and again.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG U.S. PAT. OFF.

TESS ROUTS A BURGLAR.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"WELL, if I were you I'd cut out white bread, and I wouldn't eat a grain of sugar or a bit of potato," said Tess Bone Guff as she drew her tiny needle through a dainty garment.

"Yes, I suppose I ought to diet," sighed Mrs. Lover. "But, O, I do so love potato!"

"Well, if you keep on eating potato you'll get so fat you can hardly waddle," said Tess.

"I wouldn't mind a bit giving up pickles—I detest them," cried Mrs. Lover as she threaded her tiny needle with the finest of spider web thread. "But potatoes, my dear—they are so good."

The little ladies sewed in silence for some time. The Lover twins had been put to bed, Mr. Lover was attending a directors' meeting at the hospital, and the little women were quite alone.

"I think the Lady of Fashion is silly not to bob her hair," said Tess. "She'd look stunning with it bobbed. I was telling her this——" A loud scratching sound came from one of the bedrooms on the floor above.

"What's that?" asked Tess, looking toward the tiny stairway.

"O, I suppose it's one of the twins," answered Mrs. Lover. "I'll go up and see what's the matter."

The little mother laid her sewing aside, and disappeared up the stairs.

Presently there were loud screams, and Mrs. Lover came down the stairs almost at one jump and landed sitting down on the floor of the tiny living room at the feet of the astonished Tess.

"What in the name of peace is the matter?" cried Tess, jumping to her feet.

"Thieves! Robbers!" cried the frightened little woman. "T-T-There's a big black pinching bug trying to break through the window! Run for help!"

"Just hold your horses and don't get excited," cried Tess, "and I'll fix that bug. No pinchin' bug can come pokin' around here while I'm about," and, running into the tiny kitchen, Tess picked up a rolling pin and started for the stairway.

"O, don't go up there, he'll kill you!" gasped Mrs. Lover as Tess made for the stairs.

"I'm not afraid of any old bug," shouted Tess. "I'll give him such a rap with this pin he'll wish he'd never been born."

As Tess disappeared up the stairway Mrs. Lover threw open one of the windows and let her tiny voice out on the night air in shrieks for help. The men at the hospital heard her cries, and, dashing toward the Lovers' home, they were just in time to see Tess lean out of the window and club a pinching bug over the head.

"Get out of here, you ugly, good for nothing sneak!" Tess yelled, and she struck the bug such a blow she knocked him from the roof to the ground, where he took wing and flew rapidly off into the night.

All the Teenie Weenies under the rose bush had heard Mrs. Lover's shouts, and soon the excited little folks were gathered around the tiny bungalow. Everybody praised Tess for her bravery, but that little lady seemed to think she had done but little.

"Well, any time a pinchin' bug scares me, he's got to be some bug," said the little heroine. "All I ask is to have a good rollin' pin handy, and I'll tend to the robbers."

All the Teenie Weenies were quite worked up over the fight with the bug, and it was late before the excitement died down and the lights were put out for the night.

LOOKING FORWARD TO RESORT DAYS

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Last spring a woman who did not wear a cape was apt to feel quite a bit like a zebra without stripes. It was an integral part of her personality. And in this whole hearted pledging of her allegiance she almost forgot that once upon a time there was a wrap known as a coat.

This present May conditions have changed. The cape is assuredly with us and particularly as demonstrated in the cape costume. Fifth avenue is still a-flutter with all kinds and conditions of the picturesque sleeveless garment. But more and more we find the separte coat claiming the attention of the fashionable. Indeed, one must never forget that many of these new double barreled costumes are completed, not by the popular cape but by a coat.

So appealing are most of these new coats that many a woman who last year lived in a black crepe de chine will move into one of the new black crepe de chine coats. These, by the way, are often made extremely simple, in token of which one points to a Madeleine et Madeleine model collared in many plaited ruffles of the same material, which reach to the bottom of the full length coat. Most of the designers look with favor upon those enveloping coats, but there are others—notably Jenny—who seem to believe that brevity is the soul of a coat. At all events, we find three-quarter coats of crepe de chine trimmed perhaps with a deep band of lace accompanying simple little frock of the same fabric.

As a last word on the subject, we may say that for the feet of garments known as a costume during this present season there are available two selections. You may choose a cape or you may choose a coat. This is true not only of the irrepressible crepe costume but of the modish foulard ones. Thus, instead of the serge cape which many creators affix to their foulards, you may have a long coat of serge or other plain fabric lined, as is the cape, with the dress silk. Unless you are the kind of woman who cannot eat a caramel without a chill of apprehension, you will probably look your best in the cape. For nothing is more becoming to the slim sister than these fluttering, unfettered folds. But it must be said that if you wish to be absolutely in step with the moment, the coat represents wisdom. For it is the last cry of the day.

Of course, the crepe has never made any great inroads upon motoring wear. But certainly these motoring coats have never displayed a greater variety of treatment. Above at the left we show for summer motoring wear a natural color pongee trimmed in embroidered bands of natural and white silk in a Russian design. The buttons, covered with self-material, are bordered in white. With this is worn a close fitting hat of soft white silk embroidered in tan and white and apple green.

As for the heavier motor coats, tweed seems to come first to the mind of most designers, and often suede or leather is the complement of such a garment. The tweeds are often unlined, and they are more inclined to a goodly circumference of skirt than are the other types of coat. Thus one significant model from Bernard made of brown tweed hangs in voluminous folds that suggest the circular. This model has its choker collar inset with the same undressed tan leather outlining the pockets and forming gigantic cuffs, which are strapped through the middle.

In both the pongee and the heavy fabric coats for sports and general wear there is a wide utilization of the scarf. This, in either self or contrasting fabric, is fastened about the throat in lieu of a collar, and one end is then permitted to dangle. Another illustration of scarf activity is furnished by Worth in a coat of woolen material which provides the desirable uneven hem line by a wide scarf of the coat fabric that goes around the shoulders and drops several inches below the coat itself. This mode is one which has been successfully applied to several new pongee coats.

HOLDING up traffic standards of dress—this is what is done by the motor coat of natural pongee with bands of embroidery in Russian design executed in heavy silk of white and natural color. With this goes a close fitting silk hat, also in white, which is embroidered in tan, white, and apple green. Next, a summer wrap of platinum gray crepe romaine lined with the same color crepe de chine elects platinum fox for its collar. That some organdies are gifted with a silver lining is demonstrated by the Dresden blue organdy with its silver cloth foundation and its bands of silver ribbon attached by white beads. Last, a frock of knitted white silk is trimmed with bands of magenta knitted silk and large button ornaments of oxidized silver.*

Second from the left we find a charming gray crepe romaine cape, which may be worn fearlessly any summer afternoon. It certainly has a deep rooted conviction of the excellence of gray, for the same color crepe de chine achieves the lining, while platinum fox is the fur selected.

In connection with the crepe costume one must mention the fact that quite often the dress which accompanies the wrap is so simple that it makes Simple Simon look designing as Machiavelli. A plain little thing with either bateau or deep V neck line, it often exists without one ray of trimming. The short cape is the recipient of all the trimming attention, for fox or caracus or agnella alternate with embroidery of either beads or silk to make fetching these little outer garments. And, by the way, many of them are just barely hip length.

Next to this is found one of the new organdies without which the summer will be wasted. It is a blue organdy—this—and was inspired by Lanvin, who seems to have discovered that organdy is as much entitled to a silver lining as any cloud that blows. The fact of it is that a few of the Lanvin organdies combined with silver are so beautiful we have to believe in fairies. For example, over a silver cloth foundation she drapes one light blue organdy. The foundation of this is quite short, but the organdy repents of this transgression by coming to the ankles—even below. Bands of the same silver tissue are subsequently attached to the organdy by means of small white china beads, and the last touch comes from a cluster of multi-colored organdy flowers at the girdle.

It looks now as if the knitted garment would be a difficult thing to keep away from. For as the season advances this system of attire has been brought more and more to the foreground of our consciousness. As a matter of fact, these knitted things have a value quite apart from their present vogue. At the seashore the dress or suit of this material is particularly advantageous, for, of course, it never needs be pressed. The white models are particularly attractive for resort wear, and we are showing today a dress of knitted silk in white with a panel of magenta knitted silf inset at the top of the sleeves and down the front. Large button ornaments of oxidized silver are the completing touch.

CLOSEUPS OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST BEAUTY

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Were you to inscribe an ode to the one most impelling force in a reputation as the most beautiful woman in the world, you would direct it to Miss Katherine MacDonald's lovely eyes. In the initial stage of my search for the world's greatest beauty, I was directed repeatedly to gaze into her illustrious orbs and end my search right there.

They are eyes that lend themselves wholesomely to the muse for fine poetic description. Like purple pansies they are soft, velvety, large, expressive luminaries; but designed for seeing, just as eyes within which lies no such glowing inspiration.

And so, having gazed and marveled at their loveliness, I asked the famous beauty the secret of their healthfulness. And learned of no magic potion nor any particular element of care.

The Gift of the Gods.

"You have to have the strongest eyes in the world," she told me, "to work in pictures. The lights are deadly. I must have been born with the strength, for I have never had a grain of trouble nor used an eyewash. And every night I read in bed, as that is about the only time for reading. But I am particular about having a bed light adjusted so that the light comes over my left shoulder, and the light is shaded."

Normal, healthy eyes need no ablutions other than that given with the daily rinse after the face wash. Only when strain begins to be felt should one resort to boracic acid solutions. And one might reasonably judge that eyes beautiful in color and shape are purely gifts of the gods. One cannot change them

Shading Away Gracefully.

With eyebrows it is different. One may be scantily endowed and one may be overindulged, and yet by clever artifice remold the fine short hairs into a most artistic line.

In real life Miss Katherine's eyebrows, in my opinion, are of much lovelier architecture than when prepared for the screen. They shade away gracefully just at the outer edge of the eyelid. Perhaps it is necessary in making up for the screen to exaggerate every feature; at any rate, the line is extended just a trifle too far to be natural. This gives an air of artificiality in the photographs taken in the screen rôles.

Au naturel- they do not need any retouching. They are at least two shades darker than her hair, and, by contrast, appear even darker, which gives character to her brow and eyes. Her lashes, too, are dark like her brows. Her eyebrows are not pulled or tweezed into the hair line of the flapper maid, and consequently they suffer not that hardened sophistry of the boulevard vamp.

Commenting on this Miss MacDonald said, "Young girls all have the same pulled eyebrows, the same rouged cheeks, the same scarlet lips; their only distinction is a distinct commonness."

Promoting Their Growth.

Plain yellow vaseline and a tiny eyebrow brush are given credit by this beautiful woman for her finely arched browns. Every day—often twice and sometimes thrice—they get attention. It depends upon how often the make-up goes on and comes off. But the tiny brush is dipped into vaseline, and the line of eyebrow followed cleverly. "This has promoted their growth," she confessed, "and it has trained them into the way they should go."

On the street she never uses any darkening artifice. For picture work she does. Her eyelashes are brushed with the vaseline, too, and perhaps their luxuriant growth may be in part attributed to the practice. The eyelash makeup required on the screen is never carried outside her studio work; consequently, the great beauty of Miss MacDonald's eyes is their freedom from theatrical effect.

Thinks Hands Never Lie.

Miss MacDonald waxes eloquent on the subject of hands. Studying hands is her favorite form of character analysis.

"I observe hands first. I do believe I form a photographic impression of the hands of every person I meet. They speak of character. We have the power to conceal our thoughts, and eyes may lie—but hands never."

Perhaps that is why hers are so beautifully kept. They are artist's hands, extremely graceful, slender, and shapely, with long tapering, pink nailed fingers. I had the pleasure of seeing them busily at work on an exquisite beaded bag. There's something fascinating about lovely hands engaged in needlework. I remember being perfectly enthralled with admiration for a pair I saw on a car during war times, plying wool and knitting needles into a soldier's sweater.

This particular bag, Miss MacDonald told me, was a duplicate of a $40 one. She proudly announced to me she would have hers for less than $10. This is one of her favorite pastimes. She has made a number of smart silk and beaded bags for her family and friends. She claims to be a good seamstress, too. All of which, somehow, adds much to the beauty of her hands. You, too, have seen hands that are perfectly molded according to the most exacting standards, white and handsomely manicured, which remind you of nothing so much as a vapid, empty doll face. To be truly beautiful hands must have a touch of the practical within their grasp. Character, that's what they must have.

Manicuring Is Simple.

"I have always been rather proud of keeping my hands in good shape," said this most beautiful of women. "It has just grown into a habit which I acquired young. I never used to be able to afford manicures, so had to learn how to care for them myself. Which is simple enough matter, after all. Now, I have a manicure every week, and aside from the practice of pushing back the cuticle with the towel after every hand washing and using a buffer lightly I do nothing. In winter I get attacks of applying a hand lotion, but I do not find the need of that much out here where we have no winter to speak of."

In summing up the general care and beauty preservation methods of Miss MacDonald, one finds no new departure nor startling discoveries, unless one might call the practical observance of the simplest and most inexpensive methods of personal hygiene to be startling in one of such rare beauty.

That First Love Affair

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My Puppy Love Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE TRIALS OF YOUTH.

On my fourteenth birthday they fished me out of a bathing beach with just enough life left to make it worth while running for the pulmotor. All of which would have been of little moment had it not been for the mirror in the bathhouse and the presence of Rol, my 15 year old beloved.

Rol and I were madly in love, or thought we were, and my only thorn in those rosy high school days was freckles. Horrible affliction, I secretly mourned, that an otherwise pretty girl, adored by the handsomest boy in town, should be tortured by ugly brown blotches. I doubt if people who have lived through real tragedy suffered more than I did in those nights when I lay awake wondering what would happen if Rol should stop his endearments long enough to give me a critical looking over. I powdered, rouged, used blistering cosmetics. But the little brown pigments continued to thrive.

I was so sensitive about those freckles that I wept if any one teased me and I believe I should have died if Rol had ever mentioned them. The summers at the beach were a joy and a terror. Rol and I had glorious times swimming, but it was a wicked sun that shown down upon my complexion, camouflaged though it was beneath the prettiest of bathing caps.

Then came the day when I got out too far, lost my nerve, and went down. When I came to they were carrying me in front of a bath house mirror. I had the merest glimpse but it was enough: A lanky creature swathed in a green blanket; wet, stringy hair drawn back from her face; skin alabaster white, with freckles standing out like buttons, and Rol, carrying the head end of the stretcher, gazing down.

At home the tears of my mother, the hushed voices of brothers and sisters, the messages of friends concerned me not at all. It was those horrible brown things I had seen in the mirror that haunted me, and always in the background Rol looking down. When I could endure it no longer I wrote him a note and sealed it tight. I owned miserably to my defects, and I remember assuring him over and over that freckles gradually faded as you got older, so that in a few years you didn't have any. Then I waited, tense, for his reply.

I have his letter yet, but it is too sacred to copy. The little girl was not to worry because, of course, he had noticed she had just a few tiny freckles around her nose. He liked 'em. Anyway, that was nothing compared with what was the matter with him. Hadn't I noticed that his grandfather was the fattest man in town, and didn't every one say that he was the image of his grandfather, and wouldn't he be so fat some day that I would quit loving him? He could hardly sleep nights.

But I slept that night, the blissful sleep of a girl who is in love, or thinks she is, and knows that all is well. My prophesy was right, too. The freckles have faded with the years. And, for that matter, Rol was not far wrong. He is rapidly catching up with his grandfather as a fat man. But Rol and I are just as devoted as we were at 14 and 15, and a lot more sensible. Freckles and fat make no difference to us.

THE BEST DREAM OF ALL.

MY SWEETHEART: I have read your letter over and over, and now that I know it by heart, I know, too, that you are dearer to me than ever before—if such a thing be possible. I think I understand what it has cost you to tell me all you have. I believe I do realize what it is for a woman like you to love. I have had and felt more rapture crowded into one brief hour this day than in ten years of hopes and dreams. I don't want you ever to be sorry in your life for one single moment that you have given your heart into my keeping. As write you thus forever. I shall see you, I trust, in three days. Until then my life will be a dream, and that dream the sweetest woman in all this world.

JOHN.

HALSTED ST. COR. ROOSEVELT ROAD
"A Famous Store on a Famous Street"

Prosperous times are the fruits of hard work. Any nation, any community, any business organization will be prosperous in proportion to its ability "to get down to business," work diligently and perform a real service. We believe the community's prosperity, as well as our own, will be increased by our ability to offer greater savings than ever. To give the Chicago public greater values means a greater buying response, which in turn calls for more goods to be manufactured, which results in more employment for workmen. Thus is the "cycle of prosperity" well founded. Moreover, to save means to prosper; and when you save on these big values, you prosper. Don't miss our "Greater Prosperity Sale."

COOKING WITH MUSHROOMS.

I DO not profess to be an authority on mushrooms. I advise any one who cannot first go gathering with some one who does know what mushrooms are safe to buy them per can, and buy these when they are as fresh as possible, and then give them careful attention, perhaps with a magnifying glass. But it is true that some mushrooms are near to manna. They have been mostly enjoyed by peasant and king, or, today, by the poorest and the richest, and a class between, which we may call the intelligent.

In spite of the suspicions the crowd entertain concerning the mushroom, it is used constantly in fine cookery. There is hardly a creamed thing, from chicken and scallops to sweetbreads and halibut, that is not improved by the mushroom. In a thrifty country like France the thrifty epicure has been able to buy one mushroom for his tidbit, perhaps to be served in a scallop shell. And the Italian peasant makes the least expensive of his preparations into a savory elegance by the help of the mushroom. We eat mushrooms, too. It is said that more than 35,000,000 pounds of edible mushrooms were imported into our country during the five years preceding 1914, and, besides this, there was a vast output by our own growers and quantities of wild species were consumed. Many a mushroom growing business starts in a small cellar and grows into great proportions.

Primitive Cooking of Mushrooms.

The mushroom is, to the intelligent factory hand living by a prairie, what the scallop and clam are to the country people of the seacoast. The fresh picked mushroom has received no other cooking in such homes often than a roasting on the hot stove cover—butter to finish not always to be had.

Fried Mushrooms.

Wash, peel, and gently fry mushrooms in a little butter—not enough to make them greasy. It is necessary to cook them gently, otherwise the water which cook out will be dried up. It contains a large part of the flavor. Add to it, when it has exuded with the cooking, a little hot cream, cook a minute, and serve on toast.

Mushroom Seasoning.

Chop four tablespoons of mushrooms—stems will do for all or part—after one tablespoon of chopped onion has been cooked in a tablespoon of butter. Add the mushrooms and a bit of salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Cook gently until dry, but in bowl, cover with buttered paper, and keep until wanted. This may be added to a sauce of any thickness and any strength from the thick, strong condensed dark gravy to the light chicken gravies, and even the white sauce. When added to sauce made of a white meat stock the whole is called Duxelle.

Mushroom Seasoned Baked Tomatoes.

The quantity of mushroom seasoning given in the above recipe is enough for the large halves of two tomatoes prepared thus: Cut two large tomatoes in half, squeeze them gently, but not enough to change their shape; then put them on a buttered tin. Bake until they are half done, or until juice shows on the top, then take out and spread with the mixture of minced and fried mushrooms. Grate a crust of bread over them, add bits of butter, and put in oven to finish. These are elegant enough to serve for a garnish for a larded tenderloin or anything of the sort.

Blanching Mushrooms.

It is my own opinion that the scalding of mushrooms is an excellent precaution. It is often hard to wash them clean, and the scalding cleanses them. They are even improved for broiling, as well as for baking, by being scalded. Authorities believe the poisonous principle is extremely soluble in boiling water, but this is no reason for being careless. Mushrooms which do not keep long after they are gathered, will keep much longer if scalded and rinsed with cold water—from morning till evening, perhaps, when untreated they would not be in good condition after two hours. Salt in the scalding water is also used as a safeguard.

Broiling Mushrooms.

The most inveterate gatherer of mushrooms I know cleans her mushrooms, puts it on a stone china plate or saucer, seasoning it with salt and butter, puts it into the hot broiling oven until the juices start out well, then takes it from the oven, covers it closely, and lets it stand for five minutes before serving.

Baked Mushrooms.

Rub tops and wash in several waters and drain in colander, or peel the caps and scrape the stems if you choose to leave the latter on. Put into lightly buttered baking tin with the tops of the caps down, sprinkle lightly with salt and any other seasoning you like, and dot with exceedingly tiny bits of butter, as there should be no suggestion of greasiness when the mushrooms are cooked. Add a little cream or not, as you choose, and bake in a rather hot oven ten minutes. Good for all sorts of garnishing, and may be served with wonderful garnishments—toast and vegetables.

Stewed Mushrooms.

Make a white sauce, and stew mushrooms in it for half an hour. Mushrooms of uniform size, cooked whole and piled on toast in a pyramid of two layers and top one with the sauce in which they are cooked poured over them, make a fine dish—if the mushrooms are not tough. If scalded first as a part of the preparation they are not likely to toughen.

Stewed Mushrooms—II.

Easier than frying mushrooms is to cook them thus: Scald, peel, and remove stem from mushrooms. Put them to cook in a flat bottomed aluminum kettle which can be covered closely. They will keep their shape perfectly if there is but one layer in the pan and about half a cup of water. Cook gently over a minimum fire twenty minutes. There should be but a bit of water at the end of fifteen minutes, when a little cream may be added to finish. Instead of water any meat stock or a highly flavored sauce may be used, or added when they are half cooked. But with water you get the fullest flavor of the mushroom and they may be finished for piling on toast with butter and salt alone.

Sliced Mushroom Stew.

Prepare and slice thin half a pound of mushrooms. Put three or four tablespoons of butter in a frying pan. When it has melted, add the mushrooms and cook for five minutes, stirring them with a wooden spoon so as not to break the pieces. Sprinkle over them a scant level tablespoon of flour, and stir until well mixed; then add half a cup of cream and stir until smooth. In other days we used to add a tablespoon of sherry whe to this, but we may use a little nutmeg instead. After the cream is added, cook gently ten minutes, and salt just before serving on toast, or use as a sauce for something like filet of beef.

PANAMAS FOR COMFORT.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—The dog days are coming and with them all sorts and kinds of devices for keeping not the canine but the human race cool. Besides the myriads of ice cream sodas and palm leaf fans, there will be the usual attendance of another form of the palm tree, the Panama hat.

The majority of men do not wear Panamas, perhaps because they are not cheap, the average price paid being about $10, but they are as nondressy headwear, in perfectly good form and taste, and certainly a far cooler proposition than the regular stiff straw. The Panama is lighter on the head, and is a better ventilated hat because the ordinary straw is so clogged up with the glue that stiffens it that the air does not go through, as it can in the thinner Panama, which is stiffened with gelatin.

The story of these hats is an interesting one. Probably few of the men who walk into a store in Chicago or New York and clap a Panama on to their heads wonder where they come from or realize how much of some South American's life is represented in that fragile bit of straw. They would doubtless be amazed to learn that the cheapest Panama, takes a week to weave and that does not include the finishing of the edge, which is done separately), that that if it were made up in this country by American labor the same hat would sell at about $50. One of the finest grade of the Panamas means eight or nine months of one person's time.

The choicest hats of all, the kind that sell for $300 or $400, and are bought by many rich men to use as a mark of wealth, require a year or more to weave. One sees with such figures why these hats are not made in this country. The price of one would be so fabulous that the wearer would feel in danger of his life whenever he walked abroad.

Although the actual manufacture of the finished hat is done in this country, the straw is prepared and woven into a hatlike shape in South America. Most of the weaving is done in Equador, but the materials come from different places. As suggested earlier, palm leaves are responsible for the creation of Panama hats. The leaves are cut into thin strips, boiled in the factories, rolled, and bleached in the sun. Like tobacco leaves, the finest grades of material are from the same leaves as the more inferior grades, the difference being in the part of the leaf used.

Natives buy the prepared straw and weave it at their homes, and when several hats are finished, one member of the family takes a trip some morning to the market in town, and asks four or five times as much as he will get for the hats. At the end of the day, when all hope of high profits have fled, he sells to the highest bidder and returns home to weave more hats for hot American summers.

The purchase of one of the highest grade hats, such as takes a year to weave, is especially interesting. A prospective buyer goes to a native who shows him the little straw button which is the center of the hat and from where the weaving commences. From this sample the customer decides whether he wants it or not. If he orders it he pays a deposit, and every once in a while as the weaving progresses he pays money down until the hat is complete.

The hats come folded to the manufacturer in this country. The mark of the fold is the origin of the ridge across the top of the crown of all Panamas. Many Panamas are left in the natural state they come in. But if they are given some process as is done by a prominent Panama hat manufacturer in New York, the hats are stronger and better, for under the treatment they retain the creamy color of a good natural Panama, while all streaks and dark casts are removed, besides which the hats do not turn reddish after a year or two as the natural ones do.

Panamas are made up into various shapes and styles. There is quite a demand for the Alpine or Fedora shape, as in the illustration on the right. Also the straight and tapering sunken crowns are popular, or that with an oval telescope effect, or a full shape with a pronounced ridge across the top, as illustrated at the left of the drawing. As with all hats, the style should be chosen with suitability to the face in mind. A heavy man with a full face can wear a large Alpine shape, or the one with telescope effect.

There are some Panamas made into sailor shapes like regular straws, but they are not popular. Since they are stiffened with glue they are not as cool as the other Panamas. But they are quite dressy looking hats, and may be worn with dinner coats whereas the ordinary Panama cannot.

A great asset of Panamas is their enduring qualities, fair care, of course, being understood. A good Panama should last from three seasons up, although it is possible, as with any hat, to ruin it in an hour, or less, if bad luck befall.

CHARM OF GOOD BREEDING.

A DECIDED contrast in the manners of two generations presented itself the other day as I sat in a hotel lobby waiting for a tardy friend. A woman—there are no middle aged ones any more, but she might easily have had a grandchild or two—was just about to go out when a hurrying youth dashed in front of her, pushed open the door, and let it swing shut in her face. Of course, she was disconserted and a bit angry. It was quite evident that she was used to courtesy from her youngers.

And just in the nick of time, before she could even continue on her way, the door was opened again, this time from the outside, and by a grave, white haired man. He saw instantly that she was on her way out, and with a delightful air, he removed his hat, smiled, and held the door open for her. The change in her expression was immediate. She smiled and thanked him, and, I am sure, went about her affairs with unruffled feelings.

More than likely the boy was only thoughtless. Few people mean to be rude. But the charm of good breeding lies in the fact that it isn't put on and taken off as the spirit moves. It just naturally makes itself felt all the time. And no little act of civility is so small that it can be overlooked.

K. A. N.: There is a great deal of indecision as to whether or not a band stands while playing the national anthem. The trouble seems to arise because of the extreme difficulty of playing certain instruments in that position. It is generally acceded that a brass band does not remain seated. The Chicago Symphony orchestra is said to have followed the custom of standing, the cellos being placed upon chairs to facilitate their being played. A pianist, however, would not be expected to rise and go on playing.

G. L.: When a woman needs assistance along a crowded or slippery street or at a busy crossing, she may take the arm of her escort. He will usually offer aid, but if he doesn't, and the need is imperative, she may ask for it.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Returning home after a few days in the country, we found that burglars had been through our apartment. Drawers of the library table, buffet, dressers, and other pieces of furniture were pulled out and contents strewn over the floor. After serious contemplation of the disordered array of papers, linen, etc., scattered about, David dryly remarked: "It looks like I had been here." R. F. F.

Mother had an awful time trying to tell one little twin from the other. A little playmate of theirs said, "O, that's easy. The one that looks as if he was the other is the one the other isn't." L. C. T.

Margaret had returned home from a party and her mother asked if she had had a good time.

She replied, "O, yes, mother. It was the best party I ever tasted." V. M.

Daddy said he would try to get an electric train for Fred, and that evening after I had tucked the child in bed, daddy sat on the floor and talked to him for a while.

Of course, the train was the most important thing in Frederick's mind.

He kept harping on that till daddy got a little out of patience and said a little shortly, "Now, Frederick, let's forget about the train for awhile. We probably won't get it till summer time.

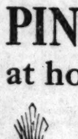
Sonny agreed, "I didn't want it till summer, daddy; I just wanted to impress it on your mind so you wouldn't forget." C. S.

Janie reached out to pat a stray dog that came up to her wagging his tail in a friendly way. As she touched him, the dog barked, causing the child to shrink back with fear.

Mother said, "Why, doggie is friendly. He is wagging his tail."

"I understand his tail talk, but I don't understand his bark talk," said Janie. Mrs. L. S.

Now is the time to can PINEAPPLES at home



Fresh pineapples are now abundant and low-priced.

Shipments of delicious, fragrant, sugar-sweet fruit are arriving every day from Cuba where the choicest pineapples are grown.

Can a few now for use in the season when you can't get the fresh fruit.

Here is a simple recipe for home canning.

Slice, peel and core the fruit. Blanch for 5 minutes in boiling water, then cold dip. Place in a kettle, cover with syrup made with 2 cups sugar to 3 cups blanching water. Boil for 4 minutes. Fill cans with fruit, pour over enough juice to cover, then sterilize for 30 minutes in hot water bath and seal tightly while hot.

Ask your grocer for prices on pineapples. You should serve this glorious tropical fruit more often. It is healthful and delicious.

1 Grasp the pineapple firmly in one hand, then take hold of foliage with the other hand and twist it off.

2 Now slice the fruit across in thick slices not less than three-quarters of an inch thick.

3 Put a slice on a plate. Then run a sharp knife around the edge of the slice, inside the peel. Kitchen comes off, with eyes, easily.

4 Cut across the slice as shown in diagram, four cuts, one on each side of the core. The core will be out without any waste.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Expecting the Stork.

"Dear Miss Brown: You have helped so many others, I'm sure you can help me. I have been reading your column for a long time and would ask if there is any one who would give me some clothing for an infant. I'm to become a mother soon and have, until now, been unable to buy clothing. I am 19 years of age and have one child already. I could make clothes out of scraps. I would like to have some shoes for myself. I wear size 6.

"E. M. I."

We hope you will have good luck with your request, and feel sure you will. May your babies be healthy and fine and good in the bargain! I know some mother who has two little ones close together will not be able to resist your appeal for help for the newcomer.

Sad and Lonely.

"Dear Miss Brown: I buried my wife and son and daughter within a year. I am 70 years old. I am in need of clothes—coat, 44; trouser waist, 40; vest, 42; thouser length, 34. I am sad and lonely. I have been in bed since so much death in our home. I am living with my daughter, who has five children. Please be kind and help me. As I am able to be up and I would like to go out in the fresh air. A. J. K."

To have misfortunes when one is young is bad enough—but to be 70 and have them is too much. I demand that some fortunate man of A. J. K.'s size give up part of his wardrobe to help this poor old dear to get out into the sunshine and see the birds and the lovely children in the park.

A Courageous Little Person.

"Am appealing to you on behalf of one who is partly paralyzed and only gets out about three times a year. She makes her own living, but not such a good living that there is much left for clothes and extras. Could some one give her some old summer dresses, a wrap, or suit, size 34 or 36? She would also like some curtains or drapes for windows to make her room more cheerful. She can alter any of these things; will also be willing to pay postage on them if necessary. She would be most grateful. E. M."

To earn one's living with a handicap like E. M.'s is quite an accomplishment. More success to E. M. Will some one help this courageous little person to enjoy the cheerfulness of white curtains? Surely some of you who have moved this spring have some too short for your new windows that you will be willing to give to her. And all ye perfect thirty-sixes, please look in your wardrobes and see what you can spare for E. M. She thanks you in advance.

Think of Others.

"I am writing to you hoping some kind people to help me. I have been sick over a year and am now able to get out and get some exercise, which I need badly, but I have no clothes, as my husband doesn't earn much and is not able to buy me any. If any of your kind readers have any discarded clothes of any description I would be thankful for them. I am five feet tall, bust measure 38. My husband is in need of shirts—neck band 14. He will go after anything or pay charges.

"Mrs. M. L."

Many people throw away clothes that to others would be a boon indeed, and it only needs a plea like Mrs. M. L.'s to warn us that we are wasteful and to fill us with joy because we can do a kindness for another. Please find some clothes for an invalid and some shirts for her husband, and make yourself and them happier.

Here Is Need, Indeed.

I have three small children. The youngest one just came home yesterday from the hospital, after getting over bronchial pneumonia. My husband is in the Bridewell. I am to become a mother soon and don't know what to do, as I have no clothing. I wonder if some kind person has some little things to give me? It is hard trying to keep the children at present. Please help me and I will never forget your kindness. The children are a boy, 8, and two girls of 2 and 5. Mrs. D."

I am glad to pritn your request, Mrs. D., and there probably will be an early reply from some mother who has done her spring cleaning and can help you out of your dilemma.

Help Him to Help Himself.

"Dear Miss Brown: At our last regular meeting some one mentioned that you had a service department which had given help to disabled soldiers. We have a buddy, a member of this post, who wishes to learn typewriting by taking home instruction. He has no typewriter and no funds with which to purchase one. Have you a service department that could secure the purchase of a second hand standard keyboard typewriter? If so, please inform me what can be done and you shall receive the hearty appreciation of many readers in this district. C. M. S."

This is an interesting letter because it came from the American Legion. Who will help a disabled ex-service man to take his rightful place in the world? A typewriter given or loaned will do all this.

A Dancer's Charm

lies principally in graceful freedom and exposure of beautiful shoulders and arms. You, wearing this season's sheer fabrics and low-cut gowns, may also enjoy a delightfully unconscious freedom.

DEL-A-TONE

is a scientific preparation made by beauty experts to safely remove the hair from face, neck or under-arms. It leaves the skin clear, fresh and firm, without pain or discoloration. Beauty specialists recommend it highly. Easy to apply—simple directions with every jar.

Sparing Him Nothing.

While visiting my sister, whose husband is the principal of an academy, word was received that one of the directors of the academy from out of town would visit the school and stay over night at our house.

My sister was most anxious to entertain the reverend gentleman; but every room in her house was occupied. As a last resort she decided to buy a folding davenport and turn the living room over to the distinguished guest, hoping he would not notice that he had inconvenienced the family. At the sound of the bell my small nephew came flying into the living room to tell me to entertain the visitor till his mother could come in.

He had not reached a chair when the small boy remarked: "Say, you've got new shoes, haven't you?"

I pretended not to hear, but he piped up again: "Say, you haven't got much hair on the top of your head, have you?"

At this a faint smile played over the face of the man and I suggested to William that he had better run out and play in the yard.

As he started to obey my suggestion he added: "My mother had to go downtown and buy a new davenport today. See there. It's for you to sleep on."

R. F. W.

Striving to Please.

At a little home gathering I once offered to perform some card tricks which I had been diligently practicing for just such an occasion.

Holding the pack toward the only stranger in the room, I told him to select a card and replace it in any part of the deck. He did so, and after shuffling the cards I attempted to find the chosen card. Time and again I went through the pack, and each time was unable to find the card I sought. In the meantime the guests were laughing in most unsympathetic enjoyment of the situation, and it was not till after I had given up the trick that I discovered the real reason for their unrestrained laughter.

The card the stranger had selected was sticking out of my own coat breast pocket, visible to all except me.

"Jayar."

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

Beauty

The greatest line of beauty is the curve. This beauty is an integral part of every Lloyd Loom Baby Carriage as shown in the exclusive "shell" design of the bodies—a graceful bowl shape, woven of endless wicker, with a continuous sweeping curve from side to front, unbroken by corners or by concealed short ends of wicker.

It was Marshall B. Lloyd who invented the method and loom which weave beauty into Baby Carriages and Wicker Furniture thirty times faster and finer than the old hand weaving method. These inventions cut labor costs, enabling us to weave the finest wickers, use the best materials, employ the most skilled workmen, add the latest refinements and still sell our wicker products at very moderate prices.

Your dealer will explain the Fifth Wheel Reversible Gear; Oil Tempered Springs; Continuous Steel Pusher; patented Double Spoked and Double Rimmed Wheels; patented Automatic Hood Adjustment—features that add materially to the beauty, convenience, comfort and stability of the carriage.

Mandel Brothers' May sale of summer frocks —important annual fourth floor event—brings extraordinary values

The first annual recurrence of a sale that was inaugurated a year ago, and that proved successful beyond our highest expectations; an event that this year is destined to surpass its predecessor in volume and value-giving. Frocks of fabrics smart and cool, in a host of summery styles, are priced lower now, at summer's brink, than you would expect to find them before the season's end. The models pictured here, are characteristically charming.

Misses' charmingly youthful frocks

—of linens, voiles, ginghams, dotted swisses and ratines

Fabrics as smart as they are cool and practical were employed in creating these delightful warm weather frocks. Embellishment of dainty motifs and novel ornamentation proclaim the frocks' conformity with latest modes.

PROLOGUE.

In an unguarded moment Mamie Potter gave her name and address to one of the real estate gentlemen at the Own Your Home Exposition, and ever since he has been laying down a barrage of wheedling words—letters, folders, posters, booklets, broadsides—all strumming the praises of Home Hills and chanting with careless rapture and a lyric ecstasy of passion which only a real estate gentleman can achieve, the charm, the delight, the ineffable bliss of owning a lot in Home Hills, Home Hills the Beautiful . . . well, Mamie and Red have decided to go out and see for themselves . . . that is, Mamie has decided for Red . . . men don't really know what they want to do, anyway, until some one tells them . . . and it has also been decided that Pa will drive them out in the new family chariot . . . Ma, of course, will go, too—for the ride, and Bill will be taken along, not necessarily with a benevolent solicitude for his pleasure, but because he will be needed to take turns with Ma holding the Baby . . . Bill will love that!

Scene I—The Start.

The Potters tried to get started early, but everything seemed to go wrong . . . you know how it is . . . small wonder a parade never starts on time . . . it was decided at the last minute that getting up a lunch would be too much bother—they would pick up a chicken dinner along the road somewhere . . . besides, it was doubtful if the car could carry all that Bill and Red could eat for lunch . . .

PA (sitting in the car outside, honking the born—he's a great help):
Jimminy Chris'mus, gosh! you're slow;
C'mon, let's go; c'mon, let's go.

RED (chiming in, also a great help):
C'mon, hurry up, gee whizz, have a heart,
The roads'll be crowded if we don't start.

BILL (probably the most helpful of them all, and certainly the loudest):
We won't get goin' for another week;
Mame's painting her kisser and dusting her beak.

MA (from the door):
William, come here and get this child;
The way you help would drive one wild

The hectic trip to Home Hills.

(Bill, grumbling at the injustice of mothers who expect young men to nurse babies, shuffles into the house, where after a patient search he finds the Baby trying to put the cat into the oven so it won't miss him while he's gone for a "wide.")

MAMIE (at door):
Gee, I'm afraid this veil's a sight.
(To Red): How do I look, do I look all right?
(If she had thought she didn't she would never ask.)

MA (to Bill, who has reappeared dragging the baby, who has suddenly made up his mind to take the cat with him):
Is the back door locked? . . . Did you turn off the light?
(To Pa): Put up the top or we'll look a sight.

MAMIE (pleadingly):
Ah, let it stay down; it's so cool that way.

MA (decidedly):
My hair'll be ruined . . . put it up, I say.
(Well, in that case it goes up . . . and Pa, Red, and Bill have just had such a time putting it down . . . business now of getting everybody aboard, honking the horn and racing the engine so the neighbors will notice it is a new car [Ma's idea], discussing which way is the best, and finally deciding to trust to luck . . .)

PA (nervously):
Everybody ready? Migod, you're slow!
C'mon, let's go.

RED (gayly):
C'mon, let's go.
(Curtain.)

Scene II—Home Hills, the Beautiful.

Let us pass over the hectic trip to Home Hills, the seething, surging country bound motorists all trying to pass each other, all kicking dust into each other's faces with loud, derisive honks and hoots . . . let us pass over the frequent exchanging of the Baby between Ma and Bill (over the front seat every five minutes), and the frantic efforts of everybody in the party to prevent him from committing suicide (by ingenuously endeavoring to pick wild flowers while going thirty miles an hour) . . . we will pass over such things, also road hogs, country constables, punctures, and such, for we would dally this Sunday morning with naught but whimsy, with the play of the faunlike fancy through the infinite absurdities of life . . . and so with a wave of our wand we find ourselves transported with the Potters . . . and here we are . . .

PA (to real estate salesman, who appears magically with a red, red rose in his buttonhole):
We're looking for Home Hills. Is this it?

SALESMAN (beaming):
It is, indeed, sir. It is, indeed.
(Potters look baffled. So far as they can see there are neither Homes nor Hills, merely a large flat plain, with millions of little stakes and miles of empty sidewalks.)

BILL (brightly):
Looks like a nice place for a graveyard. (To Red): Y'oughta buy a lot for us next to you, so we can be buried along side of you.

SALESMAN (giving Bill a dirty look and then turning a beaming countenance on the ladies):
Ah, but what you see now is but the beginning, the embryo, I shall say, of what will be the most beautiful residential restricted subdivision in the country. Won't you step out?
(They step out.)
Now here is a beautiful location. Corner lot, eastern and southern exposure—this is what you should have. Buy a corner lot and no one can build right up next to you on two sides at least.

PA (gravely):
That sounds reasonable enough. How much does that cost?

SALESMAN (parrying the question—he wasn't born yesterday, nor the day before that):
Transportation? That's a sensible question. Well, do you see that line of trees over there?
(They can barely see them.)
Well, it is only a matter of time until the extension of the Homes Avenue Street Car Line comes through there . . . just a short walk . . . you will look forward to it in the sunny mornings and the cool shady evenings.
(As he speaks large shade trees spring up magically and arch the streets, houses appear, beautiful, comfortable, with cool, airy porches on which sit contented care-free men and women sipping lemonade and nibbling cakes. The wide velvety lawns are gay with little children in white and pink romping merrily and their laughter rings out with sweet abandon . . . the salesman stops speaking . . . and the Potters awaken with a start to discover the laughter is Bill's . . .)

MA (freezing Bill with a look):
I think this would be a lovely place for Mamie and Red to have their little nest. (With maternal forethought): How far is it to school?

BILL (casually):
What's the difference, Ma? They may never need it.
(Ma gives Bill one of those 'll-see-you-later looks . . . Red is flushing furiously, but Mamie is as cool as a cucumber . . . this young generation, gosh! gosh! . . . so natural and unaffected, isn't it a pity?)
(Curtain.)

Scene III—Homeward Bound.

(Inspired by the eloquence of the real estate salesman—the least of whom could sell red flannel underwear to the devil himself—Red Miller has committed himself for a corner lot where Mamie and he will build their little cote and be as snug as a bug in a rug—they will have nothing to worry them except the semi-annual interest, the monthly notes, the street assessments, the special assessments, and a few minor trifles like that . . . surely our antediluvian ancestors were the cat's uncle when it came to setting up housekeeping . . . catch 'em young, drag 'em to a cave, roll a big rock up for the front door . . . and that's that . . . but we digress; it is now the witching hour of noon and the Potters begin to yearn internally for food . . .)

PA (drawing up alongside plodding son of the soil):
Any place around here where a fella can get some food?

SON OF SOIL: Huh?

PA (louder):
Can I eat around here?

S. OF S. (with dawning enlightenment):
Sure, sure y'u kin eat 'round here. Anywheres. Right there is a good place (indicates shady spot beside road).

MA (interrupting):
He means is there a restaurant or an eating place around here?

S. OF S. (focusing slowly): Huh?

BILL (violently):
Food. Eats. Grub. Chow. We wanta put on the nosebags. We wanta put our feet in the trough.

MA (to Bill, reproachfully):
William, William! (To S. of S.): Surely there must be some place where we can get a good chicken dinner near here.

S. OF S. (slowly):
Well, ye-es. Yu go down th' road yonder aways till yu come to the first crossroad, but don't take that. Go down till you come to Heaton's big barn and then yu turn cat-a-corners till yu come to another barn, an' the second house beyond that is the one . . .

PA (blankly):
Yes, sir. Thank you, sir. (To himself): Clear as mud.
(They proceed down road, trying to remember directions . . . family with best of intentions only mix him up with their efforts to help . . . finally come to house which seems to answer description . . . park car in front of house and disembark, troop up front steps and walk in open door . . . honest farmer folks having simple Sunday dinner look up and view Potters with astonishment . . .)

PA (gayly):
Where's the manager? We want dinner for, let's see, one, two, three, four, five and (indicating Baby) one-half.

MA (even more gayly):
And tell 'em to make it lively, too. We're just about starved. Where will we put our clothes?
(Mrs. Farmer nearly drops roast down husband's neck in sheer amazement.)

BILL AND RED (college yell style):
We want meat, raw, raw, raw.
(Potters shuck all their wraps and strew them around. Bill goes into front room and starts the vic' . . . everybody makes themselves at home.)

FARMER (who has somewhat recovered from the shock):
Say, what's the idea? We don't know you.

PA (with an attempt to be facetious):
We don't know you, either. Ha, ha . . .

FARMER (who doesn't laugh):
Where were you aimin' fer? 'Ain't you in the wrong house?

PA (beginning to get puzzled):
Why, we're looking for somethin' to eat.

MA (brightly):
Yes, we're dreadfully hungry and we want a chicken dinner.

As he speaks large shade trees spring up magically.

FARMER (decidedly):
Well, we ain't serving no chicken dinners to people we don't know from Adam, are we, mother?

MRS. FARMER (just as decidedly):
I should just say we ain't.

PA (baffled):
Ain't this a restaurant? Don't you serve meals here?

FARMER (gruffly):
Restaurant, eh? Does this look like a restaurant? This is our home.

PA (weakly):
Migod, there's some mistake.

MA (limply):
Wuh, wuh, wuh beg your pardon, we—we—we—

BILL (who has shut off the vic' to listen):
Can you beat that for tough luck? When'll we eat now, I'd like to know?

MAMIE (gayly):
Well, it's a good thing we didn't sit down and eat your dinner first and ask you afterwards.

PA (fumbling together all the wraps):
Awf'lly sorry . . . beg pardon . . . terr'bly sorry.
(To family, fiercely):
C'mon, let's go . . . c'mon, let's go.
(And that's that—until Next Sunday.)

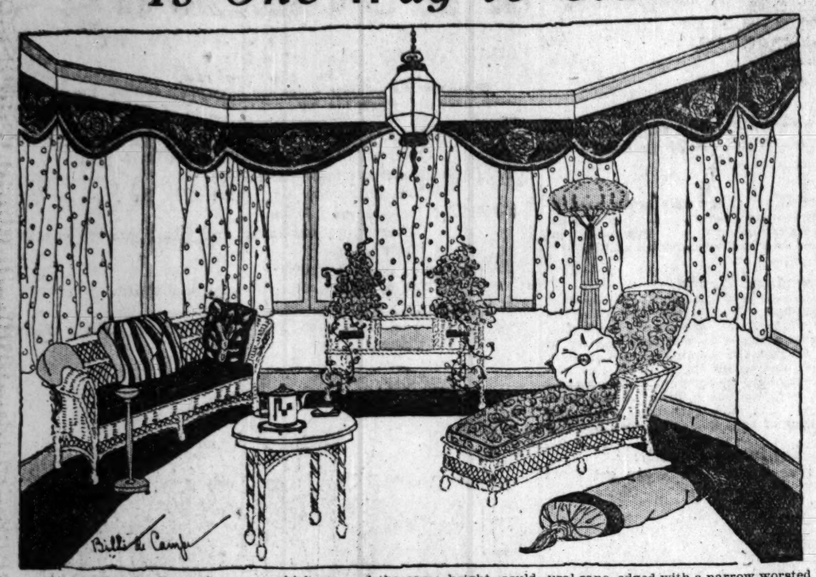
Breakfast in the Cheerful Sunroom Is One Way to Start the Day Right



By Anita de Campi.

THE UNUSUAL SUNROOM.

THIS is the season when porches and sunrooms come into their own and reign supreme. They are decked in their gay holiday attire and become so fascinating that we are inclined to live almost entirely in them. The custom of using the inclosed porch as a breakfast room is gaining steadily in popularity. Starting the day in a sunny, cheerful porch is an ideal method for the upkeep of a good disposition.

It doesn't take a great deal of space for breakfast room furniture. A small sun porch was recently converted into the most charming little breakfast room imaginable! The base of the table was of reed, and the wooden top was drop leafed. When it was not in use the leaves were dropped and it was set against the wall. There were four side chairs, an arm chair, and a stool of reed. The stool and arm chair, which were of the same height, could be drawn together and made into a chaise longue. The set was painted gray, with trims of deep mauve and black. The cushions were figured in mauve and gray, and the window curtains were deep mauve silk gauze. The floor was covered with gray and black linoleum in a tile pattern.

Some people have such light dining rooms that it is needless for them to make use of their sun porches as breakfast rooms. Nevertheless, they want their porches made as attractive as possible, especially during the summer months. A gay sort of furniture with which to refurbish is the French cane, which comes in either a small or large brick pattern weave, in combinations of two or three colors; for instance, tan and blue; dull green, blue and black, or orange and dull green.

A striking set of this sort which I saw recently in a sun porch consisted of a chaise longue, a square center table, a davenport, three side chairs, an arm chair, and a rocker. These were in combination of red, black, and the natural color of the cane. The cushions were of black sateen piped with red to match that in the furniture. The upper and lower sash curtains were of sunfast, the color of the natural cane, edged with a narrow worsted fringe of red, black, and tan. There was a piece of olive green pottery on the table. The floor was painted black.

Solid wood furniture, painted, is always suitable for the summer porch. A satisfactory color to use is gray. This neutral tone may be combined with almost any color. The pieces may be edged with bright colors, such as emerald green, vermilion, or turquoise. Flowered cretonnes and chintzes make a good showing, as cushions and curtains, when contrasted to solid masses of neutral colors. Other good background colors which will bring out figured materials are ecru, navy blue, or old ivory. An old ivory set, with sage green trims and cushions of peony flowered cretonne, with a sage green background, would be nice.

A cool color for summer time is green. This color was employed most effectively in a summer home by a prominent decorator. The furniture was Wedgwood green reed. Around the edges of the chairs, davenport, and little desk small squares of orange color were painted. The center table was of wrought iron. The curtains and valances were of green and orange chintz. The floor was covered with a fiber rug in squares of black and ecru. A feature of the room was a pair of wrought iron lamps with orange parchment shades.

A pleasing way to treat windows is to have lattices built around them and plant ivies in window boxes. These ivies can be trained up the lattices. Ferneries to match the furniture are interesting, placed at the sun porch windows. Some of these serve two purposes. One which I saw in the home of a friend was divided into three squares. The two end ones held ferns, while the middle one was made of glass and was used as a goldfish bowl. Ferneries of reed, with reed bird cages suspended above them are equally alluring.

A New York decorator describes a sun porch which he has just done. The walls, he says, were painted gray and the woodwork black. The reed furniture was Du Barry rose with a black and gray stripe. The lamp was of black reed lined with rose silk, which showed through the openwork. The roller shades were of flowered glazed chintz in rose, green and a little blue, the rose predominating. It was such an inviting place for afternoon tea that a reed tea table on wheels was deemed absolutely indispensible. This matched the rest of the furniture in color.

Gray and old blue make a pleasing combination. Gray reed furniture, with an old blue stripe and motifs, would look well. The woodwork and walls could be gray, and the curtains old blue silk gauze. Cushions, covered with gray and old blue linen, in an irregular stripe, would be nice. It is best, in making cushions for the sun porch, to have slip covers of washable material, especially if the color is light.

An unusually attractive sun room had a wall of spring green. The furniture—two comfortable armchairs, an hourglass chair, a little footstool, a square table, a magazine stand, a davenport, and a cigarette ash tray stand, was of fiber painted a bright canary yellow. The cushions for the seats of the chairs and davenport were of black oiled cloth, boxed to fit and piped with green. Extra cushions and the window curtains of sunfast were striped in green and yellow, with a hairline of black. The table lamp was of fiber, painted yellow, with a narrow edging of black and lined with yellow silk.

For those who do not care for painted furniture there is the natural willow or wicker. The soft color of the willow is restful. Cretonne cushions, flowered in old blue, dull mauve, old gold, and olive green, on a ground the color of the willow, add charm to the set. Curtains of sunfast or silk gauze in any one of the colors in the cretonne may be used. For a tuscan tan and tete-de-negre reed set, a cretonne with a dull green background, figured in either violet or flame, would be stunning. Other kinds of unpainted porch furniture are peel cane, in the natural color, fiber, and hickory.

A flexible shoe for your flexible foot

Nature, in her wisdom, designed your foot arch to flex when you walk. Why restrain it in shoes that are rigid and without natural lines? "The foot is like a cantilever spring," wrote a noted doctor. "The Cantilever is the most comfortable shoe I have ever worn," said a trained nurse; and another woman said, "In Cantilever Shoes I feel as though I were flying."

It is because of the flexible shank and natural lines of the Cantilever Shoe that you will derive such comfort from it. And because of its graceful appearance and its harmony with this Spring's shoe styles you will see it worn wherever daytime costumes are worn. Fine workmanship, splendid materials and reasonable prices add to make the Cantilever desirable.

The graceful carriage and youthful walk of the Cantilever Woman are often admired. Her feet are free. She walks naturally, with a minimum of effort. Flexing with every step, Cantilever Shoes make her feel as though she wore the wings of Mercury.

Genuine Cantilever Shoes have the name "CANTILEVER" stamped on the shank. Avoid substitutes.

How the Yi-Yi Spoon brought Mamie Moore the husband she wanted

Does the mystic Yi-Yi symbol of ancient Asia really bring good luck? Below is the highly interesting and amusing story of Mamie Moore—her answer to the question. Following it are a few of the scores of letters that have poured in to us from users of the Yi-Yi Spoon. We claim nothing for the Yi-Yi Spoon. We merely pass on to you a cryptic symbol which, the Chinese say, has meant Health, Happiness, Prosperity and GOOD LUCK for uncounted ages. Read what others tell from actual experiences.

(These letters are signed only with initials or pseudonyms. We have the original letters with correct names and addresses on file; they may be inspected upon request.)

(This letter awarded prize of $25 for contest which ended today:)

The Experience of Mamie T. Moore

Dear People:

My Yi-Yi Spoon has brought me such Luck and so much Happiness my words tumble all over each other when I try to tell about it, and I can't stop to take my time.

You see, Jim and I have been sweethearts for more than a year, perfectly foolish about each other and all but engaged. "All but" is right, and that pestiferous "all but" commenced to grate on my nervous system some six months ago. Every time I saw Jim (which was every night and all day Sunday) I'd hope he'd speak the fateful words which would take all the "buts" out of the situation, but time went on and kept on going on so far as that delicate question was concerned. The mummies in the Stanley Field collection had nothing on Jim.

I did all the hinting I decently dared, and then some, and was getting so mad and anxious and disappointed all at once I was losing interest in everything, including eats. No wonder, too, going to work like that Monday morning after Monday morning with nothing of interest to tell the girls and new engagement rings flashing on all sides of me, and Jim was getting tight, too, hardly taking me any place worth telling. I sure had the anxiety blues for fair.

One noon I saw the Yi-Yi Spoon and it sort of appealed to me, so I bought one. I liked the box, too, and the story on it—"That which cannot be seen is called Yi —" (That's my engagement ring, thinks I). "That which cannot be heard is called Hei." (That's Jim's proposal, sighed I.) "That which cannot be touched is called Wei." (My middle name, Mr. Jim, says I, real mad and feeling better.)

Well, that evening Jim pulled more fireside stuff. It was fast becoming a habit, all right. I baked a swell shortcake and brought it in with some coffee, hoping that old saw about "the way to a man's heart," etc., was going to prove a charm and not a delusion, like all my other hopes. I slipped the new spoon on Jim's saucer just because he was company, with small chance of ever changing for the better. He noticed it right away and seemed interested, so I told him all about it, how the Chinese figured that the wee-jiggles meant health, wealth and happiness to the users. Then I told him they cost only thirty-five cents, or three for a dollar.

"Well," says Jim, real quick like, and believe me it took my breath, "if folks could only be satisfied to get along for awhile with thirty-five cent spoons and other things according, and take a chance that health, wealth and happiness would follow along, a fellow might dare ask a girl to try it out and prove it with him, but when he knows right off the bat that he's got to sell his health to produce the wealth in order to bring the happiness, because she's sure she can do with nothing less than sterling silver and solid mahogany stuff and imported rugs, like Mamie somebody or Helen this-and-that, instead of a nestful of necessities, like Dad and Mother started with, he just naturally can't get up the nerve, that's all."

Now I don't mind owning up that what happened within the next few seconds isn't quite clear in my mind, but I do remember when the rosy mists had cleared enough to see through, the little old Yi-Yi was right there on the table, and we have ordered a dozen more (for four bucks), knowing that hard work and patience and weekly trips to the savings bank will bring wealth, and wealth will buy silver spoons, but contented to say that for general purposes in our family (included teeth-cutting) the precious old Yi-Yi will be good enough a-plenty, thank you. Yours excitedly,

Won $100.00

Gentlemen:

Does the Yi-Yi Spoon bring good luck—it surely does.

I have been attending trades day, which is the first Monday in every month. $100.00 is the largest premium.

I never received a premium until one of my friends gave me a Yi-Yi Spoon. I attended the trades day soon after and received the $100.00. So there must be something about the Yi-Yi Spoon that brings good luck.

M. G., Duncan, Okla.

Another Engagement Ring

Gentlemen:

The Yi-Yi Spoon is the luckiest thing I ever had in all my life. I've had so much luck that I could give some of it away.

My brother found a good position after being out of work for almost two years, and I also received an engagement ring from my sweetheart a week later when I got the lucky spoon.

And almost everything I wish for come true to me. We are all healthy. It also means marriage for me soon and a happy one. I've been wishing for it and it's going to be true sooner or later. No doubt, if you do publish my letter, I would advise anybody to get a lucky spoon, as it's the best of luck. I'll always recommend it the luckiest spoon.

Yours truly,

MISS A. Z., Chicago, Ill.

Landed a Job

Gentlemen:

I'll tell the world the Yi-Yi Spoon brings Good Luck!

I am a stenographer, and have been out of work for two months. My sister sent me a Yi-Yi Spoon one evening, and the next morning I landed a job. Yours very truly,

B. B., Chicago, Ill.

On Their Feet Again

To Whom It May Concern:

Over the world the Yi-Yi Spoon will not bring any more appreciated luck than it has here in this household today.

Because of financial reverses and unemployment, my husband's folks, who are both aged people, broke up their home and came to live with us. While here it seemed that they were positively bewitched with bad luck, as they could gain no headway in anything. They had just given up hope, when on May 13th my sister gave one of the lucky spoons to my mother-in-law as a present for "Mother's Day."

It was given with the wish for a change of luck, and the mother-in-law stirred her coffee with it and sipped a few spoons to drink.

The very next evening a ticket of chance that was given her won several hundred dollars, which enables them to once more get a start in whatever they desire.

Words cannot begin to express the joy it has brought to all persons concerned. This is positive truth and can be investigated.

Yours truly,

MRS. A. K., Chicago, Ill.

That which cannot be seen is called Yi.
That which cannot be heard is called Hei.
That which cannot be touched is called Wei.
These three are inscrutable, blended in one.
This is the first principle of TAO.

Finds Money

Dear Sir:

Your spoon sure does bring good luck. I have been lucky a little on and off all my life. Last week I saw the spoon in a jewelry store on 26th street and said to myself, "I am going to get one and see if it does any good, if it will increase my luck."

I bought one, put it in my pocket, and went to a restaurant. A little later I looked down on the floor and found a dollar bill. Saturday, on State street, I found seven dollars. Thousands of people must have walked on it and kicked it all over the loop. It was dirty, but it was seven dollars.

Monday coming across the street near where I work, the wind blew a five dollar bill right up in front of me. Last night I found a dime in a street car. Since I bought the spoon have had great encouragement and bright prospects of some things turning out fine.

When I came home tonight a letter here contains good news about a matter I have on the go.

I feel it in my bones this matter will turn out lucky. I intend to carry the spoon with me and use it in doing justice to my eats.

Yours very sincerely,

C. L. D., Chicago, Ill.

Patterns by Clotilde

1370—Boy's suit. Sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

1323—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 36 inch material with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

1357—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ inches of 36 inch or 3¼ yards of 40 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

ONE or two materials can be used in making this good looking house dress. The pattern, No. 1357, has a one piece straight skirt with patch pockets, and this skirt is joined to the waist at a low waist line. The waist has a plain back and front, both being laid on a fold of the material down the middle back and middle front. The front, as the picture shows plainly, is cut out in a deep oval shape at the neck. A vest that opens down the middle is set in—perforations on the front and vest edge showing just how—and the dress is intended to be slipped on over the head. One surely has a comfortable feeling in a dress like this, for there is no danger that snaps or buttons are off and some unsightly gaping showing up. The collar is sewed to the vest and the short sleeves and string sash complete a smart looking costume.

One of the English prints in some becoming combination of colors, combined with a plain chambray, choosing of course one of the colors in the figured material, would make a pretty dress. The waist and sleeves could be of the plain, and the skirt, pockets, cuffs, collar, and sash of the figured material.

Indian head cotton is good looking combined with chintz, and then, of course, there are chambrays and checked ginghams, plain and figured voile, and mercerized cotton poplin with a figured print.

One material, with contrasting vest, collar, and cuffs, would also be attractive; and the skirt and waist could be joined with a row of faggoting; or if a wash material is used there is a linen beading that is fine to use this way.

Pattern No. 1370 is a trim looking suit for the small son, and the double breasted front and pockets will make him feel much of a boy. The waist and trousers are separate, the lower edge of the waist being set into a band to which buttons are sewed, to button the trousers to. It is wise to shrink most materials before making them, and then being sure to allow for a little growth at least, for most young children grow like weeds.

Gingham, chambray, cotton poplin or pongee silk will be comfortable during the warm days. Put a strip of cotton cloth that has been shrunken in between the belt that is to hold the buttons, and in sewing the buttons on make a long shank. It wouldn't be a bad idea to baste a piece of the material on each leg, on the wrong side, just where the pockets are to be stitched, and stitch through this when putting a pocket on. It seems to be so easy for tears to come and a precaution of this kind may be a help.

Short sleeves will be more comfortable, particularly if the suit is for playtime, and these sleeves may be simply finished with a hem.

Pattern No. 1323 is an unusually attractive looking slipon apron or dress—just as one may choose to name it. It may be made of one material, or two may be used to good advantage. The short sleeves and side body of the apron are in one piece, and where these pieces are set on to the waist part of the apron a line of featherstitching or a narrow design in cross stitch can outline the joining.

The skirt of the apron gores out quite a little toward the lower edge, measuring there, for size 36, 1¾ yards. A facing, cut just the shape at the bottom, will make a better finish for this than a hem.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Best of All.

Not long ago the children in fifth grade, of which my little son is a member, were asked to write a short poem. He brought home a copy of his, and felt it was the greatest compliment I ever received when I read:

I love my home,
And I love my brother,
But most of all
I appreciate my mother.

When Silence Is Golden.

There had been quite a gathering of neighbors spending the evening at our house, and as is often the case gossip had crept in until some rather unkind things had been said.

One by one they made their adieus and departed, until only one remained. As I stood with her under the porch light she held my hand in hers a moment longer than usual, as she looked searchingly into my eyes.

"Dear," she said, "you've said some beautiful things to me. You are always saying beautiful things to some one, but tonight I want to thank you for the things you did not say."

Cherished Fifty Years.

I am a doctor nearly 80 years old, but still cherish as my highest compliment a remark made to me over fifty years ago, when I first started practicing medicine.

I was in partnership with an older man who quite frequently sent me on country calls in his place. One day he sent me to see an old woman who had been injured in a runaway. She had expected the old doctor and was terribly provoked when she saw me. However, I paid no attention to her remonstrances, but went straight to work.

When I had finished and was about to leave, she grasped me heartily by the hand and exclaimed: "Well, well; ye look like a young bye, but have a man's head on ye."

SOME ONE FOR HORACE.

IT was at the end of the first semester, during my sophomore year, when I flunked in mathematics and science for the second time, that dad decided some drastic measures must be taken. One day he came to school and had a long conference with our mathematics prof, old Strassie, as we called him behind his back. I discovered later it was during this interview that Strassie told dad, among other things, that if I put as much time and attention on the inside of my head as I did on the outside, I might be able to get my grades. This was intended as a sarcastic allusion, no doubt, to my coiffure, which, if I do say so myself, always looks as if I had just come from the beauty parlor.

I knew when I entered dad's study that evening that an ultimatum had been reached, hastened, undoubtedly, by old Strassie's unkind thrust. I was to be sent east, dad informed me, to become a member of the household of an old college friend of his, for six months, who would instruct me in all the studies in which I was backward. This man had never married, having an invalid sister, who was dependent on him.

At first I was inclined to be rebellious and refuse to go, but then I remembered how set dad was upon having me obtain a college education and I thought perhaps the work might be made more interesting for me this way.

When I arrived at Prof. Kent's home I was not sorry I had come. The professor was a handsome man, and although I did not anticipate a flirtation with him, he being dreadfully old, all of 40, I should imagine, he was most fascinating and I enjoyed my lessons with him. I soon discovered that some one else found him fascinating. That was Miss Lake, who acted as companion to the professor's sister. The professor, apparently, was entirely occupied with his teaching and his invalid sister. The affection between them was quite touching to see and made me think constantly of the beautiful devotion which existed between Charles and Mary Lamb.

But one afternoon I had the surprise of my life when I discovered that a man may be an expert at trigonometry and Euclid and still not be impervious to Cupid's shafts. I was to take my lesson at two, instead of three that afternoon, as the professor was to attend a committee meeting. He had evidently forgotten he told me to come an hour earlier, for as I entered the study, I found him gazing at an emerald brooch, which I knew belonged to Miss Lake, who had been in there a few minutes before and evidently dropped it. The look in his eyes and the start which he gave when he saw me were evidence enough for one with the acumen in such matters which I possess. Here was a pretty kettle of fish, I told myself. The professor in love with Miss Lake and Miss Lake in love with the professor, but with no hope of marriage, for the professor feared his sister would not take kindly to the idea.

But I experienced the second surprise of my life when Miss Fannie, as everyone called her, said to me a few days later, "Isn't Miss Lake a girl of wonderful character and beauty? How I wish Horace would take to her, for I know my stay on earth can't be long and then I would feel that Horace would have some one to watch over him.

Here, I said to myself, was an opportunity for me to use tact and ingenuity in handling a delicate situation and bring two lovers together. I was sure even father would not grudge the time and thought I gave to such an end. But fate intervened and made my efforts unnecessary.

Some days later Miss Lake was going down the little flight of stairs which led to Miss Fannie's room. In some way her foot slipped and she fell the entire flight and lay a little crumpled heap at the foot of the stairs, unable to rise. The professor, who was seated not far away, sprang up and lifted her up in his arms, and apparently oblivious to his surroundings, poured forth the most fervent love phrases, as he bent anxiously over her. Miss Fannie was seated at the window and heard everything, and you should have seen the expression on her face.

Miss Lake was not seriously injured. When I went up to see her, she had the most radiant face. But Miss Fannie, I really believe, was the happiest of the three.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

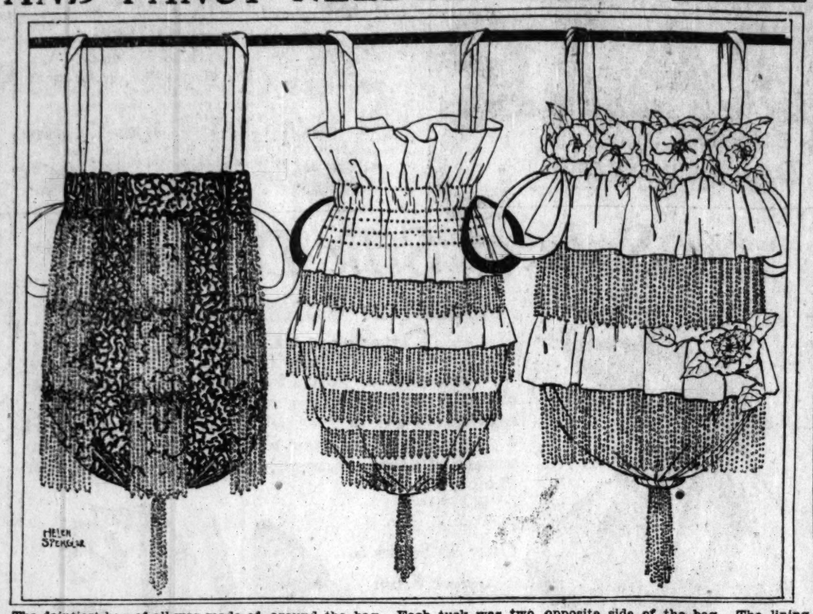
BY CLOTILDE

SILK HANDBAGS.

A WONDERFUL bag was seen not long ago made of black and red brocaded ribbon. It was the usual size for a fancy bag—about nine or ten inches deep by five or six inches in width. The top was turned over in a three-quarter inch hem or casing, through which two double faced satin ribbons were run. There was no beading. Strands of crystal beads, two inches when doubled in a loop, were sewed on for trimming. These bead strands were set on in clusters—possibly four loops sewed close together, then a space the same width, and so on. There were three of these clusters on each side of the bag, and three rows—the picture will make the meaning clear. The clusters were sewed on directly under each other, each cluster lapping a little over the one below.

The bottom was gathered into a large round covered button mold, and through the middle of this was suspended a cluster of the bead loops. At each side at the top of the bag there was a large fancy white bone ring. The lining was red.

Another bag was made of a beautiful piece of blue moire ribbon and had a two inch wide heading at the top. The bag was trimmed with steel beads, just below the casing for the ribbons that the bag is opened and closed by were three rows of these steel beads, set on one-half inch apart and parallel to each other. Below these rows were two tucks, each one inch in width and each tuck edged with one inch bead loops sewed on close together to the edge of each tuck. Then there were three rows of three-quarter inch loops of beads, with a half inch space between. The bottom of the bag was gathered into a covered button mold, and through the middle of it were sewed three inch strands of the beads. The lining was a brocaded ribbon in green and silver.



The daintiest bag of all was made of peach colored moire ribbon, and was finished with a casing at the top and no heading above. Sewed at intervals on the outside of the casing were clusters of tiny flowers made of silk, and when the bag was pulled up these flowers formed a solid mass around. The effect was charming.

There were two tucks that went around the bag. Each tuck was two inches wide, and to the edge of each of these tucks were sewed two inch long loops of crystal beads. Of course, the end of the first row of beads met the stitching of the second or lower tuck.

On the bottom tuck a single rose with leaves was sewed at side of the bag, and the idea was repeated on the opposite side of the bag. The lining was the same as the outside.

In making the tucks the ribbon is first seamed together at each side and then the tucks laid and stitched. Of course, the inside of a bag is cut the finished size of the outside. The bottom of the bag just described was gathered into a mold, and the usual bead loops hung from this.

WHILE there is a growing tendency to the unconventional in wedding ceremonies, and many engaged couples eliminate parental objection, worry, and financial expenditure by stepping around the corner and having the knot tied in the presence of few and sometimes no guests but the necessary witnesses, fortunately, for the glory of romance there still remains a large enough number of young people who prefer the more conventional way of approaching the altar.

Any expense involved in engagement announcements is borne by the parents of the girl. The announcement may be made in several ways. It may be done verbally by the girl to several of her close friends who may be trusted to pass along the good news to others interested. Or informal notes may be written announcing the fact. The young man, however, should not be the first to tell. With these informal notes, an afternoon "at home" may be added, so that friends may have an opportunity to stop in and tender their best wishes. Or the engagement may be announced in the society columns of a newspaper, in which event it should be sent either in the view with the girl's parents in order to make known his intentions and to acquaint them fully and frankly with his affairs and his prospects. Nor should he resent their investigation, since they are intrusting to him one who in their eyes is a treasure.

This formality having been gone through successfully, the announcement of the engagement comes from the young woman or from her family.

Fortunately for the greater number of happy marriages, long engagements are not favored nowadays, so that announcements are not made until the young woman's name or in that of her parents, and signed with the full name and address of the sender.

The parents of the young man should send pleasant greetings and best wishes following the announcement, accompanied with flowers or a gift, if both families are old acquaintances. If unacquainted with the prospective bride, they should arrange to call upon her and treat her with cordiality.

The parents of the groom are expected to call upon the bride and her family, but sometimes this more or less difficult occasion is made less formal by a dinner given by the man's parents, to which are invited the bride, her parents, and other guests, if desired. Or it is quite good form for the bride's parents to extend a dinner invitation to the parents of her fiance.

Then confronts the bride the quandary of whether the wedding shall be a large affair, to which all friends and acquaintances are bid or a less formal function in which the guest list is kept down to the smallest number possible. The bride's wishes and her parents' finances must settle this. The formal church wedding requires many invitations and announcements. For a large wedding there is inclosed in an envelope beside the invitation to the ceremony a card to be presented at the church, and also the card of invitation to the breakfast or reception following. But the simplest way to decide on what is correct in invitations and cards is to allow a good stationer to submit models from which to choose. The kind of paper and printing varies some from year to year, and he is in a position to advise and give a choice of several good forms of script and paper. The heavy white paper and Roman or English script is always tasteful. Also, he has the form to follow in the wording of the invitation. There is the slight difference in the wording of an invitation to the church and in one to a home wedding. The former reads: "Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Elsie, to," etc. The latter reads—"request the pleasure of your presence," etc.

A bride who is an orphan issues her invitations in the name of her nearest surviving relative. When a brother is the person who name is used, the invitations read: "Mr. George Henry Brown requests the honor, or pleasure, of your presence at the marriage of his sister, Mary." If a sister, or uncle, aunt, or grandfather, the exact degree of relationship is indicated. Should the marriage take place at the house of a friend, the wording would take this form: "The pleasure of your company is requested at the marriage of Miss Lucy Grath to Mr. James Cantor, on Wednesday, June the fifteenth, at half past four at the residence of," etc.

Invitations to a woman's second marriage take the same form as at her first, in the name of her parents or her nearest relative, using her own first and middle name supplemented by the surname of her deceased or divorced husband.

Invitations to a church wedding require no answer, but if a card is included for reception or wedding breakfast an answer is expected. Wedding invitations are issued not later than fifteen days and not earlier than four weeks before the date set for the marriage. A whole family must not be included in one single invitation. The heads of the house receive one, the unmarried sons and daughters are addressed: The Misses Brown and the Messrs. Brown. You cannot write Mr. and Mrs. Brown and family.

Announcement cards are posted the day of the wedding and may read either: "Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Brown announce the marriage of their daughter, Annabel, to Mr. ——," or "have the honor of announcing the marriage," etc.

When announcement cards are not issued in the name of the bride's nearest relatives they should read: "Mr. Peter Lee Goods and Miss Lillian Joseph have the honor of announcing their marriage on Saturday" (date and place).

Ease for the Sick

THE certain test for a bed spring is on the sick bed. Every noise, the slightest resistance to body movements, the least unevenness or sagging action are annoying—often painful to skin and muscles made tender by weakness or confinement in bed.

DOWNY REST Bed Springs are as soft as a feather bed. They adjust themselves to the contours of the body—to slightest pressure and assure individual rest.

Circulation uninterrupted from too much pressure on some parts of the body and not enough on other parts eliminates aches and numbness. "Tossing and rolling" is reduced to a minimum because DOWNY REST Springs are cooling—they encourage the body to remain in the same position comfortably.

DOWNY REST Springs keep the well, well—and hasten recovery for the sick. Ask your dealer—ask him today.

I want to go to TEXAS where there are TEXAS RANGERS (are there any left?); where Bad HOMBRES rustle CATTLE and ALMOST
Make a GETAWAY (but don't); where there is a
Lot of GROUND that isn't PAVEMENT; where there
Is a lot of SKY not ENTIRELY obscured by the WRIGLEY building; where, if you really WANT to get anywhere you have to use your LEGS or take a HORSE instead of a
TAXI (we would take a horse); where you
Breathe AIR instead of SMOKE; where you
Don't need eyes in the BACK of your head
To keep people from GUMSHOEING up to You and knocking your said block OFF; where
There aren't any BANKS (Oh, we're not talking About Houston), CONSEQUENTLY no Bank BANDITS;
Where villains come right out in the OPEN
And STAB you and don't NUDGE and OGLE in Darkened THEATERS; where virtue ALWAYS Triumphs and the WICKED are ALWAYS HANGED; where if a man LOVES you he Loves you like ——— and if he HATES
You you KNOW it. O, gee, I would Certainly LIKE to go to TEXAS (I mean the KIND of Texas you see in "Tracks"), which Is advertised as "Something DIFFERENT," and
Which IS (rather); which had only ONE
MISSPELLED word in a subtitle that
I SAW; and which (which, which, which,
Which, which, it gets to be a habit) introduces
Some mighty good PLAYERS I never saw before.
Texas, is you Texas as you IS Texas
In "Tracks"?

The gentleman around the corner asks why we can't have our movies all dolled up like they do the plays. He wants to know why, if we want to see a naughty bedroom comedy, we can't go to one theater that shows only said a. b. c.; why, if we wish to weep, we cannot go to a playhouse that specializes in plays guaranteed to make the salt drops flow; why, if we want animal pictures, we can't go to an animal "house."

The gentleman doesn't see just any reason at all why the "newsette" fans can't have their own innocuous stamping ground or why the drammer and tomtomdrammer enthusiasts mayn't have a little gathering place all their own.

It may interest you to know that the gentleman is the same gentleman who came across a couple of weeks ago with the idea of a "movie newspaper." He is speaking again now, and talking fast. Our ear is to the ground. Some day he's going to suggest something that will either turn the moving picture industry upside down or, or—here he comes!

Twenty-fourth Paper—History by Flashes of Lightning.

"MY Jeannie, lass," said Thomas Carlyle to his much-enduring wife on the gray evening of 1837 when he had written the last paragraph of "The French Revolution"—that plaintive yet manful one beginning, "And so here, O Reader," and drawing to a close on the words, "Ill stands it with me if I have spoken falsely"—"my Jeannie, lass," said he, "what they will do with this book none knows; but they have not had, for a two hundred years, any book that came more truly from a man's very heart, and so let them trample it under foot and hoof as they see best!"

"Pooh, pooh!" answered Jeannie lass, "they cannot trample that!"

And so husband and wife started on their evening walk, he with "nervous system that had got dreadfully irritated and inflamed," but also "with her dear blessing on me." He was forty-two years old, and into the book he had crushed and hammered and burned the best of himself.

"Pooh, pooh! they cannot trample that!"

Nor could they. Five and eighty years have not brought another book like it.

For here are portraits in flame—endless portraits, etched not in acid alone but seeming, sometimes, dashed in with blood and fire. Here are a six year march and countermarch and rout and scurrying to cover and rallying again and threat of debacle and windy promise of millenium. Here yeast fermenting and bursting ancient vessels all to pieces, and good wholesome bread, that some say shall be the bread of life to hungry-souled men, thrust into roaring ovens and coming out dough—or cinders that grit men's teeth and make them mad. No nourishment there at all; and the passing of these hundred and twenty-seven years has not taught men just the right way of that baking. But the product improves, many declare.

Here no book seeming written in a study, with an anxious wife shooing intrusive sounds away from a genius-man in disorder—too much bile in him and excess of scorn for all neighbors. Seeming, rather, welded in a smithy. Hark to the clang and clank of this—it is July 14, 1789—the Bastille is about to fall:

On, then, all Frenchmen that have hearts in your bodies. Roar with all your throats, of cartilage and metal, ye Sons of Liberty; stir spasmodically whatsoever of utmost faculty is in you, soul, body, or spirit; for it is the hour! Smite, thou Louis Tournay, cartwright of the Marais, old-soldier of the Regiment Dauphiné; smite at that Outer Drawbridge chain, though the fiery hail whistles round thee! Never, over nave or felloe, did thy axe strike such a stroke. Down with it, man; down with it to Orcus; let the whole accursed Edifice sink thither, and Tyranny be swallowed up for ever! Mounted, some say, on the roof of the guardroom, some 'on bayonets stuck into joints of the wall,' Louis Tournay smites, brave Aubin Bonnemère (also an old soldier) seconding him: the chain yields, breaks; the huge Drawbridge slams down, thundering (avec fracas). Glorious: and yet, alas, it is still but the outworks. The Eight grim Towers, with their Invalide musketry, their paving stones and cannon-mouths, still soar aloft intact—Ditch yawning impassable, stone-faced; the inner Drawbridge with its back towards us: the Bastille is still to take.

And so on—rage lashing and roaring; fires breaking out; blood flowing—blood which, our storming chronicler interjects, is "the ailment of new madness."; "smoke as of Tophet," he cries; "confusion as of Babel; noise as of the Crack of Doom"; and the great Bastille Clock ticking there in its Inner Court, "at its ease, hour after hour; as if nothing special, for it or the world, were passing."

That ticking of the Bastille Clock is as masterly as the knocking at the castle door in "Macbeth."

But on, on! through two more pages; "four hours now has the World-Bedlam roared." It sinks; there is a fluttering of white capitulation papers; then a mighty rushing sound sweeps across the page; then a shout bursts from it—"Victoire! La Bastille est prise!"

And Chapter VI. of Book V. of Part I. of Thomas Carlyle's "The French Revolution: A History" is finished.

This movement and this color, this sense of human-men, like us, doing in the world the work of myth-men, of men from a quartier tearing the ages down, are sustained for a thousand pages. These humans rise to incredible heroisms, fall into an abject failure from which the world still suffers, fight

Shakespeare's Plays Seldom Seen in London Theaters

By Archibald Haddon.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, May 20.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—The neglect of Shakespearean for other classical drama continues to be a regrettable feature of stage administration in London. The works of our national poet are much more frequently performed in Germany. The annual Shakespeare festival which the late Sir Herbert Tree established at His Majesty's theater ceased before his death. At the present moment not a single classic play is being performed on the central London stage.

GENEVIEVE WARD.

Only at the cheaply conducted "Old Vic" is the banner of the Bard of Avon regularly upheld. As many as thirty-one of the plays of Shakespeare have been revived at the "Old Vic" since 1914. That is a remarkable achievement. No other London theater has accomplished anything like it since the historic Shakespearean series by Charles Kean at the Princess and Samuel Phelps at Sadler's Wells in the mid-Victorian period.

The thirty-first revival of "Timon of Athens" was given the other day. The thirtieth was another rarely acted play of Shakespeare, "All's Well that Ends Well," which had not been popularly presented on the London stage since Phelps produced it at Sadler's Wells in 1852. The twenty-ninth was "Pericles," which London had not seen since 1854. In the previous season I witnessed at the "Old Vic" a splendid revival of another seldom acted piece, "Coriolanus," with the veteran Genevieve Ward, one of the greatest actresses of our time, performing the exacting part of Volumnia at the age of 83. Such work is of international interest and should be of world renown.

"Timon." One of Shakespeare's Pot Boilers.

Of this notable series of the stage it is curious that "Pericles" made the deepest impression. It was played with the text unexpurgated, including the Hogarthian scene in the brothel, but the effect was profoundly moving. "Timon of Athens," however, wears badly. It was probably one of Shakespeare's pot boilers, written to order in a hurry, possibly with a journeyman collaborator. It could only be made popularly acceptable nowadays by a pictorial representation such as Tree used to give at His Majesty's. Two banquet scenes—one real, the other mock—lend themselves to such treatment. The second banquet, where Timon regales his sycophantic time servers with dishes of water and smoke, provides a fine opportunity for a declamatory impression which, according to traditions, Phelps turned to wonderful account.

In regard to the other classics, London playgoers of the present generation would be completely ignorant of their stage possibilities if it were not for the work of one or two private play producing societies and for the personal enterprise of a new tragedienne, Miss Sybil Thorndyke. These play producing societies are a potent influence in the development of dramatic art in London. They are able by the device of a subscription system which obviates the taking of money at the doors to produce pieces which have been banned by the stage censor, who is a court official, the lord chamberlain. Their productions, usually given on Sunday nights, are supposed to be privately attended, but the audiences fill the largest west London theaters and they are largely composed of women. The Phoenix society's operations are confined to the Elizabethan and restoration plays. Women at the original productions of those works attended with their features covered by visors to hide their blushes. The Phoenix revivals are spoken as written, but the modern London woman would not dream of resorting to the visor.

The play producing societies in the last few seasons have given fascinating representations of such classics as Otway's "Venice," Jonson's "Volpone," John Dryden's "Marriage a la Mode," and Vanbrugh's excessively naughty "The Provoked Wife." The acting on these occasions is often more brilliant than anything seen on the contemporary public stage.

All the players are leading professional actors and actresses who are at

Something Else for the Critics to Worry About

By Sheppard Butler.

BROWSING entertainingly backward over the span of his life's achievements, Mr. Augustus Thomas, in his current memoirs, bestows a pleased paragraph upon one Tony, a western vaquero, whom he inserted bodily and effectively in his famous play, "Arizona":

Nan Sumner called my attention to Tony's naïve indifference to English profanity. He had learned good-bad all together, and was unable to make and untroubled by any distinction, so that when I got him into the play I was able to have him finish his lover's declaration with "and damn to hell my soul, I love you!"

MISS PAULINE LORD in "Anna Christie," at the Cort.

That was in 1897. Since then many playwrights have emulated Mr. Thomas in the matter of unfrocked diction, and, like him, have found gratification in being able to achieve some rather abandoned effects. Mr. Willard Mack's picturesque cuss-words for Miss Ulric in "Tiger Rose" are a vivid memory, as are those with which Mr. Paul Dickey provided his heroine in "The Broken Wing." Other instances will occur to you, of course; the literary offspring of Mr. Thomas' compact classic has been numerous and varied.

Now comes a further development. In the public prints of late, among the advertisements paid for at rates which may be had on application, there has appeared an announcement of "Anna Christie" embellished with the following legend:

"My God! What a play!"—Edna Ferber.

What follows is addressed to Miss Ferber.

My dear Miss Ferber, Mr. Thomas has lived to see the drama not only threatened with censorship but compelled to accept it in the modified form embodied in a volunteer jury system. He has lived to see a demand for a patriarchal overlord, like Judge Landis in baseball and Mr. Hays in the movies, charged with the task of seeing that playwrights behave themselves. That is what has happened to the playwrights.

Now you come, decorating dramatic criticism with lusty he-words and inviting who knows what hidden perils. Even now, in many respects, the critic's lot is not a happy one. The Messrs. Shubert, when they do not like a writing man, take from him the boon of admission to their theaters. The Palace Music hall, compiling for its façade a roster of "leading critics," including Mr. Archie Bell of Cleveland, makes pointed omissions calculated to cause pain to Mr. Ashton Stevens and your correspondent. There are other ingenious means of torture, of which perhaps you know not.

But we have not yet been threatened with a censorship for critics. Do you, gentle lady, want to be the one to bring it upon us? Granting your review of "Anna Christie" the cardinal virtues of terseness and ambiguity (is it a knock or a boost?) one still must venture the observation that it is—well, you know. In the name of a large company of solicitous scribes I ask you, won't you please cut out the rough stuff?

McIntyre and Heath: An Appreciation from the Quadrangles.

"As to McIntyre and Heath," writes a correspondent from the scholastic precincts of the University of Chicago, "isn't there some way to tell the younger generation how good that team is? This is my first experience with them. I had always thought they were a couple of old minstrels—the kind that march before the street parade band in one-horse towns. When I tell my friends at the university how really fine McIntyre and Heath are they laugh me off as an amiable moron. Those who go come back to apologize to me. Is it the fate of every actor over 30 to be put into the old peoples' home as far as young folks are concerned? I wonder—perhaps I'm just unfortunate in the selection of my friends. But I claim that any team which can pull the hoary gag, 'When Greek meets Greek they open a restaurant,' and make the audience laugh, is a mighty clever team."

Quite right. James McIntyre and Thomas Heath are rare artists, and Something Else to Worry About

their suave characterizations of the Afro-American in his more whimsical moods rate as nothing less than classics of the theater. The hopeful, happy go lucky, ne'er-do-wells they impersonate are the creations of sheer skill in acting and faithful study of racial traits—mellow sympathy and fine feeling brought to the sometimes thankless uses of buffoonery.

If they lack any measure of appreciation it is due, I should say, not so much to their age as to their surroundings. Not every "actor over 30" is doomed to neglect by the younger generation. I know an adolescent enthusiast who adores William Gillette and would travel many miles to see Theodore Roberts again in the flesh. Age has its enchantment behind the footlights, and it is an enchantment frequently more potent than that of youth.

But McIntyre and Heath have been doomed these many years to appearance in tawdry, commonplace entertainments, wherein no gleam of intelligence is permitted to emerge except through the medium of their own contributions. It was, in a measure, Bert Williams' tragedy; it is the tragedy of every player who finds his material in the colored race and contrives to be something more than a clown. Charles Gilpin escaped it once, when they found him for "The Emperor Jones," but Gilpin's future is an uncertain quantity, and no one knows it better than he.

Some day, perhaps, a play will be written for McIntyre and Heath. It is a consummation devoutly to be wished. Meanwhile, they approach the end of their Chicago engagement. A week hence they will take "Red Pepper" away, seeking a hospitable haven in New York. Godspeed to them. They deserve a better show.

News of Plays and Players.

Miss Marion Abbott, an actress of long and varied experience, has arrived at the Cort and assumed the rôle in "Anna Christie" made vacant by the death, a week ago, of Miss Eugenie Blair. Miss Blair's passing was one of those tragic incidents that make the careers of the players sometimes far more dramatic than those of the characters they visualize. She was not well when the play began, but insisted on going through with her scene in the first act—a searching bit of characterization, performed with consummate skill. Then she went to her dressing room and died. Her part did not call for further appearance in the play, and none in the audience knew what had happened behind the scenes.

She was buried last Wednesday in a Chicago cemetery, far from home, and with only her daughter, Miss Eleanor Montell, to join the members of the company at the grave. Miss Montell has hurried back to Boston to act in "The Tavern," the play goes on at the Cort, and of Eugenie Blair, once famous, there remains no more than a memory.

MISS ELIZABETH HINES.

She is the daughter of a New York newspaper man and comes to us as the singing and dancing heroine of "The O'Brien Girl" at Cohan's Grand. Chicago has found her adorable, but Mr. Cohan wants to take her away soon to be the central figure of his new musical comedy, "Pretty Nellie Kelly." So she faces something of a dilemma.

Impending Joys

"Hollywood Follies" (Playhouse, May 28)—A home-grown diversion sponsored by Will Morrissey, whose "Overseas Revue" was a lively incident of a season or two back. It will run largely to song, dance, and bits of travesty on the picture makers, enacted by some of the filmdom luminaries themselves. Miss Mae Marsh and her sister Marguerite are in the cast, as are Joseph Swickard, Roscoe Ails, Kate Pullman, Francis Renault, Peggy Worth, Betty Moore, and the vaudeville team of Moran and Mack.

"The Hotel Mouse" (Apollo, May 29)—Miss Frances White and Taylor Holmes in a musical comedy based on a French mystery farce. The book is by Guy Bolton, the lyrics by Clifford Grey, and the music by Ivan Caryll and Armond Vecsey. Fay Marbe, Barnett Parker, Stewart Baird, Al Sexton, Frank Green, Richard Temple, Violet Duvall, Edna Duvall, and Marion Phillips will be among those present.

"The Divine Creek" (Woods, May 29)—Bayard Veiller's remaking of a French comedy, originally called "The Claw and the Wing." Miss Florence Reed has the leading rôle, and others involved in the proceedings are Francis Byrne, Percy Ames, William B. Mack, Frederick Burt, Faire Binney, Francis Hackett, and Rosalind Cornliss.

"Irene" (Studebaker, June 5)—One of the most persistently popular of musical comedies, long familiar to Chicago playgoers, but good, they think, for a return engagement. In its present manifestation the title rôle is sung by Miss Patti Harrold, daughter of Orville Harrold, the tenor.

the Actors' Equity having barred Otis Skinner from joining it because McLaughlin is not a member of the Producing Managers' association.

To the Palace some time this week will come Miss Delyle Alda, the flashing young soprano who visited us with Mr. Ziegfeld's 1919 "Follies," to succeed Miss Polly Walker in the title rôle of the new music play, "Molly Darling." Miss Alda had been sought for the part when the company was organized, but was not then available. Various other changes are being made in the conduct of the piece—superfluous words removed, the action quickened, and a salutary infusion of "pep" administered all along the line. Thus the showmen, if they are wise, improve each shining hour.

DELYLE ALDA.

The Schildkrauts, father and son, are now pitted against each other in friendly rivalry for Chicago patronage. Rudolph, the father, is acting in Yiddish repertoire at Glickman's Palace theater on Blue Island avenue, while Joseph, the son, continues his amazing performance of "Lilion" at the Garrick. Indeed, most of the Schildkrauts are here, for Mrs. Joseph (Elise Bartlett until she was married a few weeks ago) is likewise in Chicago, abiding with her spouse in lodgings on the north side.

The Colonial is dark for the summer, but its doors will open this afternoon for the gay revels attendant upon the American Theatrical hospital's tenth annual benefit. In this enterprise the players are serving themselves, for it is the hospital's task to care for them, without pay if need be, when its services are needed. Frank Bacon, Will Rogers, Pauline Lord, George Marion, Joseph Schildkraut, Eva Le Gallienne, McIntyre and Heath, Mae Marsh, Vivian Martin, Lynne Overman, May Robson, Richard Carle, and many others have promised to appear, and there will be complete chorus numbers from "The O'Brien Girl" and "Molly Darling."

Miss Margaret Anglin, free after an exhausting season in "The Woman of Bronze," is sailing for Greece, where she will explore the Greek theaters which have so interested her always. There are nine or ten rumors afloat as to her plans for the future, including a lively report that she will appear in a dramatization of Dickens' "Bleak House," doubling, as Januaschek did, in the rôles of Lady Dedlock and Hortense.

Encouraged, perhaps, by the prosperity of Robert McLaughlin's "Decameron Nights" in London, A. H. Woods has dusted off the manuscript of "The Pearl of Great Price," by the same author (he has had the play for years) and promises to produce it soon. It is allegorical and spacious, and will cost a lot of money. . . . Other news concerning McLaughlin is that various American managers are interested in his "Decameron Nights" because of its unique opportunities for the display of nudity on the stage, and that he is having trouble with his summer stock company in Cleveland, liberty on Sunday nights, and they perform for nominal fees for love of their art. Histrionic traditions are kept alive by their unselfish labor, which cannot be too highly appreciated.

Unfortunately, the work of the play producing societies is not appraised as it deserves. The oldest organization of the sort, the Stage society, is in financial difficulties. Founded in 1899, the Stage society has done invaluable service by familiarizing Londoners with the best output of the continental dramatists.

A rough and tumble farce, "Tons of Money," has scored the biggest financial success here since "Charley's Aunt." The Shaftesbury theater, where it was produced, had fallen on evil days and had experienced about half a dozen consecutive failures. Now there is no getting into bookable parts of the house for months ahead. After "Tons of Money" had run a few weeks the fortunate producers divided £4,000 at luncheon—the proceeds only of premiums received for foreign colonial rights, apart altogether from ordinary takings. Those rights already have been taken up by eleven countries, comprising the United States, Canada, Australia, South Africa, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, France, Spain, Italy, and India. The irony of the success (for some people) is that "Tons of Money" had been lying on the shelf seven years before anybody had the pluck to produce it.

Whenever a first night audience in London is thoroughly dissatisfied with a new play it boos as the curtain falls, or hisses particular incidents during the performance. That is what happened a few evenings ago to a bedroom farce adapted from French, which was produced at the Duke of York's theater. I had not heard these dreadful sounds at a premiere for several months prior to this occurrence. The practice ceased during the war. The regular playgoers then were greatly outnumbered in the theaters by heterogeneous assemblies of people from all parts of the earth, people who asked only to be amused. It would have been useless then to boo, because the applause would have drowned any protest.

After the armistice theater audiences gradually resumed their pre-war character, and that body of militant first-nighters, the gallery first-nighters' club, was reëstablished. These clubmen are a coterie of genuine theatergoers who, as the saying is, know what's what.

Shakespearean Revivals Crowd French Theaters

By Henry Wales.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 20.—[By Special Cable.]—In these days when theaters throughout the world are languishing, supposedly giddy France is giving the best to its audiences in revivals of Shakespearean dramas. The Comédie in the Champs Elysees with even the obscure piece, "Measure for Measure," is attracting unbelievable audiences, while the national theater Odeon is besieged with a revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with a Mendelssohn score. Pitoeff is conducting the Shakespeare revival at the Comédie.

Along with the English pet classics Paris is giving attention largely to Wagner. The Theater Chambps Elysees Opera company, with Teatro Reggio of Turin, Italy, is presenting a program of Wagner and Rossini with success. "Lohengrin" is repeatedly called for by the patrons of the national opera. The great national theater this week also brought to the Parisian public Diaghelief's Russ ballet, opening with Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty," after a remarkable run during the winter in London.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession," barred from New York, opened this week without a ripple of excitement. Blasé Parisians evidently consider it too tame. The critics predict an early close.

Silesia Plans Festival of Hauptmann's Plays

By George Seldes.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, May 20.—[By Special Cable.]—In honor of Gerhardt Hauptmann, Germany's greatest dramatist and one time winner of the Nobel prize, Silesia, his native state and the scene of "Die Weber," his greatest drama, has decided to hold a festival series of Hauptmann plays from Aug. 8 to 21. The event will also celebrate his sixtieth birthday.

GERHARDT HAUPTMANN.

The festival will take place in three theaters of Breslau. All the Hauptmann plays will be given under the instruction of leading producers, with stars drawn from every big theater in Germany. The Silesian authorities were unwilling to appropriate the funds necessary for the productions, but protests from all over the country have induced them to find other administrative items that may be reduced in their economy campaign.

Hauptmann, too, is the feature of the coming theatrical week, which in its dullness and deadliness is typical of the general condition of the German stage at the end of the season. His "Versunkene Glocke" ("Sunken Bell") at Reinhardt's Grosses schuspielhaus, under the direction of Karl Heinz Martin, is practically the only opening of consequence announced for the near future. "Das Opfer" ("The Sacrifice"), the first new play by Hauptmann in many years, was performed successfully in Dresden, but has not been seen in Berlin.

Races Reduce Roman Attendance at Theater

By V. De Santo.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, May 20.—[By Special Cable.]—Owing to the international steeplechase meet held mornings and afternoons throughout the week at the Villa Borghese, which absorbed the interest of Romans, no novelties have been shown at the theaters. The three opera houses, Costanzi, Adriano, and Morgana, continued old repertoires before half full houses. The prose theaters attendance also was small. The managers foresaw that the horse meet would tire out thousands of theatergoers and for that reason stuck to the old programs rather than try a new venture.

Only two performances attracted attention, the first, "Uragano," by Vittorio Locchi, at the Theater Quirino Friday night, and the second, Verdi's "Aïda," at the Costanzi Saturday night. "Uragano" is a drama with a medieval subject after the style of Benelli, the author of "Jest," which ran several months in New York three years ago. The play is not new, having been written several years before the war and produced with little success, but since then the author, who died heroically in the war and wrote one of the most beautiful war poems ever written in Italy, called "Lasagra di Santa Gorizia," has become famous, and the Romans listened to "Uragano" with the deepest interest bordering on reverence.

"Aïda" is notable because it represents the fiftieth anniversary of the opera, which was given the first time in Cairo, Egypt, May 13, 1872.

East" was NOT adapted from "East Lynne." There was a picture, "East Lynne," made from the book. Mabel Ballin starred in it. You're entirely welcome.

P. F. M.: So you don't think the popular writers write any new stuff! Well—and again, well! It must be wonderful to be able to "quote Shakespeare by the yard." You fill me now with envy, P. F. M.!

FRANKYE: The "young Apollo" in "Orphans of the Storm" was Joseph Schildkraut. I don't know that I would describe him as the "kat's pajamas" but he was certainly somebody to see!

A. L. C.: Like a fight, don't you? Well—so do I—but if Mr. Keaton wants to say he coined "optience" Ashsworry. He is probably only the victim of the press agent, who—probably—is hard put for new material.

A. H. S.: How does it feel to be sports editor of a college sheet? Wish you'd send me one of the papers. I agree with you that Mr. Von Stroheim did some mighty fine acting in "Foolish Wives." Hope you found the matches. They tell me there is nothing more tragic than not to be ABLE to find the matches when one's pipe goes out. Write again. (Please! Mustn't ever forget to say please.)

J. S. N. U.: Miss Dupont's name is Margaret Armstrong. She is said to have been born in Frankfort, Ky., and to have received her education somewhere in Illinois. Her home address is 4937 Maplewood, Los Angeles. Do you still think she's "Patty," who lived with "Old Man Day" and went to parties with her kid brother?

LEE: That's what the "Kick Korner's" for, Lee. Kicks! For or agin—lettem fly! Quit your worrying, nice Fan!

P. F. K.: If I'm not mistaken, Harry Morey is the man you mean. Yes, he is a good actor and has held his own through the years. Bebe Daniels played in stock at one time. Yessah, Mildred Davis is reported engaged to Harold Lloyd. Glad?

BOBBY MAKE BELIEVE: Keep right on make-believing. You're not good at hints or suggests, ARE you?

MAMIE: Stamped and self-addressed envelope for the information on scenario and list of firms that accept scenarios. No trouble at all—or, if it is, trouble's our middle name and also the name of our job, and we like it.

The solemn trio engaged herewith in the earnest business of looking pleasant for the photographer devotes its moments of relaxation to acting of varied excellence in "Lilies of the Field" at Powers'. From left to right: Miss Josephine Drake, who plays the talkative lady of easy virtue; Norman Trevor, the "greatest spender in New York," and Miss Clara Moores, the lovely and sorrowing grass widow with whom he falls in love.

ITS OBJECT: OBJECTION.

OWED TO MAE TINEE.

Mae Tinée, you've grown spiteful, old thing,
That at sob stuff you take such a fling.
Why you'd even pan
"The Miracle Man"
If it came out this season, by jing!
You're clever, of that there's no doubt,
But you long ago found that out,
And you've got so upstage
That you fly in a rage,
'Less you like what the story's about.
Now, m'dear, deny this, if you dare,
The picture fans don't give a care
For your personal spite.
We want you to write
Reviews that are decently fair.

P. S.—Or your paper should give you the air.

[Editor's note: If there is one thing we love, it is good anonymous poetry.]

My dear Mac: Being a gadder I have just gotta see the "pitchers." For heaving's sake tell somebody to lay off the rich hero [heroine], poor boy [girl], stuff. I've seen six the last week. The poor little laundress, who simply captivates the rich hero, and the poor fisherboy who wins the heart of the rich heiress, is getting on my nerves. Can't we have some honest to goodness, common sense ideas in pictures? Besides in the language of a British war buddy, "It isn't done."

J. W.

Browsers Name More Films Held Dear in Memory

Dear Mae Tinee: Browsing back, I recall so clearly Blanche Sweet in "Karin." I did love that picture—Miss Sweet, Mabel Van Buren, Thomas Meighan, and dear Theodore Roberts—I miss that combination. Many other good actors are there and actresses also, but these when they played together, I did love. Miss Sweet I should love to see in some more pictures. I always liked her. H. M. H.

My Dear Mae Tinee: Thinking back to the old pictures, I believe "The Cheat" is one of the best I've ever seen, new or old, and Marguerite Clark's first picture was awfully good, but I don't remember the title, and "Barbary Sheep" with Elsie Ferguson. Then we saw a comedy years and years ago that we sat through twice, an unheard of thing, "The Rise and Fall of Micky Malone" or something like that; it was really funny. Did you think that Joseph Schildkraut as the chevalier was like Priscilla Dean, especially as he stood on guard on the stairs? I could almost think it was Priscilla Dean taking his part.

GLADYS TROUTMAN.

[Editors' Note: Yes, come to think of it, there was a resemblance in the scene you mention.]

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Genius Arises from Chicago's Industrial Life

By Mme. X.

FLORENCE, Italy.—[Special Correspondence.]—Properly to appreciate Chicago the real Chicagoan should go forth into the world. There he or she can see how far the light that is ours shines out across many countries and into far distant communities. At home we are apt to think of our city as a wilderness of lowering smoke, restless energy, clamorous tumult; not as a sweet scented, soul inspiring place in which to live; certainly not as an environment in which the esthetic, the highly intellectual, the poetic could be born and nourished.

And yet from the intensely practical race of men, industrial giants, who created Chicago have sprung, in the second and third generations, artists, musicians, poets, writers, and teachers whose achievements have been notable and whose names are famous. Here in Italy, in both Rome and Florence, I have realized as never before, that it takes the tremendously material triumph which is ours to provide the right kind of soil for those more permanent fruits of civilization, literature, art, music, learning. The same overmastering energy which has turned that lonely swamp on the southwest shores of Lake Michigan in less than a century into the fifth city in size in the world, when devoted to culture develops a like success.

Honored by France.

Could anything be more prosaic, practical, and unesthetic than to be a dealer in sporting goods? And yet from a sporting goods firm has come one of the foremost musical geniuses of today, Albert Spalding, the famous violinist. He lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Spalding, in Florence, when not on a professional tour. Recently he had the highest honor ever proffered to an American musician by France. He was asked to play with the Paris conservatory.

When he finished the program the leader said: "Monsieur Spalding, it is unnecessary for me to say anything about your playing. Were we satisfactory to you?"

The Spaldings live in a delightful palazzo on the Lungarno, overlooking the swift, brown torrent of the Arno, and with a view of the sunsets behind the pointed cypresses marching so slowly up the side of the hill known as Bello Sguardo. Their music room is a stately and beautiful room, high ceilinged and spacious, with yellow embroidered hangings at the soaring windows, paneled oyster white walls, and some ancient Italian furniture, but not much, as the resonance of a music room should not be dulled by much upholstery.

The dining room is adjoining and is also an imposing room.

Italian ceilings are an unfailing source of wonder to the American tourist. One looks up and up in search of the roof of the room before the eye finally encounters it. Even in the simplest hotels the ceilings are far above the expectations of the non-Italian.

Standards of Comfort.

"Why waste so much available room?" the average American asks. It is an Italian tradition, and the Italians are, of all the people the writer knows, the most conservative, and give up old established ways with more difficulty than do any others, even the English.

The result is stately rooms which are next to impossible to heat up to the American idea of comfort. Our standard is, of course, considered by the foreigners as most unhealthful, but if you have been brought up within hail of the hideous, but delicious, American radiator, it is hard to become acclimatized to the splendid chill which is the atmosphere of the Italian interior.

But we are wandering far from the Walter Spaldings' charming Florentine home. There is a salon (one does not have parlors or sitting rooms here) which is worth coming across the ocean to see. It is decorated by another of Chicago's gifted offsprings, Gardner Hale, son of Prof. William Gardner Hale, formerly of the University of Chicago. It is Fragonnard and Watteau and the rest of those old French painters done into modern terms and "then some." A more utterly chic and enchanting example of mural decorations it would be hard to find. There is an exquisite sophistication about the designs and the delicate, poignant coloring which is a delight to the eye. The same gay cavaliers and flirtatious dames, even the same sportive spaniels of the times of the wanton French courts of the various Louis (it's hard to make Louis a plural), are depicted by the artist, but with an ineffable spirit of mockery as if he were jeering gently at the personages and scenes he presents. He has also an unmistakably Chinese accent in his painted speech, a quality which suggests the high days of Chinese painting.

Art as a Livelihood.

It has long seemed to the writer that the best outlook for the painter of anything but that most lucrative branch of brushwork, portraits, was in the line of mural decorations. It is not the mode nowadays to hang gold framed oil paintings on the walls of the homes of the rich, and not many, even among the rich, have picture galleries for a shrine for such works of art. Therefore, as painters are turned out by the thousands every year and must be fed and clothed, why don't they devote their energies and imaginations to such interior decorations as this I have tried, inadequately, I fear, to describe?

It was in this way that the Italian and French builders of great and splendid houses in the days of the renaissance adorned their salons and gave employment to the famous artists of their day. It is a solution of what often threatens to become an acute problem, the career for many of the band of young and eager youth which has chosen art as a means of livelihood.

Chicagoans of Note.

It is not only as the mother of many men and women of marked artistic talent that Chicago is worthy of a high place among the cities of the earth, but as the city where scholars have risen to a recognized eminence which has carried them far out into the world. The president of Yale, James R. Angell, for many years a member of the faculty of the University of Chicago, is a recent example of this recognition. The head of the Rockefeller endowment fund, the greatest of its kind in history, Prof. Vincent, also made his name at the University of Chicago. There is no more distinguished scientist today than Prof. Michaelson of the same institution of learning.

A Chicagoan, the late Col. Parker, devised and inaugurated a new system of teaching the young which has attained recognition all over the land as an advance over old methods and which has been incorporated, in part, if not entirely, in all schools of the present time. So Chicago as an educational factor is well recognized everywhere.

This being the case, it is not surprising to find a manifestation of this impulse in two of the principal schools for girls in Italy, enterprises which have been established by Chicago women. Miss Risser and Miss White in Rome, and Miss Mary Nixon and Miss Sheldon in Florence, have made it possible for young American girls to come over to this shrine of history and art, Italy, and to study close at hand many things which are considered as indispensable to a good education today.

Spring in Florence.

So here at present in a lovely villa on the slopes of Fiesole are the following girls from Chicago under the care of Miss Nixon and Miss Sheldon; Miss Florence Addington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keane Addington; Miss Louise Rodgers, Miss Josephine Underwood of Evanston, and Miss Daphne Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Stanley Field.

Mrs. Field is enduring the rigors of a Florentine spring so as to be near her daughter. Spring in Florence is a favorite theme for poets, but they must either be a vigorous set of mortals and more impervious than the rest of mankind to the bitter winds that sweep down the valley of the Arno from the snow clad Appennines, or they must be a fine line of prevaricators.

It must be admitted that the Chicago young women flourish in the inclemencies which do service as climate here. They all look blooming. Daily they walk the same paths where once strolled Savanarola, Boccaccio, Dante, Michael Angelo, Raphael, Fra Angelico, and the rest of that glorious galaxy, not to mention that most interesting of mediaeval families, the Medicis. The indefinable influences of such predecessors must be felt by even the most impervious mortals, and Chicago girls are far from being impervious mortals.

Making Life Interesting.

There is no city in Italy that has a more dramatic past. Its streets were always the battleground for many warring factions. In those dark and winding ways, where, even today the houses are so built that no one can get into them when the heavily barred front doors are closed, many a hand to hand fight was waged in the days of Lorenzo and Cosimo Medici and in the later times when the people fought the Bourbons and their other oppressive rulers.

It has always been hard to govern the Florentines. They are a vigorous and combative folk and are quite used to looking after themselves and their interests.

Therefore it is merely a repetition of an oft told tale when the Communisti and Fascisti fight hand to hand, as they have been doing this last week. There has been a Fascisti convention here, and as a daily amusement the more hot blooded members of this extraordinary collection of youth have made it a practice to go in a marching, singing body to hunt out the Communisti in their abiding places in the poorer quarters of the city, especially in the part known as San Frediano.

The taunts of the fascisti never fail to bring out their adversaries, and thereupon ensue street fights of sometimes a rather bloody order, though there are seldom more awesome weapons used than sturdy cudgels. Occasionally the women relatives and friends of the Communisti will empty from upper windows on the heads of Fascisti certain of household equipment more useful than esthetic, which throwing helps in the housework while it annoys the enemy immensely. At the critical moment the city authorities, who are not eager to mix in the fray, will send out a body of dashing cavalrymen with drawn sabers to make both parties go about their business and restore order to the narrow, winding streets.

So you see, living in Florence is by no means a rather dull affair, nor is the difference between now and yesterday so great as to take away from the imaginative the pleasures of association of ideas. While life is delightful and even elegant here, it has a spice which is not unwelcome.

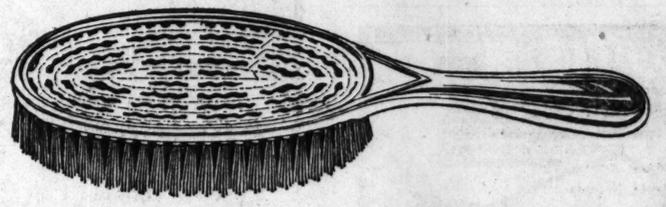
SANITAX

A Clean Hair Brush

That Makes Your Hair Beautiful



Say "SANITAX" when you want the best hairbrush

FOR hundreds of years the principle of hairbrush construction had been the same—'till SANITAX came. The SANITAX upset all old-fashioned, unsanitary ideas of hairbrushes. The SANITAX Brush (patented) is not only everything in fine appearance, long life and excellent, long bristles that any other brush of the highest grade is—but is different from any hair brush made, because it can be perfectly cleaned in every nook and corner—boiled and sterilized, if need be, every day without the slightest injury.

You need a SANITAX Brush for your hair

Just as you need a soft, clean towel for your face—if you value your complexion—so do you need a clean brush for your hair—if you respect it and wish it to be beautiful. There is no brush like the SANITAX—water runs right through its open metal back, air and sunlight can penetrate every corner. There is no wood to warp, no metal that will rust, no glue to melt. Extra fine, long bristles are hand drawn with non-rustable wire. These features make SANITAX unlike any hairbrush you ever knew.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Proceeds of Poppy Day to Be Given to War Veterans

By Kate Webber.

PLANS are being completed for the observance of poppy day, on May 29, which is to be observed in Chicago under the direction of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. Though the organization has been in existence for twenty years, this is the first time an appeal has been made for assistance in maintaining the veterans of the civil, Spanish, and world wars.

Poppies will be sold on the streets by thousands of women and girls, and numerous affairs are to be held before May 29, among them a musicale and tea on Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. H. W. Dubiske, 3400 Sheridan road, and a fete at the Palette and Chisel club.

President Harding has expressed his sympathy with the purpose of the veterans in their request that the people at large shall wear a poppy on Memorial day. His message says in part, "It is a most appropriate mode of testifying our remembrance and recognition of the great obligation of the nation to those who gave everything in service."

Mrs. Charles S. Clark heads the club women who are interested in the day and its purpose. Among the women's organizations that are lending help are the Women's Advertising club, the Gold Star Mothers, the Illinois Women's Press association, the Chicago Society of Artists, and the Illinois Colony club.

Charles W. Gillett is general chairman of the organization committee, Capt. Harry Hudson, vice chairman; Mrs. Herbert Jones, secretary; John A. McCormick, treasurer; Edward C. O'Brien, director of contests, and Samuel J. Sherer, manufacturers chairman.

The advisory committee includes Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. Watson F. Blair, Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. William Wrigley Jr., Mrs. Joseph Fish, Mrs. T. R. Frankenthal, Mrs. Frank Gage, Marshall Field, Kenesaw M. Landis, Bishop Samuel Fallows, Charles C. Fitzmorris, and Maj. F. L. Beals.

MISS FLORENCE E. NEILL.

The Girl Scouts of Chicago are busy completing plans for an interesting program, including an operetta, "The Land of Chance," to be given next Saturday evening at Aryan Grotto. There also will be numbers by the Girl Scout band and divertissements by the Pavley-Oukrainsky dancers. Miss Florence E. Neill, chairman of the Scouts, is active in arrangements for the affair, the proceeds from which will go toward carrying on the work.

MRS. MARK P. MEARS.
[Jarvis Weed Photo.]

Mrs. Mark P. Mears has been elected president of the Illinois Council of Parent-Teacher associations, to succeed Mrs. William F. Young. Mrs. Mears will give a report of the national congress of mothers and Parent-Teacher associations, held recently in Washington, at the spring meeting of the Parent-Teacher associations of Chicago and vicinity, to be held on Friday at 2:30 o'clock at the Woman's City club. Other speakers also will be on the program.

MRS. HARRY W. DUBISKE.
[Steffens Photo.]

A musical and tea will be given on Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Harry W. Dubiske, 3400 Sheridan road, the proceeds to go toward the permanent relief fund for the American Veterans of Foreign Wars. Cyrena Van Gordon and Jose Mojica will sing. This is one of several affairs to be given preceding Poppy day, which is to be observed on May 29.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

A SONG FOR UPPER BERTHS.

Hannibal, Hannibal was a man
Built on a brave, heroic plan;
Scared the Romans, Hannibal did. . . .
Beaucoup Carthaginian kid,
Minstrels chaunt his sterling worth—
But he never dressed in an upper berth.

Alexander, the so-called great,
Did he carry a potent pate?
Was he the pussy cat's miaut?
Did he? Was he? . . . Lady! . . . Wow!
But then, he merely conquered the earth. . . .
He never dressed in an upper berth.

Napoleon Bonaparte, what of him?
Quite a bird for verve and vim;
Grabbed 'em young and used 'em rough;
Made 'em holler: Hold! Enough!
Short of stature . . . long on girth. . . .
Could he dress in an upper berth?

Cæsar, Hector, Brian Boru,
Henry Eighth, Rameses II.,
Adam, Abel, Solomon, Saul,
Cassanova, Priam, and Paul;
All of rare immortal worth,
Of their doughty deeds no dearth. . . .
But could they dress in an upper berth?

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Modern Italy is much more a fact than it was in the pre-war days when the tourists thought the whole of Europe was a playgrounds run by the companies which managed them, their tours, their moneys, and their letters. Nowadays strangers read of Italian politics and are interested in elections and in the doings of the many different political parties which help steer the ship of state.

A Visit by the King.

The king came to Florence last week to open an exhibit of modern art, and was received with a clamor which we do not know was possible here. He is popular in Tuscany, in spite of the restlessness of the people hereabouts. Almost unescorted he went on foot into the San Frediano district, where the most rebellious element lives. There he walked among the people, talking to them, and showing a confidence in their good intentions which was a remarkable evidence of courage as well as of good statesmanship.

The people greeted him most enthusiastically. Women knelt in the street to kiss his hand or the skirt of his coat. Children ran after him with poor little posies. He stopped often to lift up or pat the head of some near-by child. When he visited the soldiers' hospital he made a bed to bed call on every soldier, nor would he let his escort come between him and "his children," as he called the wounded men. He said to those accompanying him, "Stand back, please; you are keeping the air from the suffering."

He gave everybody in Florence a chance to see him as he drove up and down the streets. Among his escort was Gen. Diaz, and let no one think he is not the people's idol. They followed him in great crowds whenever he walked abroad, as he did several times. There is a certain likeness between him and Gen. [illegible] of France. Perhaps it is a matter of expression. Both have rather serious, gentle casts of countenance when their business in life is considered. Neither has that ferocious look history has taught us to expect from those dedicated to wholesale extermination of their kind. But, then, neither Washington nor Grant had a ferocious aspect, so probably the idea is not founded on fact.

In Days of Old.

Florence is a favorite haunt of Chicagoans. Besides those already mentioned there are established here with all the permanence which a settled household indicates such ex-Chicagoites as James W. Ellsworth, who has recently returned from the U. S. A. He has the most notable dwelling here. It was one of the finest of the Medici country places, and is situated well up on the hillside dominated by Fiesole. It was for many years known as the Palmieri villa and it was there that Queen Victoria used to stay on her annual visits to Florence.

It is said to have been the villa designated by Boccaccio as the one where his jocund company gathered during the terrible days of the black plague, in—was it the twelfth century? There they entertained each other with the tales made so famous by Boccaccio. There the story of the patient Griselda was greeted by the knights as the proper state of mind for women. There the history of Valentine and Orson gave a thrill to the fair ladies in their high peaked headgears. They laughed over many of those lively and salacious tales which have for recent generations been put out of the reach of the lay reader.

Not far away from Mr. Ellsworth's villa is that of Horace Oakley. The Arthur Actons' home is in the same part of the suburbs of Florence. Mrs. Acton was Miss Hortense Mitchell, a daughter of the late William Mitchell and the youngest sister of John J. Mitchell, the well known banker.

Peace and Longevity.

About twenty-five years or so ago there was no better known family in north side society than the Hales who lived in Dearborn avenue. The eldest daughter, Miss Mary Hale, married an Italian of distinguished family, Signor Mattini, and has lived here ever since. Her sister, Miss Harriet Hale, married Clarence Woolley, from whom she was later divorced. After her marriage she spent most of her time away from Chicago. The brother, Samuel Hale, went to Canada, where he married a lively Irish girl.

Mrs. Hale, the mother of the family, came to live in Florence with her eldest daughter. She is today a much alive octogenarian with great powers of enjoyment still left her. Perhaps the elimination of steam heat, shrill telephone bells incessantly ringing, and the rest of the confusion which we call life in Chicago, is conducive to longevity. Mme. Mattini is now a widow living with her mother and quite completely a Florentine. There is a numerous and enthusiastic Anglo-American colony here. Among them are many writers, musicians, artists and poets. All such have an acceptable excuse for living here.

Among the transient dwellers in Florence just now are Mrs. Alexander F. Stevenson, her daughter, Miss Mary Stevenson, and Mrs. Harry F. Williams. The latter plans to be away from Chicago a year or more. She will join Mr. and Mrs. Magnus for the summer. Mrs. Albert Kales, who spent the winter here, is just at present in Rome with her daughters. She intends to pass the summer abroad. Mr. Kales is expecting to join her in England.

Hungry Tea Enthusiasts.

There is in Florence, as in every other continental city, a colony of Russian refugees. Most of them are trying to make a living in some way or other. There is here a restaurant, the "Orsa Bianco" (White Bear), run by former members of the Russian nobility, men who have served their country in high diplomatic positions, where the patrons are waited on by Russian princesses in neat white aprons. A Russian count has set up a little tearoom near by the principal hotels.

A niece of the late Count Cassini, one time Russian ambassador at Washington, has a dressmaking establishment which she administers with more capacity than many of her countrymen show. The real Russian nobleman or woman is not born to business, and a certain oriental fatalism and indolence hamper their activities in a fashion and to a degree which is incomprehensible to the average American to whom business is the breath of life, say what we may.

In Capri there was a most picturesque Russian tearoom run by a couple of former Russian officers, who had never before waited on customers and who did so with an earnest and incapable manner most interesting to their patrons. One was enormously tall, quite the tallest mortal I ever saw. The other was the average height and more efficient. They had provided only two teapots for what proved a large and rushing business. It was necessary to hurry through one's tea so as to enable a long line of hungry tea enthusiasts to have their share.

The place was adorned by extraordinary frescoes depicting Russian scenes, painted by a remarkable looking young woman, with short bristling hair, high cheek bones, and knickerbockers, who at the time we were there was painting the outside of the little plaster house with some highly colored scenes from Russian history.

There was one room whose walls were covered with barbaric designs closely resembling the extraordinary scenery Boris Anisfeldt painted for Prokofieff's opera, "The Love for Three Oranges," which was produced by the Chicago Opera company last winter. It was a creation of waving lines and incompatible hues. It was said that one glass of the Russian vodka, which was a favorite tipple for many, would make all those wriggling lines and bewildering colors become normal and acceptable.

Never do I come in contact with Russians that I am not impressed with the overwhelming genius of the race. They are bound to become the great people and are much more interesting to study than we supremely successful Americans.

If Hair is Turning Gray, use Sage Tea

YOU can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

$1.75 Fine 39-inch Irish Airplane Linen, Yd., 49c

Second Floor—Dearborn Street

Another shipment that no doubt will sell in a day's time just as have the last half dozen shipments we have been able to secure of this fine airplane linen of Irish manufacture, natural linen color, pure linen, made for the British government and used exclusively for airplane wings, for it has greatest tensile strength, being made of carefully selected golden flax yarn linen, the finest spun—the tow yarn linens are much coarser and are used for fuselage or rudder purposes on airplanes—and so this linen is one of the best and most desirable manufactured; to be had in Chicago only here; passed upon for weight, count and strength to withstand the pressure of the highest altitudes. The famous quality No. 99, full 39 inches wide; suitable for women's blouses, smocks or middies, suits, separate skirts, men's and women's automobile dusters, men's shirts, girls' dresses, children's wear, tea or lunch cloths, curtains and draperies, fancy work, etc. Worth $1.75, but at less than one-third of that price (Second Floor, none delivered), Monday at ..... 49c YARD

Opera at Ravinia and Festival at Evanston Calling

"THEN, in the evening of Saturday, June 24, Ravinia park enters on its ten weeks of opera, what Mr. Eckstein calls the regular roster of principals will consist of twenty-seven singers plus a chorus of forty. Nine will be newcomers to the lovely music glade on the north shore: Claire Dux, Graziella Pareto, Queena Mario, Bianca Saroya, Anne Roselle, Vicente Ballester, Giuseppe Danise, Aramo Didur, and Pompilio Malatesta, and five of the nine are as yet to be heard in the Chicago territory: the Misses Pareto, Mario, Roselle, and the Messrs. Danise and Malatesta. Returning favorites of earlier Ravinia seasons are Alice Gentle, Frances Peralta, Philine Falco, Anna Correnti, Orville Harrold, Morgan Kinston, Mario Chamlee, Leon Rothier, Graham Marr, Louis d'Angelo, and Giordano Paltrinieri. Also returning are the stage director of the Metropolitan Opera house, Armando Agnini, and last season's trio of conductors—Papi, Hasselmans, and Spadoni.

MINA HAGER.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

As to the newcomers, Miss Pareto sang last season with the Chicago Opera in New York City, but not here: she is Spanish; Miss Mario goes into the Metropolitan in November, as a result of her success as principal soubrette-soprano with the San Carlo Opera company. Miss Roselle also is a soubrette of the Metropolitan, where Danise was last season's principal Italian baritone, and where Malatesta has for some years been principal basso-buffo. Miss Dux and Ballester were new personalities last season with the Chicago Opera, and Miss Saroya and Didur are recalled from the 1915-1916 visits of the Pavlowa-Boston company.

"Boris Godunoff" will probably be the opening opera. The season, of ten weeks and four days, will end Monday, Sept. 4.

The Merry May Pilgrims.

This would be a good time for a modern Chaucer, if one exists, to tell the tale of the annual pilgrimage, not to Canterbury but to Evanston, not to the tomb of Thomas à Becket but to the gymnasium of Northwestern university. The music festival begins this week.

Such has been the growth of this yearly observance that one week is not sufficient to contain all the scheduled events. It therefore will start at midweek and extend over well into the next division of time.

Wednesday night is set for the initial celebration. It is called, in the technical manner of music festivals, first artists' night—no one knows why, since all concerts have their artists. At any rate, the artists in this case will be Frederick Stock, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and Geraldine Farrar, with the name of Claude Gotthelf set in lesser type as being at the piano.

A couple of years have slipped by since Miss Farrar was last here in her professional capacity. She is announced for numerous songs in the course of the program, a group of German, another of French, a third from the pens of Russian composers. The distinction is made because Miss Farrar has at one time and another announced herself as in favor of singing in the original languages, though to the best of one memory she has never been heard here in Russian.

Mr. Stock and the orchestra will play the Brahms "Academic Festival" overture, Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, and such shorter works as the "Dance of Nymphs and Satyrs" from Georg Schumann's "Amor and Psyche," and Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

The following night will introduce the festival chorus of 600. Peter Christian Lutkin will conduct chorus and orchestra through the measures of Goring-Thomas' "The Swan and the Skylark" before the intermission and Rossini's "Stabat Mater" after it. Of soloists there will be Luella Meluis, soprano; Mina Hager, contralto; Theo Karle, tenor, and John Barclay, basso; also the a capella choir, which would seem to stand in an intermediate position between the single voice of the soloist and the massed effect of the big chorus.

A newcomer is billed for Friday night in the person of Giuseppe Danise, baritone of the Metropolitan opera. It is his first appearance in these parts, though he is spoken of as a member of the Ravinia company that will sing opera during the heated term.

Saturday has two scheduled events. The children's concert is announced for the afternoon, a youthful chorus of 1,500, with Osbourne McConathy at the baton in such numbers as Handel's "Largo," a Schubert group, and Fletcher's cantata setting of "The Walrus and the Carpenter." Irene Pavloska, mezzo soprano of the Chicago opera, will be heard in a pair of arias from "Mignon" and "Carmen," and a group of songs. Mr. Stock will direct the orchestra through a series of works tending to keep up the atmosphere of the occasion.

The evening will be devoted to sitting in judgment on a prize composition. It was announced last summer that a contest for an orchestral number would be held. Seventy-three manuscripts were submitted. Of these the five that seemed of most value will be played on Saturday night, and Percy Grainger, Philip Hale, and Rubin Goldmark will apply their faculties to the duty of selecting the best. Their selection will be played in one of the concerts next week.

The public will be admitted to this concert on payment of an admission fee of $1. There will be other rehearsals of chorus, soloists, and orchestra which can be heard for half this amount. Announcements for next week will follow in a later issue.

Boston Points with Pride.

The Boston Symphony orchestra relays information about its recently ended season, and does a little pointing with pride to its achievements. The announcement narrates of twenty-four weekly pairs of concerts in its native Symphony hall; two Sunday afternoon programs in aid of its pension fund; two pairs of young people's programs with school children as audiences; five extra Monday night concerts; fifteen in "Greater New York"; nine at Cambridge; and various appearances in Montreal, Ithaca, Syracuse, Binghamton, Richmond, Washington, Baltimore, Providence, New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Northampton, Portland, Manchester, Burlington, Middlebury, New Bedford, Fall River, Lawrence, Lynn and Brockton, in all, 108.

One infers from a perusal of the list that in time this orchestra may attain nearly as active and useful a season as the Chicago Symphony. Pierre Monteux has been reëlected conductor for two more years.

Here and There in Music

Two more concerts, and the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra will take a vacation for the summer. For this noon's program Eugene Dubois, concertmaster, will be soloist. Nathaniel Finston will direct work by Paganini, MacDowell, Delibes, and Thomas, also a "Song Without Words" from the pen of Adolph Hoffman, cellist of the orchestra.

Janice O'Hara, harpist, will appear in concert at Kimball hall Wednesday night. With her on the program will be Marie Herron, soprano, and the harp pupils of Clara Louise Thurston.

The Chicago Sunday School association sends word that its twenty-ninth annual May festival concert will take place at the Auditorium next Friday night. H. W. Fairbank, who has been the conductor of these concerts since their inception, will direct a chorus of 1,000 women voices. The solists will be Olive June Lacey, soprano; Charles Edwin Lutton, baritone; Mischa Violin, violinist; the Oriental quartet, and Francis S. Moore, organist.

The Swift Male chorus has elected to honorary membership Charles H. Swift, Harold H. Swift, Arthur D. White, E. L. Ward, A. M. Kuehne, and W. F. Scheck. During the season the chorus gave eight concerts, concluding the one at Orchestra hall at which Tito Schipa, tenor, was soloist.

James Goddard, who a few years ago took prominent vocal and physical position in the bass-baritone rôles of the Chicago Opera, will sing at the Kenilworth club tonight, sharing the program with two other members of the organization, Cyrena Van Gordon, mezzo-soprano, and Charles Marshall, tenor.

Among the recital events scheduled for today are the names of Marjorie M. Hayes, soprano, at Kimball hall, and Helen M. Kurniker at the La Salle theater. No information accompanies the announcement of the latter but the branch of music in which she specializes.

Ravinia's prospectus for the summer of 1922, just from the printer, indicates wealth in the names of new singers of interest as well as returning artists of proved capacity. Because of the continuing amiable arrangement between the Ravinia management and the overlords of the Metropolitan Opera, the musical resources of the latter establishment are drawn upon to furnish a holiday for Chicago and vicinity.

The portraits of four songbirds of opera who will visit Ravinia for the first time this summer are herewith presented. Graziella Pareto, a new coloratura, was on the list of the Chicago Opera association last season. She did not appear at the Auditorium, but sang Violetta and Lucia with the Chicago forces during their New York engagement. Spanish by nativity, she has sung in the principal theaters of Rome, Naples, Milan, Florence, Madrid, and London, where she replaced Melba. It is likely that during the Ravinia season she will be heard in a revival of "Lakme."

Concerning Queena Mario, an American, much is heard in praise of her singing while with the San Carlo company. She will be among those present when the Metropolitan reassembles next autumn.

Claire Dux needs little introduction to Chicago. She came last season to sing with Miss Garden's flock at the Auditorium; she remained to appear in recital at the Blackstone hotel and Orchestra hall, to be the soloist when Richard Strauss gave his orchestral concert at the Auditorium, and to occupy the same position with Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra hall.

As Ravinia is well known for its scenic as well as its musical charms, Bianca Saroya, it would seem, will function to the comfort of the faculties of both sight and hearing. Those of us who heard the Pavlowa-Boston répertoire in the visits of 1915-16 will recall Miss Saroya as a pretty girl of Spanish colloring; now her name is heard often in connection with important roles elsewhere, notably in Mexico City and Rio de Janeiro.

JANICE O'HARA.
[Beidler Photo.]

The closing season brings to attention the harp, an instrument heard less frequently in its solo manifestations than most others. Janice O'Hara, a specialist in this form of music, will be heard at Kimball hall next Wednesday night in a varied program.

ARBUTUS
BLOSSOM WREATH
"THEE ONLY DO I LOVE"

To the mystic life-long tie woven at the altar by book and oath, this Arbutus Blossom Wreath Wedding Ring adds the strengthening link of flower language. Five tender words translate its meaning, "Thee Only Do I Love." It was the wedding flower of the Puritans.

Ask to see this delicate design at your local jewelry store. Be sure this stamp is—an omen of good fortune since Pharaoh's time—is stamped inside your ring. This stamp is, furthermore, your assurance of having the best wedding ring made.

Write dept. 315, 1221 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., for "the Story of the Arbutus." If you cannot obtain the ring we will supply you through a jeweler near you.

Pompeian Day Cream

Don't Envy Her—
You Can Have Beauty Too

THE joyous beauty of the bride holds every eye. Her happy eyes and tender smile are made more beautiful by the clear and healthy color of her cheeks. Such is the reward of the woman who knows the secret of Instant Beauty—who uses the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so that the powder adheres evenly. Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance. Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty? Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the Bloom. Presto! The face is beautified and youth-i-fied in an instant! (Above 3 preparations may be used separately or together. At all druggists, 60c each.)

TRY NEW POWDER SHADES. The correct powder shade is more important than the color of dress you wear. Our new NATURELLE shade is a more delicate tone than our Flesh shade, and blends exquisitely with a medium complexion. Our new RACHEL shade is a rich cream tone for brunettes.

"Don't Envy Beauty—Use Pompeian"

Reichstag Sessions Are Deadly Dull

By H. J. Mann.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN.—In imperial Germany the reichstag was known as the "hall of undistinguished repetitions," and the best friend of parliamentary Germany could hardly claim that conditions have changed since the days when William II., now safely and gloriously in Holland, swept grandiloquently on his way up the Linden to the daily guard mount at the Brandenburger Tor.

There is a deadliness about the reichstag that is, save for an expert in deadlines, indescribable. For one thing, the German's habit of taking himself seriously, 100 per cent worth, is current here to an exaggerated idea. More than one American, entering the sacred portals of the reichstag, has made the pardonable mistake of assuming that one of the solemn, white haired guards, in his bearing the deadliness and seriousness of the centuries, is an important member of the cabinet, perhaps the chancellor himself. In justification of this erring American it must be stated that the error is understandable. (Chancellor Wirth, by the way, is a rosy cheeked, unbelievably optimistically appearing person who looks as if he hasn't a care in the world.)

Lively Tongue for Sleepy Debate.

The sessions of the reichstag are in themselves deadly, for one thing, in the words of a visiting Californian, because they are conducted in German. The most enthusiastic internationalist would find it impossible to maintain that German, at its best, is a particularly lively language for purposes of sleepy debate, which is the main function of reichstags, and experienced parliamentary reporters have been found complacently sleeping at their posts just as the speaker of the moment entered into the most impassioned section—after three hours of introduction—of his defense of his bill for the appointment of a commission to investigate the methods of installations of mayors in towns under 5,000 population, or his interpellation as to the fact that English mustard is being openly sold in south Germany, and what does the government intend to do about it?

Not that the reichstag itself does not provide joy for the innocent bystander, provided particularly that he is a foreigner and that the exhibition does not cost him marks and pfennigs in taxes. For one thing, it is impossible, apparently, for a speaker in the reichstag to have honest opinions, honestly arrived at, in the opinion of his political opponents. "Crook," "thief," "scoundrel," "swine of a dof," "traitor," "milk drinker," and "forger," one assumes, would soon be parliamentary language if the minutes of the reichstag were taken as the basis for a new code.

Mr. Helfferich of the German Nationals and Mr. Hoffman of the Communists are the acknowledged leaders in the coinage of new epithets in the reichstag, and the German nation counts that day lost whose low descending sun sees not some phrase or other sent on its course by one of these two men, provided the reichstag is in session.

Kaiser's Prophecy Fulfilled.

Mr. Hoffman, in fact, who was the first post-war minister of cults and who attempted to abolish the ten commandments for Germany by a cabinet order, has done more to cheer up constant visitors to the reichstag than any other man. His most brilliant remark dates back to March, 1920. The historical background is the fact that William the Second, as he ascended the throne in 1888, addressed a message to the German people in which he said: "Ich fuehre euch herrlichen zeiten entgegen" ("I am leading you into wonderful times").

In March, 1920, Dr. Simons, German foreign minister, addressed a note to President Harding asking that the president fix the sum of the German debt to the allies and agreeing faithfully to pay the sum determined to him. It was a last desperate move to avert the imminent London ultimatum and, if successful, was equivalent to a recognition of Germany's disappearance as a sovereign state. Immediately after the dispatch of the note Minister Simons appeared in the reichstag and read the text of the note to that body. For a moment there was silence, and the full effect of the moment, denoting the supreme degradation of Germany, was apparent. And then Mr. Hoffman's rich voice was heard throughout the hall.

"Ich fuehre euch herrlichen zeiten entgegen!" he bellowed.

Monarchists Merry Jesters.

There are other merry little jesters in the reichstag. The best of these, even if they are unconscious of the measure of their humor, are undoubtedly the speakers for the German National party, who are pledged to a restoration of the Hohenzollern monarchy and of the magnificent state of law and order that existed before; to quote one of their speakers, "the Lusitania so treacherously attacked the German submarine." To hear one of these gentlemen describe the grandeur and the pleasures of the old regime and, with tears in his voice, draw a simple picture of present-day conditions, would draw tears from Monsieur Clemenceau. In the reichstag, however, due to the simple expedient of all parties leaving the hall, with the exception of insignificant listening posts, when enemy parties are speaking, the effect is lost save on the few reporters who are paid for staying and to whom the speaker's remarks are merely so many many-syllabelled words.

Scheidemann, leader of the majority Socialists and former chancellor, is also one of the frenzied answer-backers in the reichstag; but he, like so many other of the great in so many other countries, finds it hard to live down indiscreet utterances of the past. Thus, in the spring of 1919, while the question of acceptance or rejection of the allied peace terms was being discussed by the German government, Mr. Scheidemann, in a dramatic speech, predicted that "the hand would wither that signed the treaty of Versailles." The treaty was signed by Herman Mueller, his political brother, and Mr. Scheidemann finds it hard nowadays to deliver a speech with members of the opposition surrounding the speaker's platform and looking anxiously for the withered hand.

Bright spots there are, to be sure, in the reichstag, but mostly the time is spent in the reading of doctors' theses on various subjects, later to be printed at the taxpayers' expense in the German congressional Record. Reichstags, it is plain, are international.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hemon.
"The Beautiful and Damned," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"The Mind in the Making," by Dr. James Harvey Robinson.

By Fanny Butcher.

H. G. WELLS has written a new novel with a title like a Laura Jean Libbey masterpiece, with a plot like a C. N. and A. M. Williamson tale of motoring through England, and with conversation like a marriage of his "Salvaging of Civilization" and "The Undying Fire." "The Secret Places of the Heart" it is called and it is about a psychiatrist and his patient, a gentleman who loves not wisely but too often, if not too well. For about half of the book the entire action is that of the vocal cords of the doctor and his patient. They discuss the past, present, and future of the world, the doctor specializes on the past—with the theory that since man is descended from the monkey we cannot expect him to have subdued all of his primodial tendencies, and with the present theory that there should be freedom, absolute freedom of thought, in the world and a restriction of action.

H. G. WELLS.

The patient, Lord Richmond, a political idealist, specializing in fuel, sees a future when the world will be remade, salvaged, much after the formula of Mr. Wells himself. When the patient, just after confessing to a disturbing and unsatisfying liaison with a young artist, meets a feminine political idealist, American by birth, but international by conviction, there is more ardent conversation about the future of the world.

As a study of "the secret places of the heart," as a study of sex groping for its ideal, this tale will have to be judged by the psychoanalists and the psychiatrists. As a frank exposition of the struggle in the mind and heart of a man between his ideals and his powers, it is convincing. It sounds like autobiography, like the honest, outspoken record of the turbulances in the mind of a man who is harassed by life and who is too mentally alive to quiet those turbulances with the oil of dumb indifference.

Mr. Wells is too practiced a novelist to leave what is known as the "love element" out of his story. There is almost an idyll between Sir Richmond and the rich and beautiful American. So mental is their encounter that even Mr. Wells never is familiar enough with her to call her by her first name, and she remains to the end, Miss Grammont.

The travels in "The Secret Places of the Heart" are journeyings of the mind. An uneventful motor trip through rural England is the physical background for excursions into the time before time and into a future where the world will be a fit place to live.

With a Heart for Any Fate.

"Up and Doing" is a little book of verse of the "inspirational" sort by C. P. McDonald and so William C. Freeman, who writes an introduction to it, says, "The lesson of this wonderful book—no real man or real woman will ever give up after getting the inspiration of it in his or her brain, heart, and soul. God bless you, Mac, for giving us 'Up and Doing.'"

* *

Sherlock Among the Mystics.

To those who clamor for news of the arrival of Conan Doyle: His first lecture will be given at Orchestra hall on the evening of May 23 at 8:15 o'clock and will be on "The Proofs of Immortality," and the second on May 26 on "Recent Psychic Evidence."

And Dana's Goodly Book Leads All the Rest.

Do you remember the vote that was taken for the ten best travel books? Readers all over the country voted on their favorite books of travel, and from those votes twenty-five titles were selected for the votes which were to be cast at the recent travel show in New York. Ten books were to be chosen. Here are the favorite ten, and they are to be called "The Wanderlust Library":

1. "Two Years Before the Mast," by Richard Henry Dana.
2. "Travels with a Donkey," by Robert Louis Stevenson.
3. "Innocents Abroad," by Mark Twain.
4. "How I Found Livingstone," by Henry M. Stanley.
5. "The Oregon Trail," by Francis Parkman.
6. "Mirror of the Sea," by Joseph Conrad.
7. "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," by Harry Franck.
8. "The Purple Land," by W. H. Hudson.
9. "The Travels of Marco Polo the Venetian."
10. "South," by Sir Ernest Shackelton.

Ardors and Orders.

If "Lillom" fails in this town I'm going to pack up my hand autographed copy of "My Life with the Eskimo" and try Greenland's icy mountains or India's coral strand. I'm one of Chicago's most odious boosters (when I'm in New York). I'm an ardent believer in the future of our town. I'm a ballyhooer for the potential supremacy of the village ideal of making Chicago the greatest city in the world. But when on the first night of the most subtle, artistic, whimsical, gaudy, gorgeous play that has come for some time the whole back half of the theater is vacant, my ardor for Chicago as a home for my old age is a trifle dampened. Well—this is a warning. Either "Lillom" succeeds or I leave. That's my ultimatum.

The Engaging Penguin.

Henry G. Ponting, who was the official photographer of the Scott expedition to the south pole, has written a book which he calls "The Great White South," a fascinating record of the trip. In it there are some photographs of penguins which are too funny for words. They make one appreciate even more poignantly Anatole France's incomparable "Penguin Island."

Propaganda, but Laudable.

"Timber," by Harold Titus, is said to be the first novel ever written which deals with the problems of reforestation. The Izaak Walton League of America, which has just been organized to conserve the fish and game of our own, our native land, ought to get one of its literary members to write a novel about its purpose. Propaganda, that's what gets 'em.

Guessing as to "John Paris."

John Paris, the author of "Kimono," is, of course, a pseudonym. His vivid anti-Japanese propaganda has led various journals of news to guess at his identity. One of them, a Boston paper, guessed Lord Grey, and an indignant and immediate denial was forthcoming. The American publishers of "Kimono" promise to reveal Mr. Paris' identity after the Genoa conference has stopped conferring. As B. L. T. used to say, "Gosh, how we dread it!" It will probably turn out to be Lloyd George or Tchitchérin.

President Scott and the Human Element in Trade.

"Science and Common Sense in Working with Men" is the latest book by Walter Dill Scott of our town and Mary H. S. Hayes. It deals with employment problems, with the problems of placing men in the right jobs and of making them valuable and permanent members of the organization.

Bestowing the Garlands.

Hamlin Garland, once the leader of the Chicago literary congregation, is here. He addressed the convention of Mississippi Valley Historians in Iowa City this week. He will speak before some state universities while he is in these parts and will be, as they say, in our midst for a couple of weeks.

On the first of June the Garland family is going to England for five months, and then he is coming back to the old home town of Chicago for six weeks with his daughter, Mary Isabel, who is going to share the lecture platform with him, as she did the other day in New York just to try it out.

Pictures and Jingles.

"Down-a-Down-Derry" is the title which they—Walter de la Mare and Dorothy Lathrop—chose for their joint book of poems and pictures. The poems are all fairy ones, some of which Miss Lathrop chose from the earlier De la Mare poems, and others which were written just lately. In a few cases Miss Lathrop drew the pictures first and Mr. de la Mare wrote the poems afterwards. That reminds one of the wholly delightful little book of Pamela Bianco's called "Flora," with little Pamela's sophisticated Botticelli-esque illustrations (done before the age of 14) and Walter de la Mare's equally delightful verses. And then there's a new volume of his poems, called "The Veil," which, as Christopher Morley says, "we conjure you not to miss."

Best Sellers of the Ages

all Europe, fight one another, mumbling the while like the mob in a play, "Kill—burn—destroy" (that is the routine lingo stage managers give their mobs), and then, having mumbled themselves into hysterics, this mob breaks loose from make-believe and does those things in the bitter shameful months of "the Terror," that year of '93, the numerals of which still make cold and uncertain the heart of reaction all over the world.

And with those myth-men—because he was part myth-man, too—Carlyle screams and rages and tears down and feverishly tries building up. With them he weeps, echoes also their mocking laughter, whirls in their Carmagnole—frantic dance embracing exultation with the arm of doom—and sometimes, withdrawing himself quite away from them and their wrath, keeps the watch of reverence and pity, as when "the white vision of the Revolution" mounts the scaffold. Here, with us, is he. Aloft, there, is she—Mme. Roland:

. . . Looking at the Statue of Liberty which stands there, she says bitterly: "O Liberty, what things are done in thy name!"

Noble white Vision, with its high queenly face, its soft proud eyes, long black hair flowing down to the girdle; and as brave a heart as ever beat in woman's bosom! Like a White Grecian Statue, serenely complete, she shines in that black wreck of things;—long memorable. Honour to great Nature, who, in Paris City, in the Era of Noble-Sentiment and Pompadourism, can make a Jeanne Philpon, and nourish her to clear perennial Womanhood, though but on Logics, Encyclopedies, and the Gospel according to Jean-Jacques! Biography will long remember that trait of asking for a pen "to write the strange thoughts that were rising in her." It is a little light-beam, shedding softness, and a kind of sacredness, over all that preceded; so in her too there was an Unnamable; she too was a Daughter of the Infinite; there were mysteries which Philosophism had not dreamt of!—She left long written counsels to her little Girl; she said her Husband would not survive her.

He has a style for dirges and a style for delirium. Neither ever fails him, and so never wearies us; or, if we are aweary, it is with the weariness of high excitement—not of ennui. From the pen of any other man, these tumultuous flights, these gaspings, starts, recoils, outcries, and these commands that we "Look there!" "Look here!" "Halt!" "Wait!" "Onward now!"—these would run into tedious hysteria. But he sustains. He dares every antic of expression—unreasoning hyphens, multitudinous dashes, endless exclamations that make an actual noise ("shouts" is what printers call exclamation points, and Carlyle's are that), phrases from foreign tongues, manufactured words like "elsewhither" (which I never saw anywhere else), sentences that, neither beginning nor ending, are thrust at you like blows. And yet there is music in them. Unearthly strains sometimes, and again they march to drumbeats and end on bugle blasts. One time they creak and groan with the rumble of that huge coach which, to the doom of all riding therein, had dressing cases fitted into it—that coach in flight to Varennes, with a vain woman and a stupid man and innocent children in it. Carlyle's story of that flight is as good as the one the master Dumas told. We toil through night and apprehension with it. We are afraid.

This kind of writing grips men while it drives them nearly distracted. Sir William Hamilton, one of the wisest men that ever lived, picked up the book, when it was new, at 3 o'clock one afternoon. When he laid it down the clock was striking 4 of the morning. The secret of the spell is in the unflagging vivacity of the style. That style gave a name to calculated incoherence in writing. It is called Carlyleese. George Gilfillan, Carlyle's compatriot and a good safe critic, said that "its very faults, like scars on the face of a warrior, contribute to rivet your attention."

And the portraits! In other books about the demigods and demagogues of the Revolution it is like seeing great men from your seat in the visitors' gallery of a hall of legislation, or seeing them on the hustings, or when they ride clanking by at the head of their troops, inscrutable, stuffed with importance, aloof. That is to see them. But in this book you meet them.

Who is this who comes carefully, sanely, unfeelingly peering out of Chapter II. of the last Book of this history? A little man, about whom few know and fewer take much account. But mark him well. In a few more pages he is going to release a certain "whiff of grapeshot" that will quiet and reduce and set in order for twenty years—no more—the most beautiful aspiration and the most appalling muddle in which mankind ever engaged itself. Mark him in '94. He has some months to wait; '95 is going to be his year. He is——

Napoleon . . . that little bronze-complexioned Artillery-Officer of Toulon, home from the Italian Wars! Grim enough; of lean, almost cruel aspect: for he has been in trouble, in ill health; also in ill favour, as a man promoted, deservingy or not, by the Terrorists and Robespierre Junior. But does not Barras know him? Will not Barras speak a word for him? Yes,—if at any time it will serve Barras so to do. Somewhat foriorn of fortune, for the present, stands the Artillery-Officer; looks, with those deep earnest eyes of his, into a future as waste as the most Taciturn; yet with the strangest utterances in him, if you awaken him, which smite home, like light or lightning;—on the whole, rather dangerous? A "dissocial" man? Dissocial enough; a natural terror and horror to all Phantasms, being himself of the genus Reality! He stands here, without work or outlook, in this forsaken manner;—glances nevertheless, it would seem, at the kind glance of Josephine Beauharnais; and, for the rest, with severe countenance, with open eyes, and closed lips, waits what will betide.

In like manner, so intimately that there seems at times a kind of furtiveness in the arrangement that has brought you and the demigods and demagogues face to face and eye to eye, you shall meet Mirabeau (probably the greatest portrait in the book), Robespierre, Danton, Dumonriez (an exquisite etching less than a little page wide and long), dear Vergniand, and the long train of others who made—and unmade—the destiny of—of whom? Us. Had they never lived and wrought, the world would have been very unhappy today. They having lived and wrought, it is less so.

The very chapter headings of this book invite to read: "Storm and Victory"; "Conquering Your King"; "O Richard, O My King!"; "As in the Age of Gold"; "Sound and Smoke"; "The Day of Poniards"; "The Night of Spurs"; "The Steeples at Midnight"; "The Gods Are Athirst"; "Grilled Herrings"; "The Whiff of Grapeshot." Who can resist?

And yet—and yet! 'Tis no kindness to urge this book upon a youth or a novice and expect him to manage it singlehanded. It is so great a book that one would not have it different, but one would have another book to read with it. In fine, Carlyle presupposes so much knowledge on his reader's part, is so allusive, so interjectory, so rhapsodic, and dashes in and out of his narrative so often and so wildly, that to the young reader he must be bewildering, even baffling. So, if you are young and will let yourself be schoolmastered for a moment, get Justin Huntley McCarthy's "The French Revolution," a longer book than Carlyle's by three or four hundred pages, but clearer, easier, and more comprehensive. A good working edition may be had for $3.50. Above all, if you are in school, get your school to take on the purchase of the new "French Revolution" which Dr. George H. Allen, one of the government's historiographers of the world war, has written and which the Barries of Philadelphia are publishing in four volumes, at the rate of a volume every six months. It is expensive, but, if only for its pictorial splendors and its reproductions of documents, it is worth while. It ought to be in every school. I have studied only the first volume. It seems to me in a strain at once sane and interesting. Work your way into a great period, then, with Mr. McCarthy and Dr. Allen for a couple of months, and then you will enjoy your Carlyle with a gusto which few other books in our language will ever create in you.

ART AND ARTISTS

Beauty of Line Characterizes Diana Gabii

By Anne Ellis.

THE Diana Gabii, like the Diana of Verseille, is in that wonderful treasure house of the worlds art, the Louvre. But here the likeness ceases for Diana Gabii is in strange and subtle contrast to that of Verseille though none the less a portrait of the goddess as she was worshipped in ancient Greece. A quaint French writer, describing the marble shortly after it was placed in the Louvre, calls it "Le Pearle de Muse," and indeed it is like a jewel in its soft delicacy of line and pearly loveliness.

The Diana Gabii—found at Gabii, Latrium, copy of a work by Praxiteles.

It was found near Gabii, Latrium, in 1792, in rather bad condition, but many pieces were also discovered and restorations made to supplement them. It is of Parian marble and life size. The original, of which the one in the Louvre is a copy, is attributed to Praxiteles. It possesses all the dreamy indolence of expression and attitude that characterized his works, and is of sufficient excellence to warrant the attribution. The perfect disposition of the garments in graceful and unaffected folds, the lovely curves of the young and girlish form all speak of the authorship of the genius of whom the Greek epigram was written: "At thy touch, O, Praxiteles the very stones learn to revel wildly, and old age is no longer feeble." Praxiteles received more praise from his contemporaries than any other sculptor not excluding Phidias. That he was more popular than the latter was probably due to the fact that Phidias treated the gods in their majestic and divine attitudes, while Praxiteles, influenced by his times, portrayed them in more human and romantic style. Only the Zeus of Parthenos was ever praised and adored like that work of Praxiteles, which caused a city to become famous in his day, the Aphrodite of Cnidos.

Praxiteles, being commissioned to make a statue of Aphrodite for the city of Cos, had the originality and the boldness to make the goddess entirely nude, but fearing that this might be considered irreverent, he made two statues, and offered the buyers the choice. The citizens of Cos chose the clothed Aphrodite, but the Cnidians also wishing a statue of the goddess, bid for the nude one, which they set up in an open grove of myrtle trees. At once the Greek world poured into the city to look at the new Aphrodite and to worship and to praise until Cnidos became famous over night. Pliny says, "Above all the works not only of Praxiteles, but of all the world is the Venus of the Cnidians, to see which many men made the voyage to Cnidos, which work was fashioned as was supposed with the approbation of the goddess herself." Another epigram makes the goddess say, "When, O, Praxiteles, didst thou see me thus that thou shouldst know so well my presence?"

Nicomedes, king of the Bethynea, offered to absolve the Cnidians of their national debt if they would give him the statue for his palace, but though their debt was heavy and pressed upon them sorely, they refused. The statue was said to have been modeled after Phryne, the most famous hetaral of the time and favorite of Praxiteles, but if he used her for a model he did not make a likeness, but an idealization of her beauty, for later he made a statue of her in gilt bronze which was offered at Delphi and which, according to the chroniclers bore no resemblance to the Cnidian Aphrodite.

The nearest approach we have to a copy of the Aphrodite of Praxiteles is the Cnidian Venus in the Vatican, to which one of the popes presented a skirt of painted metal. Praxiteles is known to have made forty-seven groups of statuary, not forty-seven statues, but forty-seven groups of statues. Of many of these there are existent copies, such as the Psyche, Eros, the Marble Faun, and the Diana Gabii.

The love of Praxiteles for Phryne is a thrilling though misty chapter of Greek history, and though he has been called an hierophant and other things less politely expressed, it has certainly not made an impression on the greatness of his work. As Oscar Wild so succinctly said, "Morals are a matter of geography." They are also a matter of century and circumstances and respectable ladies seem to have been duller even in Praxiteles' day than they have ever been since, and the Phrynes of his time were at last intelligent. We do not criticize the song of the nightingale because he sings it each season to a different moon. A man's work is the world's, but his life is his and God's.

The Art institute summer school announces its courses for the coming season as follows:

The academic course will open July 3 and continue until Sept. 10.

The six weeks' normal course will be from July 3 to Aug. 11, inclusively. Throughout the six weeks a course in lettering, making toys and jewelry, and weaving will continue. The first three weeks there will be courses in design and commercial art for high schools, the last three weeks handcraft and applying of design, jesso work, and interior decorating will be taught. A record has been kept of the students of the normal course for several years, and it is a satisfying fact and a testimonial to the school that not one normal student ever took the course without receiving an offer of a position paying from $1,400 to $2,100 a year.

The Art Students' league will hold its exhibition in conjunction with the students' exhibition at the Art institute, beginning May 27. Commencement day for the art school will be June 16.

The paintings in the anonymous loan collection now at the Art institute merit more space than can be devoted to them in this column. They form an extremely interesting collection for many reasons. There are several Spanish primitives which draw attention to their differences and likeness to the Italian primitives, their less graceful but more vital compositions, their deeper but less lovely colors. "St. George and the Dragon," attributer to Benito Martorelli, is especially interesting as an example of painting done almost in relief. It is thought by Emil Bertaux to be the center of a four paneled altar piece made in about 1430, the other three of which are now in the Louvre.

After the primitives the most interesting and, of course, the most important paintings are the two allegorical panels, "Music" and "History," by Goya. They are not good examples for one unfamiliar with his work, for they contain none of the incisive quality of realism and satire for which he is famous. They are perhaps more valuable to a collection on this account.

There is also a picture by Zurbaran and an El Greco. Manet is represented by "The Music Lesson," which was exhibited at the Salon in 1870. It came into its present owner's hands at the disposition of the Rouart collection in 1912. What is there to say in description of a work of this philosopher of painting? Only this—that Manet mixed his paint with the oil of his mind.

Miss Ruth Sherwood, a young Chicago sculptress, is leaving the city this week, having won the Bryan Lathrop and the John Quincy Adams study and travel scholarships, which entitle her to travel and study abroad. She will go to London, Paris, and Rome. Miss Sherwood was awarded both scholarships on her relief entitled "The Harvest."

Gone Beyond Correction.

A young but exceptionally brilliant professor in a western college was dismissed from the faculty because of his inordinate betting. The president, interested in his career, secured him a position in an eastern college. To the president there he wrote: "The young man has a promising future, and anything you can do to cure him of betting will be a benefit to society."

The professor went east and was cordially received. Conversation had ceased but a few moments when he said to the president, "I'll bet you seventy-five dollars you have a wart between your shoulder blades."

The president hesitated. "Young man," he said, "I never bet, but just to teach you a lesson I will take you up." He thereupon proved to the young man's satisfaction that he was in error, and the professor paid the seventy-five.

The president wrote west, relating the incident, concluding, "I hope I have cured him."

The other wrote back, "I fear the case is hopeless. The day he left here he bet me one hundred dollars that he could make you take off your shirt." C. J. P.

Precisely.

A quack doctor at a country fair was trying to sell his pills. By loud shouting he had managed to draw quite a crowd around his booth.

In a valiant effort to boost his sales he called out, "Ladies and gentlemen, I have sold these pills for over twenty years and have not heard a single complaint from any of my customers. What does this prove?"

A deep voice from the back of the crowd answered, "Dead men tell no tales." W. B.

And So He Did.

A man recently dismissed a clever but dishonest gardener. For the sake of his wife and family he gave him a good character.

This is how he worded it: "I hereby certify that A. B. has been my gardener for two years, and that during that time he got more out of my garden than any other man I ever employed." M. J.

There He Stood.

"Is there a man in all this audience," fiercely inquired a female lecturer, "who has done anything to lighten the burden resting on his wife's shoulders? What do you know of a woman's work? Is there a man here," she continued, folding her arms and looking over her audience with superb scorn, "who has ever got up in the morning, leaving his tired, worn out wife to enjoy her slumbers, gone quickly downstairs, made the fire, cooked his own breakfast, sewed the missing buttons on the children's clothes, darned the family stockings, swept the kitchen, and done all this, if necessary, day after day uncomplainingly? If there is such a man in the audience, let him rise up! I should like to see him!"

In the rear of the hall a mild looking man in spectacles, in obedience to the summons, timidly arose. He was the husband of the eloquent speaker.

It was the first time he ever had a chance to assert himself. V. A. M.

They're Numerous Now.

"Now," said the colonel, looking along the line of recruits, "I want a good, smart looking bugler."

At that, out stepped a dilapidated fellow with a thick stubble of black beard.

"What," said the colonel, eyeing him up and down, "are you a bugler?"

"O," he answered, "I thought you said burglar." A. M.

Breaking the News.

"Mamma, dear, do you know what I am going to buy you for Christmas?"

"O, I couldn't guess," mother said, smiling.

"Well, I am going to buy a pretty hand mirror for your dresser; won't that be nice?"

"But, dear, I already have one."

"No, you haven't, mamma, 'cause I just broke it." C. S.

A Generous Soul.

His mother gave Jimmie two apples, a large and a small one.

As she handed them to her son she said, "Now, be a generous little boy and give your sister her choice."

"All right, mother," he said, and added as he handed an apple to his sister, "you can have the little one or none. Which will you take, Mary?"

L. M. S.

The Perfect Poise.

Dignified, austere, and possessing considerable wealth, he is a man of prominence in the small town in which he lives. Long, however, have vague whisperings hinted that his ruby nose was never made so by the weather and that the bulky packages he invariably brings home from the city are breakable. Yet the other residents, awed by his dignity, his prominence, and his ostentatiously puritanical views, have never dared allow their beliefs to pass the whispering stage. But they have watched and wondered, in the hope that they might some day know the truth.

The other day he came home on the noon train. True to tradition, half the inhabitants were loitering about the station when he alighted. Solemnly, apparently hardly noticing the common lot, he started for his home with the usual package under his arm. He stepped on some ice, slipped, and before he could regain his balance had dropped the bundle.

With a crash it struck the sidewalk. A heavenly odor filled the air. And the liquor flowed.

It was a desperate moment. But the owner of the bottle retained his composure. Mournfully he looked at the liquid. Then in a voice expected to win the sympathy of the spectators, he said: "It's too bad. I don't know what my wife will do for soapsuds tomorrow."

And then it happened. The moment that the entire population had been looking forward to for months came. For a sober, stately, traveling man who had witnessed the whole episode, drawled in a voice loud enough to be heard by all: "Well, my dear sir, if you'd quit buying that stuff your wife wouldn't have to take in washings."

AN EXCEPTION

By Guy Lee.

Some homage pay to sons of Clan,
While others lowly Plebes prefer;
That kind of Woman, this of Man;
This class of Him, that sort of Her
The sympathies of You ally;
Which may, perhaps, be well enough.
But I—I only like the guy
Who praises me and lauds my stuff.

I'm bored by every one, and can't See whatthehell they're put here for;
I scorn their looks and spoof their slant
And every trait of theirs abhor.
Both male and female give me pain;
That is, the most of them—egad!
I must except from my disdain
The guy who says I ain't so bad.

MAN

MARKS OF THE SEMITE.

SEMITIC people are slight of build, either small ranging to stocky or tall and slender. Light bodies are a Semitic mark. It persists in the children for many generations after there has been a crossing of races. In this country, where the Aryan race is predominant, individuals whose features and coloring are Aryan but whose bodies are spare usually include a Semitic strain. Such men are sometimes keenly conscious of their small size, and would like to grow bigger, never realizing that their body plan is as deep seated as life itself.

To those of northern European blood Semites appear diminutive. At one time the general view was the other way. When the later Romans, who were Semitic, felt the power of the barbarian Teutonic Nordics upon them they were not impressed half so much by the ideals and energy of these men as they were by their gigantic, hairy bodies, their tangled red hair, and the murderous zeal with which they pursued their ends.

The ancient Mediterranean men of the British Isles also had legends of giants. Some of them are preserved in our childhood tale of "Jack the Giant Killer," which, in the days when it was composed, contained much more truth than fiction. The Celtic invaders of Britain had been bad enough, but they were mild compared with the first and fiercest Nordic men, the English of today.

Imagine how you would regard a man who stood head and shoulders above the tallest of our men, who was as strong as five or six of our best athletes, who seemed as shaggy as an orangoutang, and who delighted in quarrel and bloodshed. This was the invariable picture given by the Semites of their Nordic foes.

The Semites in every land today, with the sole exception of Abyssinia, are under the rule or influence of Aryans, generally Nordics. Although universally conceded to be the finest of brunette peoples, this race does not now display nor ever has shown a capacity for government. Semites cannot govern themselves in a manner to compete with neighboring Aryan governments. Their wealth and their lands are, therefore, a standing temptation for some fair aggressor to seize. The British king rules more Semites than he does Aryans. The hand of England never lets go of them. Singapore, Aden, Suez, Malta, and Gibraltar are the points from which England can throttle any Semitic country who opposes her. Italy knows it. Arabia knows it; Spain knows it; India admits it with resentment. The Aryan is in the main a just and good ruler. Were it not so, the plight of the Semitic race would be well nigh hopeless.

Composite of Semetic types from India, Arabia, Italy, Bohemia, and Ireland.

Semites are intrinsically perhaps the keenest minded men on earth. Their wits are nimble; their senses are alert; they have great powers of creation and interpretation. Whatever falls into their hands is polished and cherished and made beautiful.

At one time Italy was the genius of the world. Spain once had an enviable culture. Scholars once swarmed to Alexandria. In the days of the caliphs Bagdad was the most magnificent capital on earth. Oriental cities had great luxury while swine wallowed in the streets of Paris and open cesspools were the rule in London. Yet with all his gifts the Semite needs a spur. Not only must he be ruled, he must be half driven and half led. Wherever there are Aryans to lead and of the Aryans Nordic is the best, the Semite flourishes. Take away the motive man, and the fabric of that society comes tumbling down.

The Italy of the Renaissance is interesting from the point of view of anthropology. During the dark ages armies of semi-civilized Nordics poured through the Alpine passes and down into the plains of Italy. There they founded city states and extended their rule over the natives they encountered. First the conquerors had to grow civilized themselves. When they had mastered this they found a people under them eager to follow, and capable of direction. The burst of literature, art, medicine, and science attests what such a symbiosis can do.

When the Aryans were gone the genius of Italy waned. Some few remnants of the invaders can still be found in the northern communes. There are even places under the brows of the Alps where Teutonic dialects are still spoken. What guiding genius there is in Italy today is still Aryan. The older Semite still has the possibilities, but there are now too few hands to point and minds to guide.

After you learn his marks, you can tell a person of Semitic blood as far away as you can see him. Is he slight of bone? Is he inclined to be physically frail? Is he a brunette? A Semite's head and face are distinctive. Is the skull long and narrow, with the peak set far back and high up on the occiput? Is the hair a shiny black? Is the profile strongly convex, the face long, the chin and jaws small? Are the upper eyelids prominent, the brows black, the bridge of the nose long and the upper lip short? Is there a mind that is rapid, erratic, and impulsive, a passionate nature, a credulous disposition, and ideals inclined from the fine to the material rather than tending to an impersonal humanity?

Insects

HE DECEIVES BIRDS.

THIS insect is a fly, all dressed up to look like a honey bee. He hopes to fool us, but he won't this animal has only two. Sure enough, we can pick him up in our fingers. He trusted his camouflage so implicitly that he thought it not worth his while to move when danger threatened.

No one in his right mind would pick up a bee, he thought. Why, therefore, should anyone molest him?

Insects whose powers of offense are not negligible usually wear brilliant livery to warn every eye of the fact. Wasps, hornets, and bees have a host of mimickers among flies and beetles. These latter creatures have no fighting powers of their own, but have evolved to look like fearfully aggressive hymenoptera in the hope that their enemies would be fooled by a mimicry and would let them alone.

CHEMISTRY

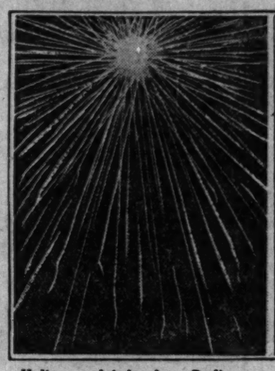
OLD DREAMS COMING TRUE.

THE time is 700 years ago. Down in a back cellar of a dirty basement, where never a ray of light penetrates and where it is so musty that even spiders shun the place, an alchemist has his shop. After each evening's work he washes his hands and face carefully, removes all traces of his labors from his clothes, and goes to bed. By day he works in a copying establishment, binding books. When his routine tasks are finished and ordinary men are returning to their families he snatches a bite to eat and creeps down into his laboratory. Only his wife and mother know his secret. They can be trusted not to tell. They always watch the entrance and make plausible excuses to any one who calls to see him.

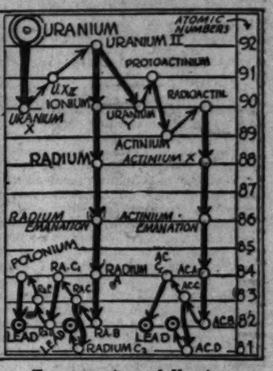
Alchemists in past days had need for caution. Their craft was thought of in a worse light than we regard counterfeiting today. To be caught indulging in sorcery was usually followed by a speedy and painful execution. The majority of people of the middle ages were ignorant and densely superstitious.

Explorations into unknown realms of nature were then regarded by many in authority as direct personal menaces against themselves. It was inconceivable to them why any man should indulge in magic unless he wished to gain some unfair advantage over his fellow men. It was long the fashion to vindictively persecute any one caught engaged in the black art of alchemy. Gutenberg, the discoverer of printing, came near being killed as a wizard. Yet in spite of all suppression alchemy thrived. There was a feeling of adventure to the pursuit highly attractive to some temperaments.

Old time alchemists sought the elixir of life, the philosopher's stone, and the transmutation of metals. The reward if any of these were to be discovered would be amply sufficient to make up for a whole lifetime of danger and privation, they thought. Who wouldn't want to live forever? Who has not yearned for all the money he could spend?



Helium nuclei shot from Radium.



Transmutations of Uranium.

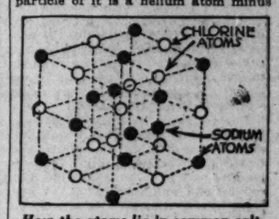
The basis of the science of chemistry was laid in these alchemists' burrows. At first the workers did not understand the forces they were releasing in their crucibles and retorts. Knowledge came painfully slow. It seems to us. When it was finally observed that the same combination of substances always gave the same reaction the science they were studying ceased to be alchemy and became chemistry.

The benefits of chemistry were realized by rulers and princes much sooner than by people generally. Alchemists frequently worked under the "guidance and inspiration" of some potentate. The potentate's method was often interesting. By fair means or foul he would lure an alchemist into his power, shut him up in the finest laboratory that could be bought, and hold him a prisoner until he discovered how to turn lead or some other cheap metal into gold. Apparently no precious metal was ever forthcoming by this procedure, but the foundations of most of the chemical arts were laid at this time. The people, on their part, sometimes came to regard alchemists not only as servants of the devil but of their oppressors as well. Lavoisier, the greatest chemist of his time, was beheaded by a French mob.

For a while after chemistry gained a standing as a respectable science it was inclined to turn its back upon its ladder and deny the possibility of elixir and transmutation. This stand is now known to be extreme. Some of the molecular nature of life and death is understood and the prolongation of life is by no means a hopeless problem. The study of radium furnishes conclusive proof that transmutation does occur in nature.

Two metals, thorium and uranium, are radio-active. Both have exceedingly complicated molecules, and both eventually break down through a long series of transmutations, and end by turning into lead. The complexity of uranium exceeds that of any known substance. Hydrogen, the simplest element, gives out a single series of light waves when heated to the incandescent state, but uranium has an almost unutterable tangle for a spectrum pattern. The inner nucleus of this metal sometimes grows top heavy, so that atoms must be thrown out to save the structure. Chemists see their effects as they are shot forth.

An object bearing an electrical charge is quickly discharged when brought into the presence of a radio active mineral. Alpha particles are being driven out at terrific velocities. They tear through the electron systems of every atom in their way, ripping off planetules here, disrupting there, producing ionized streaks wherever they touch. Alpha rays are composed of clouds of helium nuclei. Each particle of it is a helium atom minus its two outer electrons. Because of this lack, the nucleus bears a powerful positive charge, and will tear electrons out of any weaker atom it meets to satisfy itself. A satisfied alpha particle is an atom of ordinary helium.



How the atoms lie in common salt.

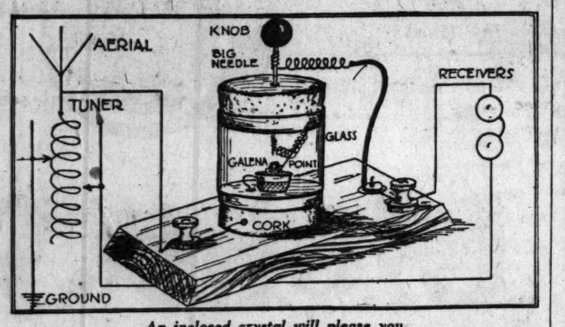
Starting at 92 on the table of atomic numbers, uranium loses one helium nucleus which weighs 2, and becomes uranium x at 90. It then loses an electron and moves up to uranium x II at 91, loses another electron and becomes uranium II back at 92 again. Here the plunge proper begins which will end at lead. A second helium nucleus is hurled out, turning the atom into ionium at 90. The next loss makes it radium at 88. A fourth loss converts it into radium emanation at 86, a fifth produces radium A at 84, and a fifth radium B at 82. We are now at the place of lead, but other transmutations are still necessary. Radium C, radium C2, radium C1, radium D, radium E and polonium are metals into which the products from uranium are in turn converted. When the whole transmutation is completed the atoms come to rest at lead, whose number is 82.

Six distinct kinds of lead are known. They differ enough from each other in weight to attract attention. Leads from different places vary from 206.1 to 207.7, where oxygen weighs 16. Chemically they all behave alike. This was the first inkling that chemists got that many elements are not single substances, but have isotropes of themselves.

RADIO

AN INCLOSED DETECTOR.

THE detector is a most important part of any radio set. Electric currents in the aerial circuit vibrate so rapidly that no mechanical receiver can respond to them. Their pulses must be cut down. For this purpose some sort of rectifier is employed which will let current from one direction pass, but which will stop it from the other. The two most common detectors are the galena and the thermionic bulb. The latter is expensive to fit out and costly in its upkeep. Crystal detectors are holding their own against tube sets in spite of their circumscribed ranges. The chief virtue of the crystals is that they are cheap. One of them costs less than a quarter for the first charge and nothing for its upkeep.



An inclosed crystal will please you.

A crystal detector works best when it is properly mounted. It will be easy for you to make a neat and serviceable mounting. Select a cylindrical lamp chimney of clear, well annealed glass, and cut off a band from it about two inches long, using a hard file dipped in turpentine. File the cut edge smooth to keep the glass from subsequently cracking. Buy two corks at any drug store. Have them of a size that will fit snugly into the end. File out a hole in the center of one to hold a thimble, so that it fits snugly. The thimble is to be the holder for the crystal.

Melt mercury and tinfoil together until the whole is a pasty metallic mass. Clean the crystal by dipping it first in caustic potash and then in scalding water, and let it dry on a sheet of clean white paper. Clean the thimble in a similar manner. Then, without letting your fingers or any greasy object touch the crystal, roll it into the thimble, and pour the melted alloy about it. As soon as it is cool fix the thimble and its cork firmly in the tube.

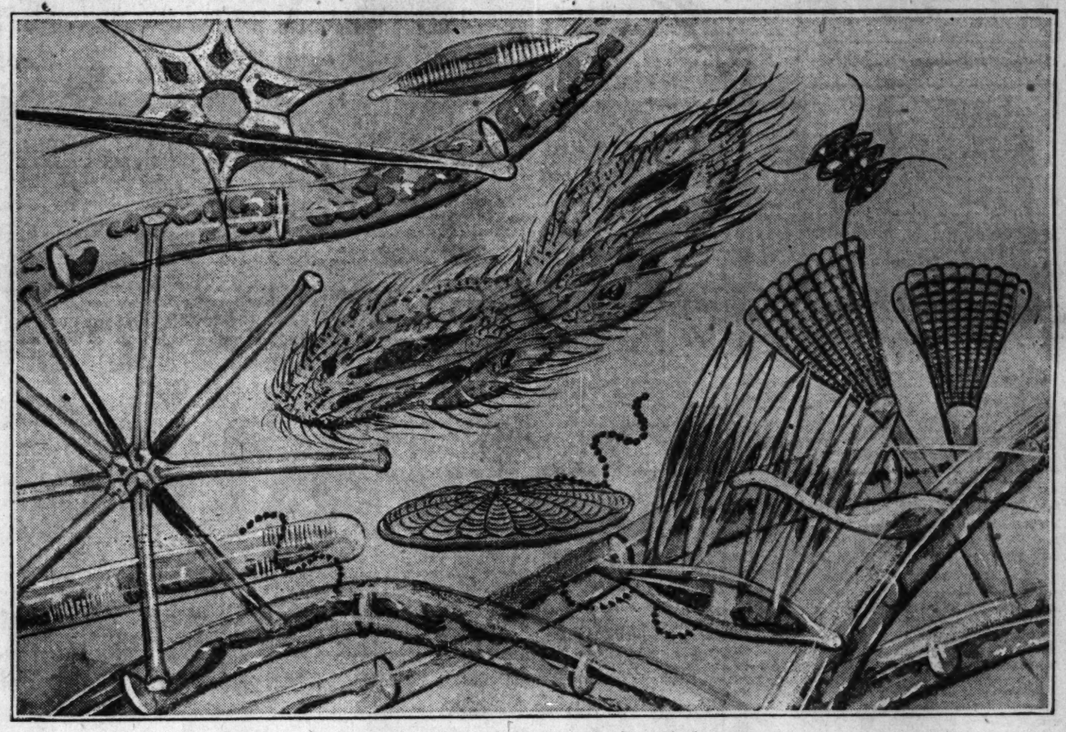
Thrust a long steel needle through the upper cork. Solder a brass ball for a handle on its upper end, and near the point solder a long spiral of fine copper wire. Bend this helix into the shape of an L, and to its end, point down, solder a fine, clean, light needle. Remove all grease with potash and hot water, dry on paper, and without touching the needles in any way lower them into the top of the glass tube.

Glue the detector to a block of wood. White shellac makes an excellent glue as well as a varnish. Fasten two binding posts to the block, hook the detector in on the radio circuit, and test for sensitivity.

For finding a sensitive spot you should employ a buzzer. Connect one side of an ordinary electric door bell to the ground. Ring the bell. Lower the needle until its point just touches the crystal. The springs will give you the proper contact. Move the needle about until you find a spot where you can hear the buzzer sounding in your receiver.

THROUGH THE MICROSCOPE



The Paramoecium raced by living jewels as it split in two.

THE ONE CELLED WORLD.

A LAYER of infusorial earth lies beneath Richmond, Va. It is 18 feet thick. Few people who walk over it realize the countless millions of creatures whose skeletons go to make the stratum. The locusts carrying corn grains from the storehouse mountain high would make a petty hatful compared to the number of diatomes whose bodies made this soil.

Life has returned to the waters of the lily pond. Verdant shoots are springing up all about the edges, red wings are calling to each other with voices shrill and hoarse all in one note, dragon flies flit from here to there across the water, and toads trill their love songs at the brink. Down beneath the waves there is also life. The little world is waking after the deadening freeze of winter. Red eyed water mites scramble about on submerged stems, cyclops swim jerkily along, worms with no eyes at all creep out to get a little of the rich food that comes filtering down.

The little world is all life. The eyed creatures are seeking prey. Let us pay a visit to the creatures they feed upon. These, too, have lives to live, albeit their purpose of existence is only to fill the maws of hungry omnivores.

Here we find diatomes in the ooze that are castles of fairy tracery. The sculptures of Taj Mahal are coarse chipping compared to the living palaces in pond slime. Diatomes have the most fantastic shapes. Some lie in radiating columns like chiseled crystal stars, some are latticed, some are barred, still others are lancet shaped, and some resemble boats and spindles.

These fretwork jewels are free swimming. Scientists are greatly in the dark as to how they do it. A diatome is a plant. It has two valves, like an oyster, made of the purest glassy silica. A minute pore opens at either end. Some think that water is drawn in by the protoplasm and that its expulsion makes the creature go. This is perhaps the explanation. The strength of these tiny bodies is amazing. There is no reason, no volition, no sense of direction, no reflexes in them, and yet they plow along as though they had tenacious wills.

Microscopic plants must feel superior to the microscopic animals about them. We humans are accustomed to being able to do many actions that are denied to trees and grasses. In the little world life is often the other way around. Here desmids and algae have motion, like animals. In addition they can manufacture their own food directly from sunshine, carbonic acid, and water, while animals are forced to pick theirs up as best they can, either preying on each other or by eating dead or living green stuff.

A four horned daiga comes sailing by. The vacuoles on its green cells glisten in the light. Nearby a transparent amoeba is crawling. Paramoecia are swimming in swarms about the rotten stems that strew the bottom. We watch them. How numerous are their species. Some are shuttle shaped, some are flat like turtles, some swim straight, and some spin round and round in corkscrew tracks. All are covered by long lashing cilia. How these waving whips can make them fly! Their jelly bodies are full of half digested food. Their whole beings are comprised in single cells. All vital processes are locked in these racing bits of protoplasm. Paramoecia are not lowly evolved by any means. They are as specialized in their way as we are in ours. Watch how they reproduce their kind.

Following an almost universal custom in this one-celled world, the paramoecium mode of multiplication is one individual to split in two. There are no sexes here. Many tiny creatures seem to have the power to divide themselves ad infinitum. Not so with a paramoecium. After a certain number of divisions its reproductive power wanes.

A man's span of life is four score years, with perhaps another ten if he is strong. The life of a paramoecium lasts only a day or two. When we grow old we must die. Our life processes are not reversible. Paramoecia also have senility, but they do not die. They are immortal. When a paramoecium feels old age creeping on it seeks out another elderly member of its kind and the two exchange protoplasm. No two seem to age just alike. When they unite each offers its fellow such vital elements as it has in excess and which the other lacks. The trade completed they separate, each individual rejuvenated by the process.

Over here we see a pair. They nose each other as they swim about. Then they grip each other, mouth to mouth. The creatures suck on each other with all their might. Each expands its mouth to swallow its mate. They turn their gullets inside out, they bring their protoplasms into contact, then lo! the wall between them dissolves, the two merge their nuclei into one. They separate, and two young paramoecia go swimming off. Quick, let us follow one! We keep on its trail all day, while it browses among the roots and stems.

Finally we see it leave the feeding grounds and take to open water. Its body grows longer. A waist appears about its middle. The animal is agitated. Its cilia wave furiously, it swims around and round and round in wide arcs through the water, up and down, over and over, back and forth, in and out, and up and down again it goes. The waist keeps on constricting. Half of its internal organs, if such they can be called, pinch through the constriction, and each end gets a portion. Its gyrations become wilder. Both halves lash and tug and writhe upon the waist. They twist and pull like two sausages furiously alive. The waist is separating. See, all the endosarc is out of it! Only a shred of gelatin remains. This parts. There are two individuals where there was one before.

Exhausted, both cease motion abruptly. Limply they sink to the bottom and lie without so much as moving a cilium. We prod them up. O, yes, they can still swim like arrows. They sail off over our heads, but take refuge on an alga filament, to rest a while longer. Their appetites come back. Soon each is away to the feeding grounds to gorge and get ready for another split.

ASTRONOMY

JUPITER, THE GIANT WORLD.

THAT great blue-white star that appears high up in the eastern sky as darkness falls is the planet Jupiter. Get to know him. He is a friendly light, and will shine on you till far into the summer. Planets have characters, much as people do. Mercury is brilliant but evasive, here one week, clear out of sight the next. Venus sweeps slowly along the sky in radiant splendor but never dares to leave the twilight sky. Mars comes close to us at times, but soon leaves for distant fields. He is an interesting world to study, but something of the same unsteadiness of Mercury pervades his ruddy color. Saturn is always wan, and seldom forces himself upon your attention.

But old Jupiter is always much the same. Whether he shines in the dusk, or rises after dark, his brightness never varies the way the other planets do. Morning sky or evening sky, summer, autumn, spring, or winter, his broad face beams through our telescopes, beignly jovial, while his four satellites circle about him in unending motion.

If you have a telescope, turn it on Jupiter. If you haven't one, make one out of a long-focus concavo-convex spectacle lens and the glass from a toy hand magnifier. A telescope that will reveal the moons of Jupiter will cost you less than a dollar.

The features that make Jupiter spectacular lie about the vision limit for the naked eye. Even a strong spy glass or binocular will show the moons. These little flying worlds would look like stars of the fourth magnitude, and would be easily visible on a dark night, were not their glimmer drowned out by the greater glare of Jupiter.

Jupiter is the largest planet in the solar system. His diameter is 86,000 miles, or about eleven times that of the earth, while his bulk equals 1,300 times that of ours. He is a sort of planetary sun, a diminutive model of our solar ruler. He no longer sheds light of his own; the luster which makes him gleam so brilliantly is only borrowed sunlight, but he is still intensely hot.

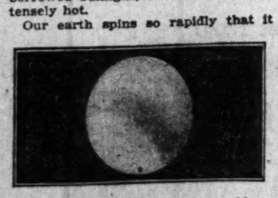
Our earth spins so rapidly that it



Ganymede is a world as big as Mars.

bulges its equator thirteen miles. Our rotation is a slothful creep compared to Jupiter! His huge body has a day only nine hours and fifty-five minutes long, and in consequence of this terrific whirl, his sides are bulged out nineteen hundred miles. He even looks oval, not round like a ball. Great windstorms constantly sweep along his surface, blowing the steam from below out into long ribbons of vapor. On earth trees and buildings cannot stand against a hurricane blowing one hundred miles per hour. Even a tornado of the most violent twister sort seldom has wind velocities higher than three miles per minute. These winds would only be invigorating breezes on Jupiter. Storms are often observed there blowing six or seven miles per minute, and they keep it up for days.

The surface of this planet is encircled by belts. There is nothing solid on Jupiter. His outer layers are cloud and gas, below these are denser gases and heavy fumes of chemicals, below that more vapor and so on to the center. Should we explore this realm we would need an airplane, and if we should have the ill luck to break down we would fall until we were burned up.

Jupiter is hot. He sheds a dark, sultry heat, like a coke oven that has just been extinguished. His satellites feel his warmth. At 490 million miles from the sun daylight is wan and feeble, and if his attendant worlds were forced to depend on solar energy for their warmth they would fare poorly. But Jupiter himself is a sort of semi-sun. Two of his moons, at least, appear to be cloud covered little spheres. The third satellite of Jupiter, named Ganymede, is a world about as big as Mars. If it lay nearer the earth, so that astronomers could get a better view of it, it would doubtless prove to be an interesting place. The earth, Venus, Mars, and Ganymede are regarded as the only bodies in the solar system at present capable of supporting life. Ganymede gleams with a soft greenish white luster in the telescope. Dusky markings are occasionally observed upon it, as well as a strong phase from the brilliant giant hulk of Jupiter close by.

MOTORDOM

Indiana Classic Draws Brilliant Field of Racers

Thirty-two Captains in Speed World Enter Annual Tilt.

THIRTY-TWO cars, the largest field since engines of not more than 183 cubic inches piston displacement became the requirement, is the entry list for the tenth annual 500 mile international sweepstakes of the Indianapolis motor speedway Tuesday, May 30.

This is seven more cars than were entered a year ago, when Tommy Milton came within .22 of a second of equaling the track average of 89.84 miles an hour established by Ralph DePalma in 1915 with a much larger engine. During the last eleven months the drivers have been able to increase the speed of their mounts, and the wiseacres are predicting that a new mark will be hung up by the 1922 victor.

Four of the nine former winners are to compete for the lion's share of the $100,000 aggregate purse, of which the track offers $50,000 in gold. Three of the former winners not entered have retired from the sport, one is dead and the other, Rene Thomas, was unable to complete his plans to bring over a French car.

The quartet aspiring to be the first pilot to win two five centuries is: Ralph De Palma, Howard Wilcox, Tommy Milton, and Jules Goux. Ralph De Palma, 1915 winner, after two campaigns with the Ballot, has switched back to a Yankee mount, driving one of the Duesenberg Straight-Eights. "Howdy" Wilcox pins his faith to the Peugeot brand, having won with that make in 1919. Champion Milton has a car built in Los Angeles, which he has yet to name, entered. A year ago he won with Chevrolet's Frontenac-Eight. Goux has shipped two Ballots from the Paris factory, switching from the Peugeot to the Ballot brand. He won in 1913, finished third in 1914 and 1919, and started in 1920 with a Peugeot. Goux has not named the driver for the second Ballot. He may bring a pilot from France or England, but if he does not will pick an American to be his teammate.

Competing with Goux, his mate, and Wilcox, for the honor of taking the purse across the Atlantic will be W. Douglas Hawkes, a London engineer, who is bringing over a Bentley car to represent England. This will be the first appearance of this make of car in American racing, and the entry, which was cabled, did not give any details regarding the car.

Every race must have its millionaire, that is, every Indianapolis race. Joe Boyer, Detroit speed king, does not appear this time, but R. Clifford Durant, son of W. C. Durant, has named a Durant Special for the event. Durant has not driven for two years but has decided to come back. The car he is driving is the one which Tommy Milton used the latter part of last season to win the 1921 championship and which Milton turned back to him recently, when he got delivery of his new car.

Jimmy Murphy, who won the 1921 French Grand Prix over a rough road course near LeMans, despite the handicap of two broken ribs, was the last driver to file his entry. Just what the former mechanic of Tommy Milton and one of the most careful drivers racing will drive, is not announced.

Roscoe Sarles, runner-up last year, has switched from the Duesenberg brand to one of Louis Chevrolet's Frontenacs. Roscoe is a daring driver. In his first race in California he stood his car on end and smashed it, to keep from hitting a careless spectator, but a week later had it rebuilt and raced again. He has been one of the most consistent finishers in the game for three seasons. Being a native of the Hoosier state he will carry the hopes of a lot of Indiana fans.

Eddie Hearne, Ralph Mulford, De Palma, and Wilcox, veterans of the first five hundred in 1911, are among the starters. Both Hearne and Mulford are to be reckoned with in the final accounting. Hearne was one of the first of the millionaire drivers of the road racing days of almost a decade and a half ago, and was a star before many of the present day drivers were out of knee pants. Mulford dates back to the same era. Hearne, however, is showing his age and being bald is known in racing circles as Grandpop, while Mulford is still youthful and looks as young as the youngest pilot. Mulford and Wilcox have never missed a 500 mile race at Indianapolis.

Among others drivers entered who will bear watching are Art Klein, Harry Hartz, Jules Ellinboe, Wilbur D'Alene, and Tom Alley. Klein is a daring driver and always gets all the speed out of a car. This year he is driving a Frontenac for Louis Chevrolet, a car he has successfully campaigned in the winter races on the west coast. Harry Hartz, the juvenile of the field, won the recent San Carlos race at San Francisco piloting the Duesenberg he will drive here. Jules Ellingboe took Percy Ford's Chicago-Frontenac a year ago as a relief driver and put it in third place at the finish. This time he has switched to the Duesenberg. Ellingboe was a find of J. Alex Sloan and for five seasons starred on the dirt tracks.

Wilbur D'Alene is captain of the Monroe fleet of three cars. Wilbur has been driving for years, his best performance at Indianapolis being as runner-up to Dario Resta in 1916. Soldier Tom Alley, a mechanic on the famous old National teams, riding aide to Ralph De Palma, and for several years a driver, is going to be a teammate for D'Alene. Last year Tom drove a Frontenac and was in third place when mechanical trouble eliminated him at about the half way mark. Joe Thomas, formerly mechanic for Eddie Pullen, was one of the late entries. In the Fresno speedway race recently, Thomas was taken ill and for a time was thought he would have to undergo an operation. However, he recovered in time to file his entry for the Hoosier event and has started to prepare for the contest. He will drive a Duesenberg.

I. P. Fetterman, the sorrel topped Pittsburgh lad, who gained fame as a winner of stock car races at Uniontown, is driving a Duesenberg. He was a relief on the 1920 Duesenberg team and knows the track.

Newcomers this season include Jack Curtner and C. Glenn Howard, who have entered the first flivvers in the history of the world's greatest race. These cars are rebuilt Fords, the engines having been changed by the Chevrolet brothers, and are known as "Fronty" Fords. In addition to being Fords, the two cars will be equipped with wireless receiving sets that the drivers can communicate with the pits by radio.

Others making their bows include E. G. "Cannonball" Baker, Lora L. Corum, Frank Davidson, and William Gardner.

A soft tire turneth away cash.
While there's gas there's hope.
Fools pass on hills and curves.
A wise driver maketh a glad auto.
It is better to be slow than sorry.
Declines make the wheels go faster.
Dry springs squeak louder than "birds."
To speed is human; to get caught a fine.
As the wheel is bent so the car will go.
Where there's a nail there's a puncture.
A body's as old as its paint; a motor's as old as it pulls.
Spin and the world spins with you; stall and you stall alone.

The Car Has Come

The Columbia Light Six

Here is a high-powered, light-weight Six at the price of the average four-cylinder car. It is the first specialized unit Six that has ever been marketed at anywhere near so low a price—a car that many a well-informed automobile man said could never be built and sold for less than $1000.

This new Six is standard from top to tires. Every unit is the product of a nationally known specialized manufacturer. Every part is doubly certified—first by its maker and second by the Columbia engineers who have built it into the completed car.

We ask you to judge the Columbia Light Six by performance rather than by price. Consider it as an improved type of dependable transportation. That means that you should see it for yourself—and without delay. Phone for an early demonstration.

You can appreciate the surface beauty of this new Light Six at a glance, while the more closely you examine it the better you will realize the inner quality that extends to the least expected details.

The major units—motor, axles, transmission, clutch and others—are certified by the names of nationally responsible makers. But the rest of the car is built to equally high standards. The fenders, for instance, are the kind you look for only in very high priced cars, and are made from 20 gauge cold-rolled steel. The body is mounted directly on the frame to eliminate squeaks and rattles—another fine car practice. The radiator core is copper, where brass is usually considered "good enough." The upholstery is genuine leather.

These are minor points, to be sure, but they are typical of the way this car is built.

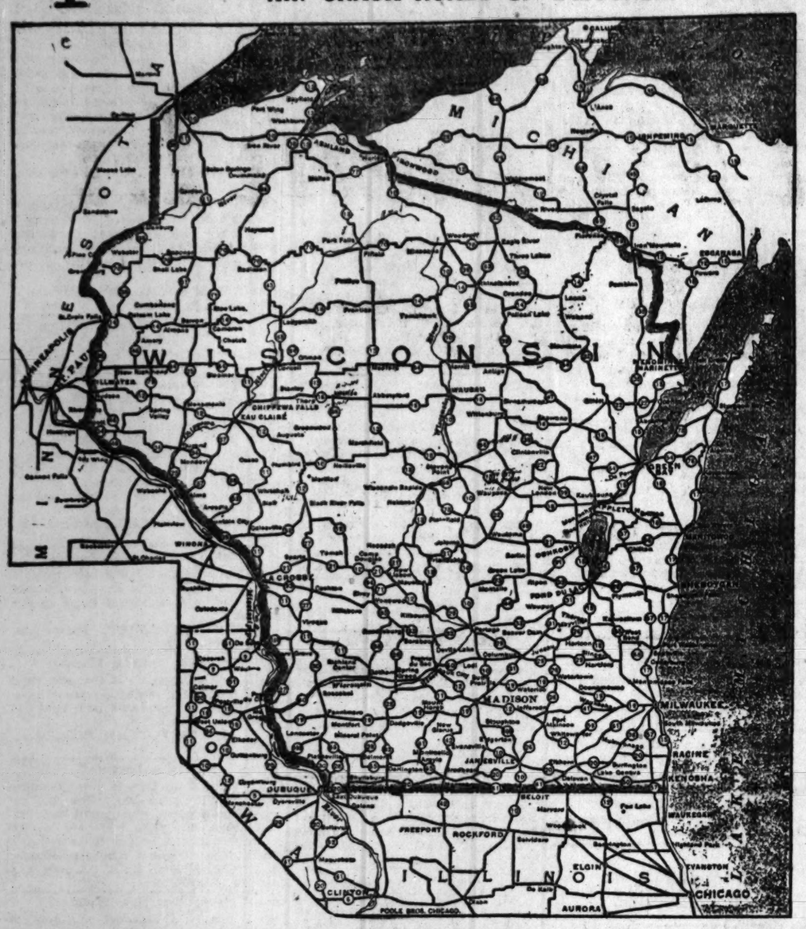
XII. CRACK ROADS OF WISCONSIN



SAVE THE MAPS

SAFE and sound again characterizes Wisconsin's splendid state highway system for the 1922 touring season. Under the direction of A. R. Hirst, a national leader in the development of connected pavements, the department of highways has made it absolutely impossible for the traveler to get lost anywhere in the state if he follows the official highway map and the marking system which numbers each road through the state and carefully points out each detour due to the extensive paving work which is already well under way.

The above map shows all of the state highways and their numbers. It does not indicate types of roads, although the majority of the state arteries are surfaced either with concrete or with gravel. It is a good plan for the tourist contemplating Wisconsin trips to secure detailed state maps from the superintendent of public property in Madison or from hotels, garages, or book stores in Wisconsin. These detail maps are brought up to date from time to time during the season and show the exact condition of the roads.

Principal trunk lines used by Chicago drivers include highways No. 15 and 57 to Milwaukee and 15 and 55 to Fond du Lac. These roads offer good surfacing all of the way, and pavement is complete on No. 15 through to Green Bay. Later in the season No. 15, or Sheridan road, can be used straight through from Chicago to Green Bay. Highway No. 10, from Rockford north to Madison, and No. 12, from Madison to Kilbourn, form another excellent combination, while No. 33, from Baraboo to LaCrosse, will be used extensively this year. No. 19 is now the best route from Milwaukee to Madison, offering pavement most of the way.

Globe Trotting Pets Are Barred in Coast Parks

PET pups, cats, parrots, canaries, and all other domestic animals dear to household hearts will again be banned by the national parks of California this summer.

No motorists may take Fido or Tabby with them if they are vacationing in the Yosemite, Sequoia or General Grant reserves, according to an official announcement just made.

Motorists had expressed hope that they would be allowed to take their pets with them vacationing in the reserves, but the government has decided that the same rules in vogue last year will hold also for this year, and the Auto club is warning all accordingly.

Those motorists passing through the big parks and not stopping may carry their pets along, but no stopovers will be allowed.

Yosemite valley was opened officially May 15, the date having been postponed five days on account of road conditions. General Grant National park also was opened. The great Sequoia reserve will not open to touring visitors until June 1. Bear valley in the southern part of California will have all routes opened by the latter part of this month. At the present time, motorists may reach the valley by way of the Victorville route.

Over 1,120,000.

The rapid growth in the use of motor trucks is indicated by the registration for 1921, which is 1,127,000, or about ten times the number in use in 1914.

War on Taxes.

Because of a surplus in the treasury from the last fiscal year the directors of the Illinois Automobile club have voted to increase the club's activities. At the present time Richard H. Lee, chairman of the legislative committee, is preparing a campaign to cut down the taxes imposed upon motorists, the work of the club's service and touring bureaus is being extended, and a club run and field day will be held in connection with the annual stockyards derby, which takes place at Palatine on Sunday, May 28. The financial report of the club, just issued, shows that the income for the last fiscal year was $100,412.33 and that of this amount the service department spent $18,253.56, the touring department $8,327, and the legal department $4,803. There was a balance at the end of the year of more than $3,300, and as the club is not run for profit, this sum will be spent along with this year's income for the benefit of the members.

Call of the West.

It's playground time again for America's millions, and the national parks are beckoning with a greater urge than ever before to the vacationist and traveler, according to inquiries already pouring into the general offices of the National Park to Park Highway association at 1608 Broadway, Denver.

The association is issuing a free illustrated booklet giving mileage and telling motorists how to get from one to another of their own national playgrounds. In this it has the cooperation of the National Park service, American Automobile association, and practically every transcontinental highway leading to or crossing the 6,000 mile sightseeing loop.

SELFISH SAFETY.

Do not try to cut in ahead of another motorist, or you might damage your own car.

REO

The ease of handling—the soft, flexible motor—the infrequency with which it is necessary to shift gears in the heaviest traffic—these are some of the reasons why the Reo is such a prime favorite with women who prefer to drive their own cars.

The dual-pedal control—eliminating as it does the cumbersome hand-emergency brake—is a feature for which women drivers are particularly grateful.

Features found exclusively in the Kissel Custom-Built Six make it safest on the road, just as the fine craftsmanship that is distinctively Kissel's makes it a remarkable motor car at every point of performance.

A frame design found in no other automobile gives the Kissel its unequalled road ability. By means of a "kick-up" at either end of the frame the weight of the car is hung extremely low and perfectly distributed.

That is why you can trust a Kissel to hug the road at any speed without side-sway or vibration. And the low-hung body, while giving ample road clearance, also enhances the distinctive lines that mark every Kissel model.

For safety too, the Kissel Custom-Built Six is equipped with double external contracting brakes, another exclusive Kissel feature. They are easily adjustable from the outside, of extreme flexibility in action, absolutely dependable under pressure; and the wear and rattle of internal brakes also are eliminated.

These are Kissel features designed directly for mechanical control. But there is another factor of safety that is also found in every Kissel car. It is in the perfect balance of the six-cylinder 61 H.P. custom-built motor; it is in the strength and fineness of body construction. It is in the painstaking care with which every Kissel part is manufactured to hair-line accuracy, then hand-fitted for the work it has to do.

It is true custom-building that creates this final factor of safety in a Kissel—a factor that gives its driver supreme confidence in his car.

The Kissel Custom-Built five-passenger touring car, now $1885, offers a remarkable combination of hand-wrought quality and low price. A corresponding reduction in the prices of other Kissel models now places before the public a line of fine-car values that should interest every motorist.

A showing is now being made.

Industrial Chief Defends Work of Big Associations

Takes Issue with Hoover on Service Rendered by Trade Bodies.

SERVICE which is of direct benefit to the public supplies the best proof of the increasing need for properly conducted trade associations, according to Alfred Reeves of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who addressed the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York on "Relations of Trade Associations to the Public."

Mr. Reeves asked that so-called "open price bureaus" be not put in the class of trade associations, with their score of activities that have no relation to prices or production. Trade association activities of value to the public, he said, include research work which makes for more scientific use of products, activities relating to more prompt delivery of goods, better service, more uniform standards of design and material as a basis for comparison; protection against untrue or exaggerated forms of advertising; the elimination of unnecessary styles; the reformation of unfair trade practices that tend to deceive, and, of course, the thing which is of very definite value to the consumer—lower prices for the things he buys.

"Trade associations have elevated the moral tone upon which all business is conducted," he declared. "While there are many legitimate activities of trade associations of primary benefit to their members, and with the public's benefits incidental or indirect, there are also dozens of association activities that bring direct and concrete benefit to the man on the street, and it is this work that will increase or decrease the standing of all associations."

Mr. Reeves declared legitimate trade associations do not seem to want exemptions from the terms of the Sherman law, but want the fundamentals of that law maintained. He questioned the need for any more legislation, asking for a vigorous enforcement of present laws in the belief that present governmental departments had ample powers to investigate those trade association activities which Mr. Hoover says are in the "twilight zone."

"Some trade associations and open price bureaus which have to do with the so called 'open priced competition' are under fire," he added, "but they are only a small percentage of the 500 or more trade associations that have become such an important factor in the upbuilding of American trade in this country and also in meeting the competition in our struggle for the world's markets. Trade associations are a natural result of the concentration of effort toward lower prices for better goods, to ultimate broader purchasing power by the public.

"Lathe manufacturers are now working to bring the number of sizes down from 70 to 15. They also maintain a bureau for the use of architects, engineers and fire insurance experts.

"In our own industry we have 114 standards on motor cars relating to both material and design, which, coupled with the cross licensing patents agreement by which manufacturers interchange their patent rights on development patents without the payment of money royalty, have contributed to the success of the modern American motor car and truck. Accident prevention campaigns, motor fuel research, standardized service, with scientific studies on proper roads for varying kinds of traffic, have all been to the advantage of the public. The tire makers brought sizes down from 44 to 11, which means tremendous savings in the size of stocks of pneumatics carried by dealers. The wax paper manufacturers have been instrumental in keeping our food cleaner and, among other things, have standardized shipping arrangements which bring lower freight charges.

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question M. H. Richardson, 4903 North Monticello avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What do you think is a needed improvement on the automobile?

The Answers.

Arthur J. Haggenjos, 17 North La Salle street, attorney—A four wheel brake system is a needed improvement that, for safety's sake, ought to be designed and applied to every car of whatever make or class. I got the idea from the description of some new foreign car, and it strongly appeals to me.

Joseph C. McCaffery, in charge of vehicle license bureau, city hall—The auto of today has been developed to a point not far from perfection. In that sense they might be compared to the classic styles of architecture. So if the future auto is to be superior to that of today they will have to redesign it from the ground up. I wouldn't be surprised to some day see a completely redesigned car driven by a turbine engine.

Peter Lenz, 3752 Belmont avenue, clerk—One of the most annoying features, both to driver and passenger, is the jerks of the car due to shifting of the gears. The steam driven car has it all over the gas car in that respect. If they are really as good as their champions say they are, then the steam car ought to be developed and popularized.

Paul L. Blockus, 1048 North Mozart street, special police—Well, if by the waving of the magic wand we can get what we want, then let's have a foolproof, punctureless tire, one having all the resiliancy of the hollow rubber one; oil and grease cups so placed that we won't have to roll around under the car to oil up; have universal good roads; drivers that keep their feet on the pedals and their arms around the steering wheel instead of around some girl.

Warren T. Schild, 4232 North Lincoln street, millinery salesman—It seems to me that the various classes of cars have been developed to a point where they are all but perfect. I read not long ago that mechanical experts throughout the world are generally agreed that the mechanical part of the auto is all but perfect. I'll venture this suggestion—hypnotize all cars so that they will refuse to run when the driver has any booze in him.

The Greatest Moment In Packard History

When a fine manufactured product has continued to inspire public confidence over a long period of years, there always arrives a dramatic moment when its conquest of the nation becomes complete and absolute.

This flood-tide period of public appreciation has arrived, in the history of the Packard, with the advent of the splendid new Single-Six.

The reception accorded this new Packard is far and away the most significant and outstanding fact of Packard development.

It is infinitely more than merely a new registration of Packard prestige—it is literally a conquest of the nation in a larger and more universal sense than ever before.

Everywhere this new Packard is the outstanding figure, stamped with the seal of unmistakable leadership.

Three times the capacity of the great Packard plants is being called for—many times the ability of branches, distributors and dealers to supply is being demanded.

It would not be natural or human if the Packard Company remained unmoved by this overwhelming bestowal of public favor.

Faithful throughout the years to the highest standards it was possible to conceive and apply, it is good to see the steadfast recognition of past years blossom and flower into still greater national leadership.

There are more good things—more really remarkable things—to be said for this new Packard Single-Six than we would care to say in this announcement.

But why, indeed, trouble to say them in the face of this splendid ovation?

We can only pledge ourselves to do all in our power to the end that as few as possible may be disappointed in their desire to acquire the new Packard Single-Six.

The Packard Company promises the motoring public the maximum production consistent with fine car manufacture. It is the purpose of this announcement to assure you that Packard will apply, to the utmost, its great facilities, toward the satisfaction of the overwhelming demand for the new Single-Six.

Highway Horrors of Egypt Result from State Delay

Mudlocked Roads Handicap Progress in Rich District.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

SOUTHERN Illinois has "paid through the nose" this spring for political rebellion cropping out here and there against the Small administration, with state and county highways levying the heavy toll. Egypt today is as deep in its ancient mud bed as it was in the days of Kaskaskia and the great western trek. Weeks after the rest of the state has watched freight and passenger traffic swing into full stride from farm to market and city to city southern counties, where the automobile registration equals and sometimes exceeds that of neighbors above the dividing line, are pushing motor transport through impassable roads, dragging cars from innumerable mud holes at huge expense, or freighting goods by team and railroad while motor equipment stands idle.

Constant delay and consistent refusal on the part of the administration to push paving projects in a number of the southern counties has practically demoralized the entire highway system of Egypt. Main traveled roads have been allowed to lie unrepaired through the spring months while the heaviest rains in history have cut them to pieces. Farmers sit on their doorsteps and watch complacently while heavy trucks loaded with valuable freight mire down to the running boards and passenger cars pile up in the mud behind them "waiting for the state patrol and maintenance plan to be put into effect."

The story of a typical pilgrimage through the rich mining and agricultural districts southeast of St. Louis is sufficient to show the almost unbelievable condition to which Egypt highways have fallen this season.

Last week a TRIBUNE car headed southeast from St. Louis for a tour of the mining district, using state highway No. 13 through Belleville to Marissa, where the good road ends, and then plowing east through Washington and Perry counties to the Franklin fields. Both county and state roads leading down to Pinckneyville, among the most important arteries of the district, offer little more than a series of shell holes, deep ruts, and broken culverts. Weeks after the heavy rains a dozen mud holes were found between Marissa and Pinckneyville, with water standing in them hub deep and boards, fence posts, and refuse dumped into them for ballast.

"Who is responsible for that main road from Coulterville?" was asked of a Pinckneyville merchant after a three hour battle over the fifteen mile stretch.

"Supervisor Young lives right on the road," was the reply, "and taxes go on just the same. The merchants here are contributing to a fund to have the holes filled up at least. We have lost all hope of ever seeing the road dragged or put into decent shape for travel."

Four miles out on the main road to DuQuoin a drain ditch had been guided across the road to form a twenty-foot bog. A patient farmer boy sat at the side of the highway holding four expectant horses but offering no comment on the water hazzard.

"Ain't no way to get through," he observed when the car mired down and rested on the running boards in the middle of the artificial lake. "All of 'em stick and I pull 'em out."

"Why don't some one throw a few loads of cinders or a little gravel in that lake," he was asked after the four expectant horses had fallen in like soldiers and pulled the car through.

"William Lynch is the road supervisor," he remarked, pocketing his highway profiteer fee. "He lives right up there in that house and he ain't done a thing but watch people pulled out. Might ask him."

Mr. Lynch was emphatically not at home. It was intimated at his house that numerous motorists had stopped there in the last few weeks to pay him a little social call. His activities, however, did not end at the mud hole.

Two hundred yards further east a huge mound of loose earth blocked the road. It had been dug from the ditch at the right and piled up on what looked to be a broken culvert. Twenty minutes of hard work was required before the car could be forced through.

Two miles from DuQuoin another mud hole claimed four cars and a truck, all carrying log chains and traveling together for protection. After an hour of alternate sticking and first aid, the cavelcade pulled through and limped into DuQuoin. Three of the cars had important business at Benton and assayed the road. Two of them were dragged back into the town late the same night. Occupants of the third slept in their car in the middle of a mud hole four miles from town.

At DuQuoin two factions were found in battle over the location of State Route No. 2, which has been surveyed to cross ten railroad tracks at grade, winding through the town of Elkville to form its main business street. One faction is trying to prevail on the state to locate the road straight south from DuQuoin to Carbondale on the west side of the tracks, thus eliminating one expensive bridge and many crossings.

From Carbondale to Marion the main road is little better than its more northerly sisters, although some work has been done and grading is complete preparatory to paving. From Marion north to West Frankfort, in the heart of the coal fields and on to Benton, the state road is ready for paving, but both detour roads are practically impassable in wet weather. It required most of one day to make eleven miles on this detour.

At one point, directly in front of a prosperous looking farmhouse, four cars were stuck in the same mud hole. The farmer came out and sat down to watch operations, observing that there had been twelve cars mired there in two days. He was advised that his presence was not needed at the hole and beat a hasty retreat before the advance of perspiring motorists.

At West Frankfort THE TRIBUNE party encountered a mud caked Ford car while taking on fuel.

"Where did you come from?" the haggard driver was asked.

"No place," he answered, climbing down painfully. "Just from the east. We have been in one mud hole over by the Wabash river for eight days. Got out of there yesterday and stuck just east of town all night last night."

The Chicago pilgrims revised their itinerary suddenly and fled north, encountering only six holes between West Frankfort and Mount Vernon, where the first road drag of the trip was seen in operation. Roads to the north and east of Mount Vernon were found to be fair, thanks to grading and dragging.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

RADIO communication with branches throughout the country has been established at factory headquarters of the Mor-and Cushion Wheel company, 800 South May street, as another feature of its unusual sales and service system. Official highway tests made by construction experts in the past month have resulted in announcement that the Chicago made wheel is among the least distructive motor equipment now in use on paved roads.

An important development in Chicago automobile circles is held in announcement by the Peerless Motor Car company of the opening of a direct factory branch with sales and service headquarters at 2323 Michigan avenue. C. A. Englebeck, a veteran of the row, has been named general manager of the branch.

R. G. Tiffany, former superintendent, has been appointed sales manager of the Cadillac Chicago branch, according to company announcement.

May 22 has been set as the date of completion of the new office building and sales and service station erected by the Gabriel Snubber company at 2632 Indiana avenue. The station has an initial capacity for the installation of 200 snubbers a day. Officials of the company have issued a warning against the general use of the word "snubber," which, they declare, is a coined word and a registered trade mark.

Substantial business increases have resulted in the moving of Elgin sales headquarters from 2323 Michigan avenue to enlarged quarters at 2612 Michigan avenue. Service headquarters have been changed to 57 East 30th street.

Twenty-nine Rickenbacker cars, equipped with Tuarc steel wheels, were received by the L. Markle company last week from the Detroit factory. The cars arrived on the steamer Fellowcraft, the first large delivery made by water this year.

Makes More Miles.

J. C. Morris, 607 North Clark street, is the inventor of the latest gas generator to take the place of exhaust and intake manifolds on any make of motor. The device draws air through the crank case, removing and using gas seepage and the vapors of the agitated oil. Excess air is furnished through an automatic valve and the combination is superheated before introduction into the carburetor.

The device is being distributed by the Callahan-Krause Motor corporation, which guarantees 50 per cent additional mileage after its installation on Fords.

Plan Inter-Club Run.

Sufficient responses have been received to assure the success of the all Chicago interclub automobile reliability run to Davenport, Ia., and return on May 24 and 25. William M. Gelderman, chairman of the arrangements committee, announces that more than twenty clubs have already listed teams of five men each.

"The event will be held under the rules of the American Automobile association and the officials will be named among those who served during the interclub runs prior to the war," said Mr. Gelderman. "It will not be a speed contest. Penalties will be assessed for being too early at controls as well as too late. Points will be marked against contestants for motor stops, work on the road, etc. A schedule of twenty-two and one-half miles an hour will be maintained going and coming."

The chamber of commerce of Davenport will entertain the motor cavalcade. Arrangements have also been made with the Kiwanis, Rotary, and Lions clubs for receptions at Dixon, Ill., the noon control on the first day, and at De Kalb, where the contestants will stop for luncheon on the return trip.

FOR SNAKE BITE.

Gasoline has been found in South Africa, to be a good cure for snake bite.

Motorized Schools.

Sheep and poultry schools built on motor trucks and traveling through rural sections have been organized by the United States department of agriculture in coöperation with the state colleges of agriculture of North Carolina and Texas.

Officials of the department of agriculture ay that more of this method of education is needed so that information on latest farming methods may be carried directly to farmers, no matter how inaccessible the community may be.

NEEDS MORE AIR.

Black exhaust from the engine shows the fuel mixture is too rich in gasoline.

Fifty-two million people depended on R&V Knight service

IN THE last twelve months 52,000,000 passengers were carried by the buses of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company of New York City. These passengers used the Fifth Avenue buses because the bus service is reliable and dependable and is operated by a company widely known for its scientific management of transportation.

These 52,000,000 people, representing an aggregate equal to nearly half the entire population of the United States, probably did not know that it was the reliability and dependability of R&V Knight engines that enabled the Fifth Avenue Coach Company to serve them so well.

In 1915 the Fifth Avenue Coach Company adopted R&V Knight (or Moline-Knight as they were then known) engines for its bus power plant and it has continued since that time to use this company's Knight engine exclusively in its bus service.

The reliability of the R&V Knight engine and its economy of operation and maintenance have had a vital part in building up the Fifth Avenue bus line business to such a volume that in one year it carries passengers to the number of ten times the total population of New York.

Does this not suggest the advisability of investigating our passenger cars using the same reliable Knight engine? Ask us to mail you a copy of our booklet, "Why We Believe in the Knight Motor."

New Models

Show 1923 Features

Westcott is the only car providing a permanent top as standard equipment without extra cost or weight. This top, firmly built on a skeleton of wood bows, reinforced by channel steel, with a metal base for extra strength at points of strain, is fifteen pounds lighter than the usual collapsible top such as used upon other cars. Not only does it add to the appearance of the car but it is the most practical top for all year service. Close-fitting plate glass curtains, at small additional cost, give driving comfort in cold weather.

The touring models are built in two types, a Special and a Standard touring car, identical in specifications but different in finish and equipment. Both models carry the permanent top and snubbers. The Special model carries as regular equipment two extra tires, tubes and covers, mounted on the side, six wire or four Tuarc or wood wheels, trunk on the rear with three suitcases, bright nickel windshield, head lamps, radiator shell and bumper, scuff pads and mirror scope, with Brown water-crushed genuine leather to match the body.

Lure of Pacific Northwest Held in Parks Circle

Myriad Interests Offered Tourists in Land of Forests.

DENSE forests, live glaciers, snowy peaks, many lakes and good fishing greet you in the national forests of the Pacific northwest. By motor, railroad, pack outfit, or afoot, you may reach some, if not all, of these attractions in whatever national forest you may enter.

In Oregon you may ride or hike northward along the Cascade's crest from Crater lake to Mount Hood over the Oregon Skyline trail, writes John D. Guthrie in the American Forestry Magazine. This trip alone passes through six different national forests—the Crater, Umpqua, Deschutes, Santiam, Cascade and Oregon. At the end of the trail is Eagle creek, Forest camp, the last word in forest camp grounds, located just off the world renowned Columbia River Highway and forty-four miles east of Portland.

The Oregon caves, "the Marble Halls of Oregon," as Joaquin Miller loved to call them, are in the Siskiyou forest in southern Oregon, and are reached over a new forest service road. You may take a pack outfit in northern Oregon and go into the little Switzerland of the northwest, the alpine lake country of the Wallowa and Whitman forests, in the Wallowa and the Blue mountains country. You will find turquoise lakes literally and truly teeming with trout.

Crossing the lordly Columbia river into the state of Washington, the tourist enters other wonderlands. The Columbia forest with Mounts Adams and St. Helens, with Spirit lake at its base; then the Rainier national forest with the "Mountain that was God" looking down upon him; then the Snoqualmie forest with its famous Sunset highway piercing it east and west; then the Washington forest, with its high, rugged peaks, its manifold glaciers, its mountain goats, its truly alpine scenery—a region to be seen thoroughly only by the experienced mountaineer.

Going west, across the sound, one may enter a vacation kingdom all its own, the Olympic forest, with its crowning glory in old Mount Olympus. Here, nestling at its base, are the jewel lakes, Quinault, Crescent and Cushman. Or going east from Seattle the traveler will come to Lake Chelan, that Norwegian fjord in its inland setting of towering mountains, or the Wenatchee forest with its lakes; Kaches, Keechelus and Cle Elum. Still farther east is a country as yet unknown to the tourist, the Colville forest, where a pack outfit must be one's motor car, Pullman and diner.

Throughout the twenty-two national forests of the north Pacific district the tourist will find 425 forest camps set aside and ready for his use. Eagle Creek, along the Columbia highway, with its tables, benches, stoves, piped water, comfort station, autos and consequent crowds—the acme of forest camps—to Twin Lakes forest camp on the Washington forest, the newest, which he can reach only via horseback and where he must rough it, all await the traveler. Surely, amid such an array of vacation delights the most fastidious may find something to please him, or the real mountaineer may find his heart's delight, beside some crystal lake set high in the mountain meadow, jewel-flowered, with only the trees, the mountains and the stars for companions.

Mountain climbers may add new laurels to their collection, for here are Diamond Peak, The Sisters, Jefferson, Hood, Adams, St. Helens, Rainier, Olympus, Glacier Peak, Baker, Stuart, and North Star—all with living glaciers, and all well worth the effort of a climb. Nowhere else within the United States can the tourist find such glaciers as to number, size, beauty and interest. Fishing is here. Here is where the fish equal to those in the stories may be found. Do you hunt with a camera? Eighteen out of the twenty-two national forests have elk; four have mountain goats; three mountain sheep—and as for deer, both mule and white tail, they're here. If you have not seen this part of your America it is high time that you did.

Valve Secret.

An obscure engine difficulty sometimes occurs that is manifested by a reduction of compression when the cylinders are hot, although they may be known to be tight when the parts are cold. This is caused by the expansion of the valve stems during the warming up process unless a proper amount of clearance is allowed between the ends of the stems and the tappets; this may be enough to prevent the valves from seating properly.

New Order Formed to Protect Motor Interests in U. S.

REPRESENTATIVES of 243 automobile clubs and over 200,000 motorists from various states met here last week to organize a national association to protect the interests of motor car owners throughout the country. According to plans, the organization expects to check reckless driving, create uniform driving regulations, effect uniformity of automobile legislation, obtain more just taxation, relieve congestion in the larger cities, and sponsor other movements in which motorists are interested.

A committee consisting of representatives from New York, Illinois, Iowa, Colorado, and California was named to effect a permanent organization, select a name, and name temporary officers pending the first convention of the organization. The meeting was called by President George H. Bird of the Illinois State Automobile association.

Uniform traffic regulation in cities, the application of automobile license fees to highway improvement, and a system of nation-wide trunk lines running east and west and north and south, with a connecting system of feeders, were among the matters discussed. Speed traps, according to delegates, will be discouraged, but the prosecution of reckless drivers will be encouraged by the organization. Delegates also said that the automobile, as personal property, was often subjected to four or five separate taxes while other property is subjected to but one tax, and it was decided to present the matter to state legislatures and the national congress with requests for relief.

NEW MOTOR CLUB

Austin is to have one of the largest motor clubs in Chicago for Master Masons. The Austin Temple Motor club held its first annual meeting in the temple at Fulton street and Central avenue recently and started off with a large list of charter members. O. H. Duncan, organizer and temporary chairman, said he hopes to have a record number of members by the end of the summer. Austin is the largest Masonic city for its size in Illinois.

Door Squeaks.

In cars fitted with old style tops door squeaks sometimes are caused by pulling the top straps too tightly. This causes the doors to bind and when going over a bump or other irregularity in the road, a most irritating squeak results.

Automobile Depreciation—

LUBRICATE RIGHT

Your car's gears and bearings should not wear out.

They should outlive engine and body.

WHITMORE them!

Then all the wear will be on the lubricant—not on the metal.

One filling in rear axle or transmission will last more than a year. After that you can strain and use it over and over again.

A thin film of WHITMORE'S will lubricate perfectly.

There will be no bare spots to cause friction and wear.

Gears and bearings, where it is used, will last 500% longer; your car will drive and run easier; and your freedom from worry about wear will mean much to you.

For 29 years big industries have absorbed the entire output of WHITMORE'S. NOW you can buy it at your dealer's or have your service station install it.

Unlike common greases, WHITMORE'S is not a by-product. It costs more to make—sells for more—takes half as much—lasts four times longer than any other lubricant.

"Built First to Last"

Odell Cords are the kind of tires that show to best advantage when the going gets rough. There's not a yellow streak or an ounce of timid material in an Odell Cord. They'll carry your car over rough, ragged, littered streets or through the murderous, root-lined country ruts without the slightest trouble.

Odell Cords are made to do one thing well—Hold Air. And they do it no matter how treacherous the road.

Odell Cords are always "there in a pinch."

Remember they're priced very low.

How Few—Not How Many

Will your car throttle down on high gear to less than a mile an hour with the same smooth, silent power flow that you enjoy when it sprints along at the usual driving speeds—and then—respond without balk or hesitation the moment you press the accelerator to the floor?

This is the real test of a motor car—the National test—a test so sharply revealing that any inherent defects in balance, gas distribution, power application and torque are apparent immediately.

Try the low-speed test with the 1922 National Six. Bring up sharply from 30 m. p. h. to a fraction of a single mile. Then step on the accelerator and see how tremorlessly and swiftly the National responds.

The same inbuilt power plant perfection which makes it possible for the 1922 National Six to operate at lowest speeds in high gear with such unprecedented smoothness naturally results in other advantages: Speed, when wanted, of more than 70 m. p. h.—acceleration from 5 to 30 m. p. h. in 9 seconds—amazing fuel, oil and tire economy—lessened upkeep expense—longer car life.

There has never been a better National—or a better looking National—than the 1922 National Six.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Churches Launch "Boys' Week" with Services Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

WHEN a feller needs a friend" will find realization today in the churches of Chicago and throughout the nation. This is Boys' week and today is Boys' day in the churches.

The boys' organizations, such as the Boy Scouts, the Boys' Builders, the jnvenile Masonic order, and the Chicago Boys' club, will lend their aid in rallying their own members and boys outside of any regular organizations. The Rotary club has assigned special speakers to assist the regular Boys' week committee in providing practical talks to the boys. Every boy will be urged to attend some church.

The program at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall will be devoted entirely to the interests of the boys.

William Lewis Butcher, originator of the Boys' week movement, will speak concerning his experiences in New York in dealing with the boy in connection with the Brace Memorial Newsboys' home. His subject will be, "That Boy Next Door." The Rev. Josiah Sibley, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, will speak on "God's Way with a Boy." This service will begin at 7:40. At 7 o'clock Arthur E. Bestor, superintendent of the Bible class, known as the John D. Rockefeller Bible class, and president of the Chautauqua institute, who has recently returned from Europe, will speak on the subject, "The Boy Problem in Other Lands."

Pastors will address the boys in many churches.

The Rev. G. Schuessler, pastor of the English Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, will lay the corner stone of the new church on Harvard avenue, between 64th and 65th streets, at 3:30 o'clock today. The new edifice, costing nearly $250,000, will be the largest of the denomination in the middle west.

A conference on Christianity and the economic order will be held in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Evanston, beginning next Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. and closing Thursday afternoon. Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Pittsburgh area will preside. The subjects discussed will be: "What is the economic order and what is it worth?" "Christian principles that affect the economic order," "Is competition beneficial?" "Property," "Wealth and income," "What are we going to do about it?" Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Chicago, and Bishop W. O. Shepard, Portland, Ore., formerly of Chicago, were among those who issued the call for the conference. Two hundred delegates are expected to be present. The meeting is held under the social service commission of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Catholic Casino male chorus will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary by giving a concert today at 2:45 p. m. at Powers theater.

The corner stone of Swift hall, named for the donor of the $130,000 which the building will cost, Mrs. G. F. Swift, will be laid today at 4 o'clock at the Methodist Episcopal Old People's home, 1415 Foster avenue. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will conduct the ceremony.

It will be family day today at the Marlboro Neighborhood church, 65th and Robey streets. At the 11 o'clock a. m. service families are requesetd to have all members present.

THE REV. BERNARD IDDINGS BELL.
[Hollinger Photo.]

The Rev. Bernard Iddings Bell, president of St. Stephen's college, Annandale-on-the-Hudson, New York, well known in Chicago and vicinity as volunteer chaplain at Great Lakes Naval station and as dean of the Episcopal cathedral at Fond du Lac, Wis., will receive the degree of doctor of divinity next Wednesday at 3 o'clock at the commencement exercises of Western Theological seminary, 2720 Washington boulevard.

He is 35 years old and one of the youngest college presidents in America. He was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1907 and from the Western Theological seminary in 1910. He served as assistant in Christ and Grace churches, Chicago, and in Grace church, Oak Park, before being called to Fond du Lac as dean in 1914.

He is the author of "Right and Wrong After the War" and "The Work of the Church for Men at War."

A Presbyterian Young People's council has been formed in Chicago. The officers are: Fred Allen, Covenant church, president; Miss Ethel Palmer, Normal Park church, secretary, and Harold G. Heinze, Calvary church, treasurer.

The Rev. Charles R. Osborne, pastor of the Coldwater, Mich., Baptist church, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Morgan Park Baptist church and will begin work about June 1. The Morgan Park church is one of the important Baptist churches of Chicago.

The choral society of the First Baptist church, Oak Park, will sing Gaul's oratorio, "The Holy City," this evening. The church has a total in subscriptions and cash of $386,977 towards their new building in process of erection.

The thirty-seventh annual commencement of the Western Theological seminary, 2720 Washington boulevard, will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the seminary chapel in Wheeler hall. The Rt. Rev. C. P. Anderson, D. D., president of the board of trustees, will confer the degrees, diplomas, and prizes, and the Rev. E. W. Averill, rector of Trinity church, Fort Wayne, Ind., will preach the baccalaureate sermon.

A radio outfit is being installed in the Millard Avenue Presbyterian church. "We expect to have a horn in the church and furnish some of the Sunday afternoon programs," the announcement reads.

Yes the colored dial idea is absolutely new.

YOUR Ford instruction book tells you to oil and grease various parts of the car at certain mileages so as to maintain their efficiency.

For instance, to change the crank-case oil every 1000 miles. Without a speedometer you cannot tell when you have gone this distance. Even with your present speedometer you cannot check lubrication unless you keep a written record and constantly refer to it. Few car owners take this trouble, and millions of cars suffer because of this inattention.

Now you can get this new Stewart Speedometer with colored dials in the season mileage indicator which automatically tells you when to lubricate.

For example, every 1000 miles a RED dial appears. You refer to a chart furnished with each instrument. It tells you where to oil and grease, and indicates these points on a diagram of the Ford chassis. Four other colors appear at different mileages. Each color indicates that lubrication is needed at certain points as shown on this chart.

All record keeping eliminated. On any car lack of lubrication is sure to cause trouble. Repair bills cut to a minimum after installing Model 160-K.

AVIATION

Navy Chiefs to Make Tests of All Metal Ship

Stout Gives America First All Metal Airplane.

BY MORROW KRUM.

It is in a hangar at Selfridge field, Mt. Clemens, Mich., now, and if it performs in the manner planned there will be a great tendency toward the use of metal in aircraft construction in America and also a proud feather in the hat of William B. Stout of Detroit.

It is a bi-motored monoplane built entirely of metal. The ship is to be the property of the United States naval air service if it meets the requirements of a committee that will go to Detroit soon for an official inspection.

It should be recorded that the navy has absolutely prohibited the manufacturer from releasing for publication any details of the ship. Last week while a Detroit the aviation editor attempted to secure from Mr. Stout several details about his ship and the information was kindly refused. However, another mission took the writer to Selfridge field and there an opportunity to see the ship was presented.

The ship is to carry one 1,000 pound bomb, which contains enough destructive power to sink a battleship. There are two cockpits, one for the pilots and another for a gunner. The ship is patterned somewhat after the bat wing style, the trailing edges of the wings falling back to within a few feet of the tail surfaces.

It is all metal—that is the one big feature of this plane. The entire construction is of metal, the lightest metal for its strength in the world. The pontoons that are to be attached for water work are all metal, the wing parts are metal, the wing covering is metal—everything but the propeller.

This is America's first effort at metal ships. The Germans built the Junker metal monoplane and had unusual success. Now comes an American with a plane that promises to perform with equal ability.

Every man in the aeronautical business in America hopes that the Stout monoplane will be the success the builder promises. When the tests are completed the details of the ship will be released and then the public will be given a more complete picture of this plane.

National Guard at Kokomo Has Nine Airplanes

THE 137th Observation squadron, air service, Indiana national guard, stationed at Kokomo, will receive regular army instruction under Capt. William F. Donnelly, who has been designated by the war department as permanent instructor. Capt. Donnelly is an experienced flyer, and will do much toward whipping the outfit into condition.

The medical detachment, to which this unit is entitled, has been formed during the last week. Dr. H. M. Rhorer has been appointed flight surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Equipment is still coming in daily, and the entire squadron of 137 men is now completely outfitted. The trucks and motorcycles have been allotted, and will be driven to Kokomo as soon as road conditions will permit. Bad weather has delayed the construction of the two new hangars, so that the nine ships which have already been issued will not be set up immediately, but by early summer the organization will be in good shape for intensive training.

Form Pact?

It is reliably reported that negotiations have begun between representatives of the Czecho-Slovak and Austrian governments regarding a regular air service between Prague and Vienna.

HIGHER THAN WE THOUGHT.

Millions more persons in the United States have incomes over $2,000 than are given in the bureau of internal revenue returns. Income in the United States estimates this class, including income tax payers, at 5,200,000 for the year 1918, whereas only 2,908,000 persons paid taxes on net income returns of this amount. Special exemptions of many sorts account for the difference. It is to be noted, too, that no post-war year figures are yet obtainable, and consequently from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 men under arms are not included. The markets for all products, including automobiles, are therefore greater than would at first appear from income tax returns.

AT YOUR SERVICE

The next time you take the London-Paris air liner you will find air stewards aboard, ready to put a pillow beneath your head or serve a sandwich. The two small men shown in the picture are the first air stewards in the world.
[Kadel & Herbert Photo.]

CRASH LESSONS

Keep Your Ship.

One time after the armistice and the only time I flew after the armistice, I was ferrying a bus from one drome to another about 200 miles away and across a low range of thickly wooded mountains. It was a Liberty DH-4, and I had never flown one before. I had had a bad night and in my hurry to get the job done I didn't stop to learn anything about my motor.

I was at 2,000 feet or so, and had just passed the mountains when the big end bearing broke. I had never heard such a noise; had never seen such smoke. I stuffed the nose down and switched off the magneto, but the engine still kept on running, shaking the old bus to pieces. It flapped its wings like an old crow. I couldn't figure why the motor didn't stop.

When we hit the ground the ship turned over. A French farmer revived me with some vin rouge, and I discovered that there were two mags to switch off instead of one. Moral—know your engine and your instruments! J. M.

The Reserves.

The 318th group, pursuit, organized reserves, with headquarters in Indianapolis, has three squadrons, the 462d, 463d, and 464th in Indiana (Kokomo, Wabash, and Indianapolis), and the fourth, the 465th, at Louisville, Ky.

BIG CAMP.

Motor tourists' park at Atlanta, Ga., has facilities for the care of 1,000 automobiles.

In Russia.

A statement in a Russian newspaper announces the formation of a Russo-German air traffic company, which will begin operations by establishing an air route between Moscow and Konigsberg, to connect with the Berlin-Konigsberg express train services.

EARL MOTORS INC.

The EARL Creed

TO BUILD an Institution as well as a motor car and to build both so soundly that no one ever can doubt the integrity of either.

TO MAKE a car so good that the simple truth about it will always be an adequate recommendation; to price it so fairly that its value can never be questioned.

TO REMEMBER that customers are more important than sales; that while a sale may be a temporary advantage, a customer is a permanent asset; that profits are legitimate only as a by-product of service.

TO REGARD our interests and those of our dealers and the public as one and indivisible; to place the permanent satisfaction of our customers and their customers forever above any temporary advantage to ourselves; in short, to win public confidence by deserving it and then to regard it as a sacred trust.

TO REALIZE these purposes by putting into our product something more than money, labor and materials; to add to every car that we build something invisible but not intangible, namely, the super-values that lie in those ultimate realities that men call love, faith, inspiration and aspiration.

THESE ARE the values that transcend all skill of hand and cunning of machinery; that transmute the making of things and the selling and buying of them into the joy of work and the pride of ownership. These are the values that endure and that are the sure foundation of mutual GOOD WILL.

TO THESE PURPOSES we dedicate ourselves and our resources, and to them we pledge the honor and the honest effort of every man, every day.

FARM AND GARDEN

Experts Predict Scarcity of Work Horses on Farm

Animal husbandry experts at the Iowa State college predict there will be a shortage of farm work horses unless farmers in the corn belt begin immediately to breed more mares and raise more colts.

The great difficulty, according to A. B. Case of the college's animal husbandry department and field man for the Iowa Draft Breeders' association, is that farmers themselves are short on good horses. He says: "The number has been much decreased. If farmers do not soon raise enough colts to take care of their replacement needed they will face a serious shortage of economical farm power. All farmers should breed enough mares each year so that they could sell one or two pairs of horses 6 or 7 years old and have enough 3 years olds coming on to replace them."

The horse scarcity is gradually being reflected in the draft horse market. Horses worth $200 or more are in keen demand.

Tips on Fighting Pests

The big fight with insects usually comes along in June, and farmers and gardeners need every possible aid to keep them in check. Here are a few bulletins and circulars sent free by the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.:

Farmers' Bulletin 444, Mosquitoes; 691, Grasshoppers, Sugar Beets, and Truck Crops; 838, Harvesting Hay with the Sweep Rake; 876, Making Butter on the Farm; 903, Evaporation and Drying of Fruits; 943, Haymaking; 956, Curing Hay on Trucks; 975, The Control of European Foulbrood; 984, Farm and Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables; and 1225, The Potato Leafhopper and Its Control.

Department Circular 35, Home Garden Diseases and Insects, How to Control Them, Boys' and Girls' Club Work, and 96, United States Grades for Potatoes.

More Work for Windmills.

The old farm windmill will be given a new job if the engineering experiments that are now being made at the Iowa station prove to be successful. Turning a dynamo to produce electric lights on the farm is the idea being tested by F. C. Fenton, agricultural engineer, and E. C. Kurtz, electrical engineer, at the Iowa State college. The test is being made with an ordinary windmill which turns a generator, and the electricity is stored in batteries until used. If it proves to be practical, engineers see the possibilities of making cheap lights available on the farm.

Sees Short Pig Crop.

Reports coming into the Chicago office of the American Poland China Record association indicate that farmers will have a shorter pig crop this year than was expected. In all parts of the middle west farmers filled up their breeding pens last fall, and laid plans for a big crop of spring pigs. These reports, according to the association, come in from all parts of the swine producing territory and show that, while the number of breed sows is larger than last year, the number of pigs raised will hardly be as large. Many pigs were born dead and others were killed by hog cholera, the reports say.

This giant dandelion root measures fifty inches from the point where the leaves branch out at the crown down to the tip. The specimen was sent to The Tribune by G. H. James, Polo, Ill. It is the common dandelion, known to botanists at Taraxacum officinale, that has already spread its yellow blankets over the lawns this spring. Long tap roots like this make the dandelions difficult to eradicate.

Enter the Decorators.

Along with the early summer cleanup—house cleaning, raking the lawn, and picking up sticks in the barnyard—comes the task of renovating the poultry house. Nothing will leave the fowls' quarters in better condition than to cover the walls, roosts, and nests with a good coat of whitewash. This recommendation for making a whitewash that will stick comes from Minnesota's university farm: Slake one-half bushel of fresh lime with boiling water, covering the receptacle to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve, and add seven pounds of fine salt, previously dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice, boiled to a thin paste and stirred in; one pound of white glue, soaked first in cold water until swollen, then carefully melted over fire. To this mixture add five gallons of hot water, and let it stand covered for a few days before using.

Good News for Apiarists

Honey will be cheaper in Chicago next fall if reduced freight rates have anything to do with the price. The transportation department of the American Farm Bureau federation has just been advised by the Northwestern railroad that the rates from Wyoming to Chicago will be reduced to $1.35 cents a hundred. This is a reduction of 31½ cents a hundred, and will apply to more than 1,000,000 pounds of honey. It will result in a saving to western beekeepers of many thousands of dollars annually.

GARDEN NOTES

Plants that are crowded in hotbeds or pots can be safely transferred to cold frame at this time of the season.

Begin stirring the soil as soon as the seedlings break through the ground. Frequent use of the rake and wheel hoe, especially after each rain, will kill weeds and help to prevent the plants from suffering later when it is hot and dry.

If you have never tried the trench method of growing beets, sow a few seed tomorrow. Beets can be safely sown in trenches from the middle of May to the first of June. Sow thinly and cover with two inches of dirt.

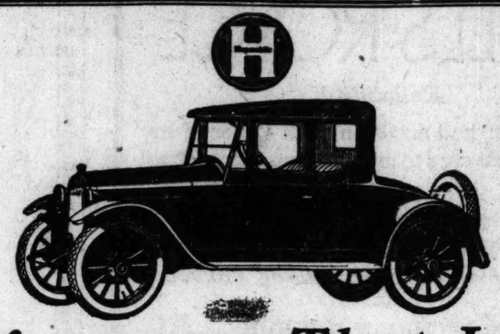
An extra hour or two spent in the garden now is equivalent to several hours' work late in the season if weeds are allowed to get a start.

This week is a good time to plant bush, bush lime, and pole beans. Bush beans planted now will be ready for use by the first week in July.

Get the seed ready to follow up the early crops of spinach and radishes as soon as they are harvested. Space is too valuable in city gardens to allow any of it to be idle for even a week.

Where intensified gardening is done growers are finding that in preparing soil for the second crop it pays to sprinkle a little bone meal thinly over the ground, work it in with a rake, and then sow the seed.

Petting and pampering plants will not always mean they will produce the best crops. Tomato, cauliflower, pepper, eggplant, cabbage, and sweet potato plants that "just grow like Topsy" seem to produce the best crops provided they are of the right size when transplanted.



Performance That Lasts

The Hupmobile is a remarkably fine performer when it's new; and the same fine performer when it's old.

The twelve-year-old Hupmobile still exerts a sharp demand in all parts of America, and continues to render yeomen service.

Owners, and those who buy in the used car markets, will tell you its depreciation is slower and smaller; that its price as a used car is proportionately higher.

It is this everlasting regularity of performance and service, together with its consistent economy, its efficiency, and its high resale value, which has always stamped the Hupmobile an extraordinary motor car value.

FARM AND GARDEN

ardy Perennials Flourish Beside "Gasoline Alley"

By Frank Ridgway.

GROWING perennial flowers in back yards just over the fence from Gasoline Alley is considered impracticable by those who have not had experience with city gardening. Mrs. H. M. Bowers, one of Hyde Park's most successful flower growers, has proof that it can be done. In spite of the barrage of gasoline fumes that rolls over the back fence, she has blossoms in her perennial garden from the crocus of March to the chrysanthemum of November.

On one side of the garden is a public garage, besides many small ones, belching smoky fumes from early morning until late at night. Nature has apparently provided the flowers with gas masks, and the injury is hardly noticeable.

Eight Months of Blooms.

Twenty-five years ago Mrs. Bowers started her garden. She has made a close study of the new varieties brought in each year, and those that could not withstand the tests were eliminated.

Eight months in the year there are flowers to be plucked, as a result of careful selection and planting of various that bloom in different months. It has taken years to bring together such a collection, valued chiefly because all of the plants are hardy enough to withstand severe winters alone and because experience has established the fact that the kinds of plants grown in this garden can be safely grown in thousands of other Chicago back yards that are just over the fence from Gasoline Alley.

Mrs. Bowers' back yard is no larger than the average, but she has found room for dozens of different kinds of flowers. Here and there, tucked away among the shrubs, around the trunks of trees, and along the fence, are plants taking their turn to bob up and unfold their blossoms according to schedule.

Tulip Time Is April.

The March crocus, winter blooming iris, and scilla furnish the early spring blossoms. In April, the bulb month, the garden is brilliantly lighted with flashy colors—tulips, daffodils, the earliest bloom then. The cottage tulip, the low growing kind, is found in this garden.

The blooming time extends on into May when the Darwin comes in with lilies of the valley, the low growing phlox, forget-me-nots, double buttercups, Dutch bleeding hearts, hardy bachelor buttons, perennial flax, pyrethrum, German iris and the star of Bethlehem.

Most of the May bloomers are out in June. The pyrethrum is considered one of the most valuable early summer bloomers, used as a cut flower, blooming various colors, including white. The yellow iris has already dropped its bloom, but the purple blossomed iris is now coming out. The dwarf blue and yellow iris bloomed in the Hyde Park garden during the first half of May.

The pyrethrum continues to bloom in June, along with hardy bachelor buttons, perennial flax, and the delphinium which comes along the latter part of the month.

There are many of the plants that bloom throughout the season in this garden, including perennial flax, forget-me-nots, phlox, shasta daisy, and others.

Midsummer Blossoms.

The delphinium blooms in July and August. Mrs. Bowers cuts the plants down at the end of the blooming period; in spring up again the same season of bloom. "I have picked them as late as October," Mrs. Bowers says.

In July the orange and lemon lilies are in bloom. The orange is in bloom in July 4. Veronica, pink arrows, coreopsis, and gallardia come out during the two hot months.

Then in September the boltonia, the silvery white aster, floats its blossom plumes nodding to the Michaelmas daisies that raise their heads about the same time. Sedum, a soft rose colored flower, also comes out in September.

The season closes the last of October or the first of November with the chrysanthemums, homestead chrysanthemums, the bronze and yellow blossoms. With them are the pansies and snapdragons last into November 1.

Shrubs for Protection.

Mrs. Bowers's scheme of planting has been followed throughout the garden. Flowering shrubs have been planted here and there among the shrubs as they are found in nature. The cottage tulip is used among the bushes, while the Darwins are arranged to form a background. The latter come into bloom about the time the cottage blossoms are wilting. Hovering over the perennials in Mrs. Bowers' garden are numerous well arranged shrubs that stand as protectors, protecting the blossoms on sizzling hot summer days, breaking the wind, and protecting dormant plants in winter. One tall lilac bush is valued highly because of its size and age. It is at least forty years old. One of the snowball bushes is more than fifteen years old. Both of these old landmarks play an important part in the general planting scheme.

Concealing Walls and Fences.

Privacy edgings are furnished by the maidenhead ferns that are now twelve to eighteen inches tall. They die in the fall and come out early in the spring, and will grow where other plants fail, thriving in shady corners.

On the lattice that hides the garage in the rear of the yard there are vines of the feathery white clematis and Allegheny that ramble seven or eight feet high. They die down to the ground in the fall and come up again in the spring. Sections of the solid board fence surrounding the entire yard are covered with branches of the bitter sweet plant. Boston ivy vines spread in fan shape over the dingy bricks to hide the walls adjacent to the flower beds.

"If you want to be successful in growing perennials from seed plant them in August and get the plants started early enough so they will be able to withstand the winter. They will not bloom the first summer but will send out a few blossoms the second season. If you want perennials to bloom the first year, get clumps from nurseries and set them out in the spring. Here's an old adage I always follow in planting and sowing: 'This rule to the garden you must apply: plant wet and sow dry.' Buy clumps that are wet, dig a hole, fill it with water before setting them; the clumps will not know they have been transplanted."

The lily of the valley is one of the hardiest perennials grown, Mrs. Bowers adds, spreading so rapidly that it has to be thinned every year. From a small bed she gives away bushels of the blossoms every year.

Set Bulbs in Fall.

Anybody can set bulbs and grow them successfully if they follow the simple directions given in seed catalogues, Mrs. Bowers believes. All of the bulbs in her garden are set in the fall, and are covered with leaves as soon as cold weather sets in.

LESSON IN GARDENING.—D. J. Brumley, chief engineer of Chicago terminal improvement of Illinois Central railway, and his son, Joe, in their garden at Flossmoor. Joe has his own garden, but he trades work with dad occasionally. For seven years they've kept their one-third acre garden green from spring until fall. Here's where Mr. Brumley has done much of the planning to electrify the I. C. railway that winds along the shore of Lake Michigan.

JUST OVER THE FENCE FROM GASOLINE ALLEY.—This perennial flower garden in Hyde Park is more than twenty-five years old, and continues to thrive in spite of smoky fumes that come from garages next door. H. M. Bowers, the owner, is shown watering a big Darwin tulip that's trying to hide among the other plants. Low growing phlox blooms and tulips can be seen under the snowball bush that is fifteen years old. A select list of dozens of perennials that resist gas attacks and Lake Michigan breezes are grown in the Bowers garden.

Tips for Poultrymen

If you haven't a lock on your hen house door, put one on. Hang a flap of canvas over the keyhole. That keeps out the moisture winter and summer, and prevents rust and frozen locks in cold weather.

The sun will soon make things steam around brood coops, making it miserable for chicks. Brood coops should have a sun shade built over them at least by June 1.

One-fourth of a pound of lye in ten gallons of water will make a powerful disinfectant to use on poultry house floors, nests, roost poles, and dropping boards.

Out in Kansas farmers have been robbed of hundreds of good hens by fake cullers. The fakers cull the farmers' flock and charge them 1 cent a bird, provided they are allowed to buy the culls at market price. The swindlers took eighty of the best layers from one farmer's flock.

Sell the roosters early—they bring more if sold early in the season than they do if left to be culled from the flock and sold later in the summer. Where roosters are left in the flock there will likely be late hatches coming off in small broods from secret nests. By removing the rooster the eggs keep better and the broody hens are ready to begin laying sooner.

Moldy feed is common during rainy weather and causes the death of many chicks. Watch the feed bins; keep them dry.

Nothing will do more toward giving chicks a good start than to keep them in a quiet place. Handle them only when it is absolutely necessary.

When infertile eggs are found in the nest or incubator do not throw them away. If cooked and chopped up they make excellent feed for chicks. Experts at the Iowa station say that even eggs that have started to decompose are all right for feed, as the protein remaining can be utilized. The eggs can be used instead of meat scraps.

Scab and other potato diseases can be prevented by disinfecting the seed potatoes before they are cut and planted. An easy treatment can be given the seed potatoes by soaking them in a solution of one-half pint of commercial formalin in fifteen gallons of water. Put the seed tubers in a sack or basket for immersion.

The Adirondacks

and Montreal-Province of Quebec Tours

TO attempt a word picture of the Adirondacks is to undertake the impossible. One must see with his own eyes what Nature can do when in the mood to show her matchless skill. The jaded mind, the tired body, find inspiration, invigoration and rejuvenation at every turn. It's in the air, in the sunshine and in the people. Every pastime and diversion is at your elbow, while hotels provide creature comforts and conveniences that are homelike and hospitable.

Big as Cords, Better than Cords, Cost less than Cords

HYDRO TORON

20% Reduction on All Ford Sizes—10% on All Others

There was immediate and enthusiastic response to Hydro-Toron's recent announcement of 20% price reduction on 30x3½ and 31x4 clincher tires, and 10% on all sizes of straight-side tires.

Car owners were quick to respond to this opportunity of buying tires as distinctive—as notably good as Hydro-Torons, at much lower prices.

Double factory capacity resulted in lower cost of production. These savings we passed on to our customers as soon as they were effected.

Same Values—At Reduced Prices

You get the same built-in values about which you have been reading for months:

The same Internal Hydraulic Expansion process, which prevents defects such as blisters, buckles, etc., from being hidden in the casing during manufacture and curing.

The same method of sealing the tire by means of the Toron chemical treatment of fabric, whereby tensile strength and holding power are greatly increased and the tire proofed against moisture and oxidation;

The same wonderful guarantee of 10,000 miles against stone-bruise and blow-out;

The same feature of oversize—as big as cord tires.

And all these values not only at prices less than cords, but lower than many common fabric tires.

Be sure to specify Hydro-Torons the next time you buy tires.

Superfluous Hair removed by 1 to 16 needle Electrolysis; 60 to 700 hairs destroyed per hour. No pain, no scars. Absolutely perfect and guaranteed permanent by a combination of responsible people that are EXCLUSIVE SPECIALISTS.
NOTE:—ELECTROLYSIS, or the so-called Electric Needle Method of destroying superfluous Hair, IS POSITIVELY the only method known to medical science today by which the ugly roots, the hair bulbs, can be entirely reached and destroyed permanently WITHOUT LEAVING A SCAR. In other words, POSITIVELY nothing can be applied to the flat surface of the skin by any way, shape or form which will penetrate deeply enough to reach and destroy the hair bulbs without destroying at the same time the tissue between the first layer of skin and the hair-bulbs. THINK this over CAREFULLY to avoid being misled. It is especially important to those embarrassingly afflicted with superfluous hair.

Bird-Sykes

2215 Michigan-av.

Paige Distributors.

WHEN "BIRD-SYKES" SAY, "REBUILT"

They do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle, measuring or testing parts to determine wear, replacing worn parts with new, rebuilding, adjusting, tuning up, repairing body, refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt car satisfies the eyes as a new car, and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every "Rebuilt" Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in A1 mechanical condition. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage.

We do not ask our customers to pay exorbitant rate charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy from us on deferred payments. You can buy a "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" car on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

CHICAGO'S LARGEST EXCLUSIVE USED CADILLAC DEALERS.

Buy your Cadillac where prices are away down. Every car we sell carries exactly the same guarantee as a new car, and free service that is unequaled.

Every car we buy must first be an exceptionally good car and when ready to sell is a perfect car. Condition, quality, guarantee and service considered, every price is a real value.

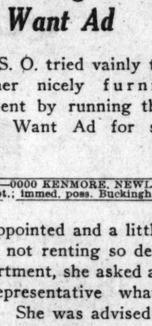
Did you write your Want Ad in a hurry?

OF course you did. People usually do.

Many Want Ads are written in a hurry because they are a part of the hurry and bustle of commerce. But remember, "Easy writing makes hard reading." Your Want Ad may be written in a hurry, but it is read at leisure. Be sure that you have omitted no information essential to your readers' knowing in what respect your offer differs from other offers in the same classification. Be sure your Want Ad is interesting—that it gives a vivid, complete mental picture of what you want to sell!



Why you should watch the wording of your Want Ad

MRS. O. tried vainly to rent her nicely furnished apartment by running the following Want Ad for several days:

TO RENT—0000 KENMORE, NEWLY FURN. 5 rm. apt.; immed. poss. Buckingham 0000.

Disappointed and a little puzzled in not renting so desirable an apartment, she asked a Tribune representative what was wrong. She was advised to rewrite her Want Ad, giving more detailed information. It ran thus:

TO RENT — ATTRACT. 5 RM. APT., NEW overstuffed walnut furn.; imm. poss.; nr. bus. 0000 Kenmore-av. Buck. 0000.

This Want Ad rented the apartment very quickly. It is only one instance among thousands where the slogan, "The more you tell, the quicker you sell," has made new friends.

—manager gives slogan credit

MISS H., employment manager of the XXX chain of stores, needed a few saleslaides in the company's State street store. She ran the following Want Ad, which failed to attract the type of girls for which she was looking:

SALESLADIES — PERMANENT POSITIONS Good salaries for young ladies who are willing to work. Apply Miss ——, 3d floor. XXX & Co., 00 S. State-st.

Miss H. asked a Tribune Adtaker to rewrite the Want Ad for her. More definite information about the positions open was included in the new Want Ad, which ran as follows:

GIRLS — STATE STREET STORE NEEDS several saleslaides to receive training to later become assistant heads; prefer girls who live at home; experience not necessary. Apply XXX & Co., 00 S. State-st., 3d floor. Miss H——.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

PLAN LAKE SHORE DRIVE HOTEL TO BE CITY'S FINEST

New $3,000,000 Hostelry to Be East of Drake.

BY AL CHASE.

Old Doc Stork is going to be one of the favored and popular guests in Chicago's newest and most luxurious hostelry, the $3,000,000 Lake Shore drive hotel, a nineteen story steel structure designed by Fugard & Knapp, to be just east of the Drake, overlooking the lake, on which work has just started.

HUGH McLELLAN.
[Moffett Photo.]

Not that there'll be any prizes or cash bonuses to guests for the old doc's arrival. Good heavens, no! Don't forget this is right spang on the most glittering twenty-one karat edge of the Gold Coast! But youngsters will be treated with as much if not more consideration than their elders—and a child's life in a hotel as a rule is considerably of a bore.

Everything a Kid Could Think Of.

There'll be a great, glass covered playground on the roof of the new Lake Shore Drive hotel with semi-partitions, so that the hilarious romping of the tiniest of the Gold Coasters won't conflict with the more dignified play of the older kids. There'll be everything that the modern athletic youngster of all ages can wish for, with a play director to teach the game-ignorant and supervise the entire batch of kids.

And then in addition to all this there'll be a magnificent Italian garden fronting on Walton place, part of which probably will be devoted to recreation, with tennis courts, etc. This garden will extend 133 feet along Walton and be 118 feet deep. It'll be virtually an extension eastwards of the Drake hotel garden, though, of course, separated from it.

To Be Chicago's Finest.

Hugh McLellan, who probably has done more high class building in Streeterville than any other Chicagoan, is associated with Robert H. Zoller in the Lake Shore Drive Building corporation, which will own and operate the new hotel.

"I'm aiming at making it the finest hotel in Chicago," said Mr. McLellan, "with the most attractive furniture, fittings, and decorations that money and good taste can supply."

It will be the highest type of family hotel, with no kitchenettes, but with every facility for guests taking all of their meals in their rooms, if they prefer, though there'll be a large dining room seating 400. This will be open to the public, but no bid will be made for outside patronage. There'll be no dinner dancing and no ballroom.

Will Have 416 Rooms.

For the person who likes figures, here are a few: There'll be 416 rooms; the site fronts 117 feet on the drive and extends back 216 feet to Walton place, where the frontage is 133 feet. The hotel doesn't cover the entire lot, however, the above mentioned Italian garden using up a good share of it. Of the total $3,000,000 cost, the site and building will use up $2,700,000, the balance being the estimated cost of the furnishings. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a $1,650,000 bond issue on the property.

Another word about Mr. McLellan's share in the building up of Streeterville—he erected the Castellane and Neuville apartments, better known by their numbers, 220 and 230 Walton place, both ultra high class structures; he built and owns the ten story Beaconsfield at 222 Delaware place, and is part owner of the thirteen story Shoreland at 229 Lake Shore drive; he now has under construction at 219 Lake Shore drive a thirteen story apartment.

Some Streeterville Data.

The McLellan Construction company, of which he is head, did the actual building of the foregoing, built the nine story building at 223 Delaware place, the one at 230 Delaware place, and is building the elaborate physicians' cooperative apartments at 233 Walton place. Fugard & Knapp designed all of the above, with the exception of 223 Delaware place and 233 Walton place. It also built the improvements at 196 and at 200 Delaware place and at 936 Lake Shore drive. It is building the new Lake Shore Drive hotel.

Brokers' Notes

Fred Hill of F. A. Hill & Co. is going to move his headquarters from Austin, where he has been for many years, to new offices just west of the southwest corner of South boulevard and Wisconsin avenue, Oak Park. This is just east of the old Playhouse property. He will, of course, continue his office at 5638 West Lake, but will operate it as a branch. Mr. Hill is remodeling the residence at the southwest corner of Superior and East avenue from plans by E. E. Roberts, Oak Park, and will live there.

M. James Flynn, for the last two years office and sales manager for John S. Clark, has reëstablished himself at his former location, 2414 North Cicero avenue—phone Albany 0086—and will specialize in the north Austin, Cragin, Kelvyn Park, Hansen Park, and Mont Clare districts.

A. H. Shindler & Co. announce that they have doubled their floor space at 7425 Stony Island avenue and also their sales force. They have added a renting and insurance department.

WILL BUILD ONE STORY STORES.

Samuel S. Hork has bought the 48x151 at 3428 North Clark, through Schoenlank & Rieschner, for $23,000, and will improve with three one story stores. The same brokers will manage the property.

Begin Work on Newest Gold Coast Hotel

Fugard & Knapp have designed Chicago's newest and what is claimed will be its most luxurious hostelry—the $3,000,000 Lake Shore Drive hotel. It will be "T" shaped, with the entire drive frontage used by the first floor, but with setbacks on each side giving two small roof gardens 35x60 overlooking the lake and drive. The lower part of the "T" will be seventeen stories and the top part nineteen stories. It will be of dull red brick with terra cotta trim and with the first story, of stone, designed in the Adams type of architecture. It will be finished by Jan. 1 if possible, say Messrs. Fugard & Knapp. In the above picture the Drake is shown on the west (to the right). More is told in another column.

WARNS AGAINST DRIVING CAPITAL FROM LOOP FIELD

Fair Return Due Investor, Says Expert.

Arthur C. Hall, of Hall & Ellis, managers of the Old Colony, Stewart, Orchestra hall and many other loop buildings, as well as dealers in central property, on Tuesday delivered the fifteenth lecture in the series being conducted by the Chicago Real Estate board for the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce. His subject was "The Operation and Management of Office Buildings."

A warning that unless capital has a reasonable assurance that the day of 2, 3, and 4 per cent returns on office buildings is a thing of the past, the expanding office needs of Chicago won't attract new money in as large amounts as it has heretofore, was sounded by Arthur B. Hall of Hall & Ellis in his realty lecture before the Y. M. C. A. school of commerce.

ARTHUR C. HALL.
[Wallinger Photo.]

"To furnish the office space required by the business interests of any city plays an important and necessary part in the city's development," said Mr. Hall. "To meet these enlarging office needs requires the investment of large amounts of new capital from time to time, and capital, to be attracted to this field, must have reasonable assurance that the day of 2, 3, and 4 per cent returns on office properties has passed.

On a Sound Investment Basis.

"When we stop to consider that the oldest steel frame skyscraper in the United States has been in existence less than forty years, it is easy to understand that the office building business has just been passing through its infancy. Many mistakes in the planning and construction and in the operation of completed buildings have been made on account of inexperience.

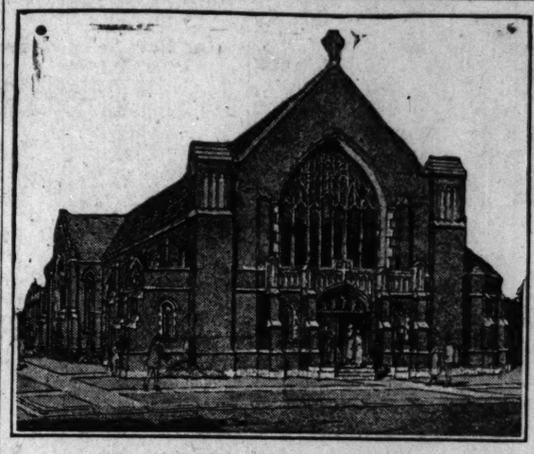
"The result is that there are numerous buildings that have proved to be very poor paying investments. It is my belief that we have now passed pretty well beyond this experimental stage and that the office building business, through better trained management, is being put on a sound investment basis."

Wages, Taxes and Coal.

The three main items in the annual expense account of an office building, Mr. Hall said, are wages, taxes and coal and they usually range in that order. These three together comprise from 70 to 75 per cent of the total annual expense. As compared with pre-war days coal has increased in price about 150 per cent, wages perhaps 120 per cent, and taxes about the same. During the same periods rents have increased approximately 100 per cent.

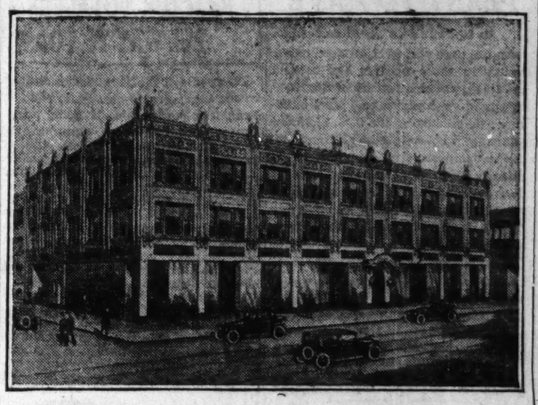
He pointed out that elevator travel is probably the safest form of locomotion known. The coroner's records in Chicago for a number of years show but one fatal accident to every 100,000,000 passengers carried in passenger elevators.

New North Shore Church



Evanston, long famous for its beautiful churches, is to have another imposing addition. The St. Paul's English Lutheran congregation is to erect a $150,000 Gothic structure at Greenwood and Maple, from plans by William C. Jones, church architect. It will be of brown tapestry brick trimmed with Bedford stone. The auditorium will seat 500. A large parish house connected with the church will contain a Sunday school, office, sacristy, check rooms, and rehreation hall seating 300, with kitchen in connection.

New Lawrence-Winthrop Building



Some time ago we heard much about a great building project involving a good percentage of both sides of Lawrence between Broadway and Sheridan. Above is a picture of the first step in the plan. The Lawrence trust, headed by W. J. Klingenberg of the Sheridan Trust and Savings and made up of Curt Teich, Victor S. Curto, Henry Saal, Milton Plotke, and others, has had plans drawn by Architect Frederick J. Teich for a three story 150x83 building for the southwest corner of Lawrence and Winthrop. It will contain ten stores, with offices on the upper floors, and will cost $150,000. Work will start June 15 for October occupancy. The new Lawrence avenue "L" station, now being built, is shown just west of the new building.

REALTORS DUE IN COLORADO SPRINGS TODAY

It's Pike's Peak or Bust for Chicagoans.

If Charles F. Durland, chairman of the national and state organization committee and general of the San Francisco realty convention forces from Chicago, is right in his figures, 223 realtors and their wives and children should be arriving in Colorado Springs, Colo., this morning. If the Santa Fé lives up to its schedule the sixteen car special will arrive there at 8 a. m. There'll be a trip up Pike's peak, a luncheon at the Cliff house, Manitou, and many other diversions during today.

The Chicago realtors' special left Chicago Friday evening after a reception in the two dining cars. Capt. J. Soule Warterfield compiled an attractive little twenty-four page booklet, giving all the names of the voyagers and much information about time and sights along the route, and distributed them before starting.

The realtors spent yesterday morning in Kansas City, where they were entertained by a delegation of Missourians, who motored them about the city and suburbs. During the afternoon and evening the boosters' committee supplied entertainment for the entire train. The realtors will arrive in Los Angeles next Friday.

Taking a movie camera to Hollywood is much like taking a cheese to Holland, but there's a machine aboard, so it was reported Friday, and several reels of views of the realtors will be taken on the way west.

It leaked out yesterday that Charles F. Durland will wield the gavel at the annual talkfest for the Chicago cup, awarded the realty board whose speaker is most eloquent in five minutes concerning the attractions of his home city. This contest is usually the big amusement feature of the national realty conventions.

$100,000 So. Water St. Building Waits on Michael

Property owners already are beginning to talk about what they'll do when the South Water street improvement is under way. Benjamin Lowenmeyer has just bought 53x150 at 219 West South Water from Frank A. Eckert for $100,000, subject to $40,000, and says he will erect a $100,000 store and office building as soon as Mike Faherty's men get busy.

Christen New Clark Street Office Building "Putnam"

After worrying considerably over what to christen the new fifteen story office building at 10 North Clark street, the idea being to give it a name suggestive of law or lawyers who are expected to fill most of the offices, the owners have decided to dub it the Putnam building. The Real Estate Management corporation has taken over the management. Richard M. Johnson, vice president and general manager, says the Putnam is 40 per cent rented and when full the total rental will be approximately $260,000. The Real Estate Management corporation is now agent for thirty-nine buildings outside the loop and seven downtown.

Y. W. C. A. Pays $32,000 for West Side Service Center

Of the $305,000 "Budget Week" fund raised by the Y. W. C. A. of Chicago during the last seven days, $32,000 will go for the purchase of the industrial service center at 432 South Peoria street. This has been used by the Y. W. C. A. since 1920 as a club and recreation center for girls employed in the factories and offices of the neighborhood. The two story building contains a cafeteria, gymnasium, clubrooms, class rooms, library, rest room, and kitchenette, and is used by an average of 7,000 girls monthly.

$300,000 BONDS ON HUMBOLDT.

Peabody, Houghteling & Co. have underwritten a $300,000 6 per cent bond issue on the Humboldt building, at the southeast corner of North and California, to be built by Soren T. Corydon and Architect John C. Christensen, from plans by Mr. Christensen.

EAST ELM STREET SALES.

Elsie H. Talbot has sold the two residences at 51-53 East Elm street, with individual lots 17x93, Alexander J. MacAvinche, advertising man, buying No. 53 for $15,000 and Mrs. J. C. Taylor No. 51 for $16,000. Mellicent Martin was broker.

'Round the Realty Boards

Richard W. Wolfe, former president of the Cook County Real Estate board and a member of the Chicago Zoning commission, will speak on "Zoning" before the members of the Cook County Real Estate board at the real estate market of Chicago next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the board rooms in the Conway building. As zoning is one of the most important improvements in Chicago's history, a large attendance is expected.

James C. Simpson, a vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will speak tomorrow at 1 o'clock at the Chicago Real Estate board luncheon on "Building Loan Associations as Conducted in Pennsylvania."

Plan Playgrounds for the Kids in New Subdivision

O. Reuter & Co. announce plans for subdividing a ninety acre tract at South Western avenue and 107th, near the Ridge Country club, which they say will be the second subdivision on Western to be opened by them within the last year. It will be known as Morgan Park Manor and will have a community park with tennis courts and recreation grounds for children, which will be deeded to the Morgan Park Manor Improvement association.

News of the Architects

We recently spoke of the American Institute of Architects in this column and it appeared in print as the American "Institution" of Architects. We wrote a "beg your pardon" for last week and our final view of it was while it was being hustled to the composing room. We never saw it again. So we're trying to get a second apology in type.

Maurice Spitzer announces that beginning last Monday, J. L. Popkin has become associated with him in the practice of architecture under the firm name of Spitzer & Popkin, with offices at 115 South Dearborn street.

Frederick J. Teich, recently announced in this department as having moved to the Garrick Theater building, reports his new phone is Central 5423.

B. Leo Steif & Co. have moved from the Stock Exchange building to the Garrick Theater building. Their suite, No. 824, is twice as large as their former quarters and much more attractive. New phone is Central 5128.

Beg Your Pardon

In reporting the sale of the 100x142 on Elston avenue, next to the southwest corner of Elston and Crawford, to Samuel H. Sternfeld, in this department on Tuesday, the broker's name was given as Charles W. Blach. This was a typographical error and should have been Charles W. Vlach.

BEVERLY HILLS TO BE SITE OF TRINITY CHURCH

New Edifice to Be on Tip of Cook County.

REV. A. T. STEPHENSON. [Melvin Sykes Photo.]

One of Chicago's most revered church names, Trinity, is going to be perpetuated in stone and steel in one of the finest religious edifices in the country, at the northwest corner of Winchester avenue and West 99th street—one of the highest points in Cook county. The plans for the new edifice, designed by Tallmadge & Watson, are made public for the first time today. The new building will house the combined Trinity Methodist Episcopal church and the Beverly Hills Methodist Episcopal church, which was absorbed on Sept. 9, 1921.

Famous old Trinity has had an interesting career, with many obstacles to overcome in its steady growth in size and influence. It was founded in 1858 and first met in a schoolhouse on Indiana, near 22d. In 1862 a lot was bought on the northeast corner of Indiana and 21st. Even with the civil war raging a building was erected. But in 1870 it was found inadequate and another site was purchased on Indiana near 24th, and the cornerstone laid in 1870. After the fire of 1871 the Wabash Avenue M. E. church, then on Harrison street, was merged with Trinity.

Flames Destroy Trinity.

In 1899 the famous Trinity edifice on Indiana was burned. Again the church moved south. The trustees in 1900 bought the Fifth Presbyterian property at Indiana and 30th and used it until the winter of 1916-'17, when St. Paul's Universalist church was purchased.

The character of the neighborhood changed so rapidly that in 1920 Trinity sold it to a colored Methodist church and was inactive for the first time in sixty-two years, but only for a short time.

Goes to Beverly Hills.

In May, 1920, Trinity voted to receive into its membership the members of the Beverly Hills Methodist Episcopal church at 99th and Prospect, and this became its next home.

Some of the prominent pastors who served Trinity were Dr. O. H. Tiffany, Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, Dr. Alabaster, Dr. Frank Bristol (now bishop), Dr. Frank Crane, and Dr. L. F. W. Lesemann. The Rev. A. Turley Stephenson is the present pastor. He is president of the Garrett Biblical Alumni association. He was previously pastor of Calvary and Olivet Methodist Episcopal churches.

Famous Old Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church to Have a New Home

Once more Trinity Methodist Episcopal church is to have a magnificent new home of its own, and the famous old congregation will soon be able to enlarge its activities to a scale commensurate with its past history. Tallmadge & Watson have designed a structure in the Gothic style, to be built at the northwest corner of Winchester avenue and 99th street on a 195x187 site bought for $10,290. The church edifice proper will seat 610 and will be used for nothing but the regular preaching services. A community house, with a low tower to carry chimes, will have an assembly hall seating 550 for Sunday school, lectures and concerts, etc. There'll be a kitchen and a social hall. On the second floor will be a gymnasium with showers, etc. The estimated cost of buildings and furnishings will be $186,000. Work will start next fall. The Rev. A. T. Stephenson is pastor.

GLEN ELLYN AT LAST BEGINS TO ACT ON ZONING

Glen Ellyn has decided it's high time to get in line with the zoned Chicago suburbs. Not that it'll get anywhere near the front of the line, for most of the north shore towns are already either thoroughly zoned or in the process of being zoned, and the same holds good of most of the suburbs west of Chicago. Even Wheaton, its neighbor and rival, has got a start on Glen Ellyn.

Anyway, the zoning movement is under way in Glen Ellyn, and Herbert S. Gilbert, president of the village board of trustees, recently appointed the following zoning commission: Chairman, Eugene C. Hall, village trustee; Jesse R. Wagner, village trustee; Robert J. Scott, village attorney; John W. Bingham, representing the Community club, and the real estate editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

J. Soule Warterfield, business manager of the Chicago Real Estate board and an authority on zoning, gave an informal talk on the subject before the zoning commission and trustees in the village hall on Tuesday evening. He pointed out the need of prompt action to safeguard property from nuisances and undesirable building projects which have invaded unzoned suburbs.

Building Permits

Ten building permits, of a total value of $102,000, were issued yesterday, among them being the following:

6253 S. Campbell-av., 2 story brick residence, D. Gricus, owner; E. F. Ruperti, arch.; P. Kasnar, mason and carp. 10,000

$325,000 CHEESE PLANT TO HAVE CURING CELLAR

An old time curing cellar for cheese, similar to those used in Switzerland and Italy, will be a feature of the $325,000 six story concrete and steel building to be erected by the J. S. Hoffman company, wholesale dealers, manufacturers, importers and exporters of cheese and packing house products, at the northeast corner of Orleans and Illinois. The site is 100x96 and was bought from William J. Mohr, trustee.

The Hoffman company, which is now at Franklin and South Water, with branch houses in Wisconsin and New York, will install special curing and drying rooms in their new plant, as well as cold storage facilities.

No architect has been engaged. J. J. Harrington & Co. represented the buyer and Frederick T. Hoyt the seller.

GOOSE ISLAND LEASE.

The Chicago Furniture Manufacturing company has leased the seven story building, with 56,000 square feet, at Blackhawk and Cherry, known as Building A of the Koestner & Hecht plant, for ten years, at a term rental of $122,500. E. A. Radtke of E. N. Duerlein & Co. was broker.

TRIBUNES TO TRAIL REALTOR VOYAGERS ALL WAY TO COAST

Every one of the 223 Chicago realtors on the Coast special headed for the San Francisco convention, is going to be kept posted on what's doing in the Gump trial, Gasoline Alley, and of course, the Chicago real estate market if any voyager wants to be reminded of business. The circulation department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has arranged to send a batch of 100 "home editions" daily and "final editions" on Sunday so as to reach the train almost every day. This can be accomplished owing to the stopovers of the realtors along the way.

The fact that "home editions"—which means the edition delivered at Chicago homes—will be obtainable practically every twenty-four hours should mean much to the Chicagoan far from home. Usually the only TRIBUNES obtainable in distant states are the mail editions.

OFFICE BUILDING FOR NORTH CLARK.

William M. Schellinger is erecting a $125,000 store, garage and office building at 2470 North Clark, from plans by Roy F. France. Joseph Jay Miller of K. R. Beak & Co. was broker in the purchase of the site.

Greene Rents Boul. Mich. Shop of Anderson Art Co.

The Anderson Art company is going to move its galleries this week from the Auditorium, where it has been for several years, to much larger quarters a block south at No. 536, in the Congress hotel, Greene's, Ltd., women's apparel, have leased the present Anderson galleries at No. 426, from the Chicago Auditorium association for ten years at a reported term rental of $165,000, through C. C. Sampson of Ross & Co. The entire store front will be remodeled from plans by Marshall & Fox.

Banker Buys 5 Acres in Glencoe; Plans Residence

What William F. Whitman says is one of the most beautiful tracts on the north shore, the five acres in Glencoe south of Maple Hill road, with 600 feet frontage on the lake bluff, has been sold by him to Edward Eagle Brown, attorney, with the legal department of the First National bank, for an indicated $58,000. It is understood Mr. Brown will build a residence on his new property. There are more than a thousand large trees and two ravines run through the tract.

NEW EVANSTON CAR LINE RUMOR BOBS UP AGAIN

What is considered by those who know to be the first step towards Evanston's long talked of Asbury avenue car line was taken when Fred W. Brummel bought from William Waller Jr. a strip fronting north 565 feet on Howard street, 144 feet deep, just west of Ridge. Mr. Brummel says Howard street between the Ridge and Western will be opened up.

Frank H. McCulloch, attorney for the Evanston street railway system, some time ago bought a strip forty-three feet wide and 565 feet long on the north side of Howard street, extended, from Mr. Waller, which will be dedicated to the city of Evanston. The proposed car line would go west from the present terminus at Howard and Malvern to Asbury and then north to Main street and probably farther, though the exact route has not yet been announced. Chicago street cars now go as far north on Western avenue as Asbury and Howard.

Mr. Brummel intends buying more property south of his yesterday's purchase and subdividing it all.

Coincident with this deal, T. W. Wysacker & Co. announce selling the northeast corner of Howard and Western for Rose Grey Wysacker to Korbakes Brothers, Milwaukee avenue confectioners, lot 100x100, for a reported $30,000 cash. T. W. Wysacker says there is considerable activity in this section, due to the widening of Western, paving of Howard, and the car line rumor.

Architect Z. Erol Smith says work will start this week on the long talked of Hotel Regent, the $3,000,000 structure to be built at the southwest corner of Chestnut and De Witt, in Streeterville, by a syndicate of which Robert A. Grant is head. The sale of the site, 235x107, by Edward M. Bertha to Mr. Grant, was filed for record yesterday. The indicated price was $140,000, subject to $35,000.
